Capítulo 1003: Chapter 1003: Reunion

Tomorrow she happens to have a day off. She will go over tonight, it's a bit rushed, but if everything goes well, she'll be back in Emperor Capital by the next morning.

...

Zoey Sanders didn't know how long she had been walking. This place was desolate, surrounded by forests, and she could only find a place to shield herself from the wind and rain to rest for a while.

She had missed three meals, with her stomach growling incessantly, the feeling of hunger and fatigue kept coming upon her.

Zoey Sanders touched her stomach, she had never felt this miserable before.

She also realized the severity of her situation at this moment. If she couldn't find her way out or find someone, she might end up being a meal for the wild beasts here!

A rumbling sound of thunder rang out.

At the sound of thunder, Zoey Sanders' frail body trembled slightly, and she couldn't help but let out a bitter laugh.

"Oh heavens, do you dare to make me any more miserable?"

As soon as she finished speaking, raindrops the size of beans began to fall, perfectly matching the occasion.

Zoey Sanders lightly tugged at the corner of her lips, "You really do dare."

The rain poured down harder and harder, and the place Zoey had chosen for shelter soon allowed rainwater to seep in, dropping one by one on her head.

Zoey Sanders felt her head spinning with dizziness, her eyes constantly twitching, but the cold raindrops hitting her kept her awake.

No one knew how long the rain lasted, and only when the rain gradually lessened, did Zoey finally succumb to her body's exhaustion and closed her eyes, falling into a deep sleep.

She had a dream, where many images flashed by like a revolving lantern, and finally, two figures in black and white appeared in front of her eyes, taking her away...

Hope Williams had been on a plane for several hours, arriving by the next morning.

Though Waylon Lewis originally meant to accompany her, Hope thought of the three children at home, feeling that it wouldn't do for both of them to be away, so she insisted that Waylon stay behind.

Hope had slept throughout on the private jet, so despite traveling all night, she wasn't too tired.

Hope walked over, and the guards didn't stop her; instead, they looked at her with an expression of pleasant surprise.

"Sister Hope, you're back?"

Hope smiled gently, "A little girl from home ran off here a few days ago, and I'm here today to bring her back."

The person sent to greet Hope approached, "Sister Hope, the Big Boss sent me to pick you up."

Hope, "Alright, is he back yet?"

"Not yet, but knowing you're coming, the Big Boss is already on his way back."

Hope lightly nodded, "Okay."

Soon, Hope arrived at the manor.

It had been quite a while since she last returned here, and the place was as quiet and deserted as ever...

Hope gently pressed her lips together and stepped inside.

Felix Shaw came out, seeing Hope still beautiful and charming in her light blue dress, the smile on his face deepened.

“Sister Hope, the Big Boss sent word that you would be coming; I didn’t believe it at first, but here you are.”

Hope carried a gentle smile, nodding, “Long time no see, Felix.”

Felix gave Hope a gentle hug, “It has been a long time. You promised you’d come back often when you left, and look how long it’s been.”

Hope gently patted Felix’s back, acknowledging with a hint of regret, “My fault.”

“But I heard you’re living happily, and we’re all glad to know it.”

“Thank you. Since I rarely come by, I brought some small gifts for you all, they’re in the car’s trunk. Share them around later. I hope you’ll like them.”

“We like them, we like them. Whatever Sister Hope brings us, we like it. On behalf of everyone, thank you, Sister Hope.”

“Oh, don’t mention it.” Hope walked inside with Felix and asked, “Where’s Zoey? How’s she doing? Is her fever better?”

“The fever has subsided. The doctor said it was a cold from being chilled, which caused the fever. It was quite severe yesterday. It’s odd, with the weather warming up, how did she catch a cold from the cold?” Felix shrugged, looking somewhat helpless.

“Sister Hope, I know she’s your friend, but I’m not sure if it’s appropriate to say some things.”

Hope said, “Go ahead.”

“It’s just that I don’t like her. She’s the first person I’ve seen so clingy. The Big Boss asked her to leave, but she refused, even acting as if she’s the lady of the house. Frankly, her demeanor makes her difficult to like.”

Hope furrowed her brow at these words, feeling that the person being described didn’t match Zoey Sanders at all.

Zoey’s behavior and style were the complete opposite of what was being portrayed.

“Are you sure you mean Zoey Sanders?”

“I’m sure, Brother Ruiz and my sister instructed to bring her in, there’s no mistake.”

“Where is she now?”

“Upstairs, do you need me to call her down?”

“No, I’ll go up myself.”

Just as Hope was about to go upstairs, Liam Cloud’s voice sounded from behind, “Hope Williams.”

Hope turned back, seeing Liam Cloud with his silver hair and a lazy smile on his handsome face, “Tsk, aren’t you excited to see me?”

Hope raised an eyebrow with a smile, “It’s not like it’s been years since we last met, what’s there to be excited about.”

“Even if it were years, I doubt you’d be excited to see me.” Liam Cloud raised an eyebrow, “Have you had breakfast yet?”

“Not yet.”

Liam Cloud glanced at the nearby servant.

The servant immediately said, “Breakfast is already prepared.”

“Alright, have some breakfast first, so you don’t lose a few pounds when you get back. That guy of yours might think I’m starving you.”

Hope looked upstairs, “I want to go up and see Zoey first.”

Liam Cloud’s brow wrinkled slightly, as if just remembering the person upstairs, looked at Felix, “Has her fever gone down?”

“Yes, it has.”

“Then call her down to have breakfast with us.”
