The Breaking Point of Love

Chapter 890

After leaving the house, Celeste suddenly remembered something. She rubbed her temples, took out her phone, and sent Trevor a message. "We'll have to postpone the divorce for a while."

It was nearly half an hour before Trevor replied. "Understood. Let me know when you're available."

Celeste replied, "Okay."

...

What was happening between Wynn and Trevor had a direct effect on both the Lockets and Shaws. That evening, Patricia finally couldn't hold back any longer. "Wynn, why don't you try contacting Trevor again?"

Wynn lowered her eyes. "I know. I'll try again later."

Patricia smiled and patted her hand. Then, as though remembering something, she added, "If you still can't reach him, go to the Fleming Group again tomorrow and see if you can meet him. You know our family's situation can't wait any longer. Trevor's attitude is crucial."

"I understand."

After that, Wynn went upstairs and called Trevor.

No answer. She sent him a message, but there was no reply either.

Her grip on the phone tightened as the uneasiness in her heart grew.

Just as the others in the family suspected, she knew perfectly well that no matter how busy Trevor was, he should still have time to return her calls or reply to her messages. Yet he continued to ignore every attempt she made to reach him.

What exactly did he mean by this?

She had been asking herself that question ever since shortly after Philip's anniversary dinner.

At first, she could still comfort herself with the excuse that Trevor was merely keeping his distance to avoid misunderstandings. But so much time had passed, and he still hadn't responded in any way.

Was his continued silence his way of telling her to end their relationship?

She wasn't the only one who had considered that possibility. The other members of the Lockets and Shaws had thought of it too.

Of course, that was the last thing they wanted.

What happened between Wynn and Trevor was indeed crucial to both families.

So, the following morning, during breakfast, Patricia couldn't help asking again. "Wynn, were you still unable to reach Trevor last night?"

Wynn hummed and lowered her head as she took a bite of breakfast before adding, "I'll go to the Fleming Group later."

Patricia smiled. "Alright, then."

Since Patricia had already brought it up, the others didn't press Wynn any further about Trevor.

Wynn had little appetite. After eating a little, she headed to the Fleming Group, However, when she arrived, she was once again told that she needed an appointment to go upstairs.

Wynn called Trevor again. Still, she couldn't get through. She then contacted Jacob.

"I have something extremely important to discuss with Trevor. Could you please help me arrange a meeting with him? Just this once. Please?"

Hearing Wynn's plea, Jacob felt a little reluctant to turn her down. Even so, he replied, "I'm sorry."

Jacob then ended the call.

Wynn pressed her lips together and didn't call Jacob again.

Over the next two days, she continued calling Trevor every day, but received no response. She went to the Fleming Group as well only to find that she stl couldn't see him

With Trevor deliberately avoiding her, the Lockets and Shaws naturally grew anxious.

However, they later found out that the group chat shared by Wynn, Trevor, Beck, and Miles was still there. Trevor still had Wynn's contact saved on his phone and both Miles and Beck continued treating her as they always had.

Although the Lockets and Shaws were worried, they hadn't reached the point of complete panic. They still couldn't meet Trevor, but life had to go on.

Someone organised a dinner gathering, and both Wynn and Harvey attended.

When they arrived, Wynn entered the private dining room, only to discover that Conrad was there too.