Starting with A Divorce Chapter 21-Kaitlin Looks for Trouble

Frowning. Ainsley wanted to ignore her.

However, Kaitlin did not want to let her go. She quickly walked up to Ainsley and blocked her way.

“Are you deaf? I was asking you why you are here. Is University of Washington a place you can enter as you please?”

Kaitlin was used to looking down on Ainsley. Kaitlin behaved like that even before Cason and Ainsley divorced.

However, currently, Ainsley was no longer willing to speak to her like before.

“Get out of the way,” Ainsley said in a cold voice as she tidied up her bag.

Kaitlin’s face changed. She didn’t expect Ainsley not to save her face. After all, Ainsley always agreed to anything that Kaitlin asked of her in the past.

“Ainsley, how dare you! Don’t think that just because you divorced my brother, you will be strong. University of Washington is a key university. You’re uneducated and divorced. Do you think you can enter a key university like University of Washington? **** off. Don’t disgrace University of Washington.”

Kaitlin’s words were quite harsh.

Ainsley lowered her eyes. In the past, Kaitlin and her mother even said harsher words to Ainsley. It seemed that Kaitlin had not sobered up after the previous incident and thought that Ainsley was still a pushover.

Ainsley looked up at Kaitlin and said in a cold voice, “Kaitlin, University of Washington has always valued virtues. A student like you is truly a disgrace to University of Washington.”

“What did you say?” Kaitlin was stunned and then became angry. She pointed at Ainsley’s nose. “You slut, how dare you teach me a lesson? Don’t you know you're undereducated? You have nothing to do with University of Washington."

Ainsley was a bit annoyed by Kaitlin. Ainsley took out her work certificate from her bag and waved it in front of Kaitlin. "Take a good look. I am working at University of Washington."

Kaitlin did not see the position on Ainsley's work certificate. Kaitlin was shocked. Meanwhile, she suddenly thought of something and sneered. "You're under-educated. Are you a cleaner at University of Washington? Ainsley, you can't live without my brother, right? You even do this kind of job. Well, if you didn't marry my brother, you might have been a cleaner."

At first, Ainsley did not care about Kaitlin showing off before her. Ainsley looked at the time. It was almost eight o'clock. On the first day of work, Ainsley did not want to be late.

Ainsley became impatient and said in a cold voice, "Kaitlin, your brother and I have divorced. You don't have to show off before me. So, stop pestering me. You might as well curry favor with your new sister-in-law."

"You!" Kaitlin was annoyed by Ainsley.

How could Kaitlin not realize that Ainsley was so eloquent in the past?

Kaitlin thought, humph, she indeed pretended to be a good wife at home.

"Just wait!" Kaitlin stomped her feet in anger. "I will definitely get my brother to have someorie fire. you. You'll pay for offending me."

Starting with A Divorce Chapter 22-Serina Lends a Hand

Kaitlin thought it would be simple to fire Ainsley, a cleaner.

"What will happen to Ainsley if she offends you?"

When Ainsley and Kaitlin were arguing, some students stopped to watch. A clear female voice suddenly came from them.

Serina pushed her way in from the crowd. When she found Kaitlin arguing with Ainsley, Serina could not help but frown.

Although the Baldry family wasn't that wealthy, they were a little influential in Seattle. As a Baldry, Kaitlin always played the bully in school. But Kaitlin behaved herself before Serina in the past, so Serina didn't bother to deal with her. At that moment, however, Kaitlin had actually offended Ainsley.

Ainsley troubled by Kaitlin, Serina stood up without any hesitation.

Kaitlin was clearly stunned when she saw Serina.

Kaitlin wondered why Serina knew Ainsley.

Serina was the apple of the Gage family's eye. Kaitlin had always wanted to make friends with Serina at University of Washington, but Serina had never paid much attention to her. Serina was said to be very quiet and did not like to make friends. How did Ainsley get to know Serina?

"Good for you, Ainsley. You're really good at currying favor with the powerful." Kaitlin did not dare to offend Serina and continued to mock Ainsley.

Serina furrowed her brow. Before Ainsley could speak, Serina stood in front of Ainsley, blocking Kaitlin from looking at Ainsley. "Explain it, Kaitlin. Why did you say Ainsley flatter the powerful?"

Kaitlin found that Serina was clearly protecting Ainsley, and Kaitlin's expression changed. In the end, Kaitlin still put on a flattery smile.

"Serina, be careful. Don't be deceived by this scheming woman. Back then, my brother did not like her, but she played a trick and married into my family. Fortunately, my brother is clear-headed. For the sake of his true love, he has never touched this woman. Now his true love has returned, and this woman has been kicked out."

As Kaitlin said this, she seemed to have understood something and showed some disdain.

“She’s divorced, and there’s nothing she can do about it. That’s why she’s now on your side. If I’m not wrong, Serina, it’s you who helped her get the job at University of Washington, right?”

“Shut up! Kaitlin, don’t look down on everyone.”

Serina was a bit angry. She could not bear to see her beloved Ainsley being so belittled. Serina continued to argue back.

“First of all, Ainsley got the job at University of Washington by herself. Second, your brother even married Ainsley when he had true love. When his true love came back, he dumped Ainsley. He’s simply a **/*.”

Ainsley looked at Serina who stood in front of her and protected her. Ainsley was a little touched.

After all, she had only met Serina once. Ainsley didn’t expect that Serina would protect her like this.

However, even Serina could see that Cason was ****. Back then, Cason said to Ainsley that “She’s gone. If you want, I can marry you”. How could Ainsley marry him just because of this?

Starting with A Divorce Chapter 23-What Does She Do?

Kaitlin never thought that Serina would protect Ainsley like this. Kaitlin’s face turned pale, and she glared at Ainsley, “You do have the means.”

Ainsley narrowed her eyes. "Kaitlin, I was a fool when I fell in love with your brother back then, but at that time, I knew why he would marry me. If you want to throw mud at me, don't go too far."

Back then, when Cason married Ainsley, Kaitlin and her mother supported him.

Firstly, Cason's grandfather truly liked Ainsley. Secondly, Kaitlin and her mother felt that Kaliyah would be stimulated and return home if Cason and Ainsley married.

Upon Ainsley's reminder, Kaitlin seemed to have recalled the truth of Cason and Ainsley's marriage. Kaitlin's face turned gloomier.

Kaitlin pointed at Ainsley and cursed, "I threw mud at you? Ainsley, since you are so lofty, why don't you return my family's property? Shame on you. You even wanted to fish up a sum of money from my family before leaving. Don't you see if you are worth it?"

"For the record, your brother wasted three years of my youth and asked me to serve you and your mother. We divorced when his first love came back. It's good enough that I didn't sue your brother for cheating me into marriage. Your family still wants me to leave with nothing?" Ainsley's voice was cold.

Kaitlin was shocked. She wondered, is this still the lowly Ainsley who loves her brother?

Why was her voice so cold when she mentioned my brother?

In the past, he was Ainsley's weakness!

Ainsley looked at the time and no longer glanced at Kaitlin. Kaitlin patted Serina on the shoulder.

"Let's go. It's time for you to go to class."

Serina smiled and reached out to grab Ainsley's arm, saying, "Alright, let's go, Ainsley."

Serina tacitly did not mention the incident between Ainsley and the Baldry family.

Kaitlin's face was extremely gloomy. She stared after them as they left and clenched her fists.

Kaitlin thought, how dare Ainsley?

Does she think that I dare not do anything to her just because she curries favor with Serina?

Just wait!

Ainsley was carried by Serina into the campus and inadvertently sized up her along the way.

Last night, Ainsley promised that Serina could often come to her, and it was a little perfunctory. Now, Ainsley indeed wanted to treat Serina well.

However, Ainsley could not tell that this lively girl had psychological disorders.

They stopped at the teaching building.

Serina waved at her. "Ainsley, I'm going to class. Can I have lunch with you if you're free?"

Serina was warm and friendly. Ainsley did not refuse and nodded. "OK, I will wait for you at the east gate of the canteen. It will be closer to the teaching building."

Serina turned around and waved at Ainsley as she walked. "Okay. By the way, Ainsley, you can call me Serina."

Ainsley also waved at her. "Goodbye, Serina."

No matter how unruly Kaitlin was, as a Baldry, she had quite a few sidekicks in the school.

On the way here, Kaitlin met one of them who kept following her. They walked to the teaching building and saw Ainsley and Serina say goodbye.

Ainsley turned around and also saw Kaitlin. Ainsley remained calm and directly walked past her to the Psychological Counseling Room.

Kaitlin looked at her sidekick. "Do you know what that woman does in our school?"

The sidekick did not know what had happened at the school gate. Staring after Ainsley, she praised, "She is the new teacher from the Psychological Counseling Room. She's very young and gorgeous. She showed up once at the club. The boys in our school have been talking about her for the past few days..."

The follower of Kaitlin did not finish her sentence, for she noticed that Kaitlin's face had grown extremely gloomy. So she quickly changed her tune. "Well, I think that she has ordinary looking. At a glance, I can tell she has had a nose job and double eyelid surgery. She cannot compare to you at all, Kaitlin."

Kaitlin knew very well whether Ainsley had plastic surgery or not. However, it was no doubt that the follower's words pleased her, and she looked much better.

But she did not ignore the words "The beautiful new teacher in the Psychological Counseling Room."

Kaitlin wondered, the Psychological Counseling Room? Beautiful teacher? Is she worthy?

Kaitlin smiled and hooked her finger at her follower. "Jenny, do me a favor. If you can make it, my Chanel bag, which my brother gave me last month, will be yours."

Starting with A Divorce Chapter 24-Do You Hear Anything About the Forum?

The next day.

A post popped up on the school forum. The large bold text was brightly placed on the front page.

"Some beautiful new psychology teacher was only a high school graduate. Please let her get out of our school,"

The beautiful new psychology teacher... People could easily think of Ainsley just by the headline.

In addition, Ainsley had just joined the school and attracted the attention of many people. It happened to be such shocking news, so everyone clicked the link to check it out.

The owner of the post used an alternate account on the forum, but what was posted was enough to shock everyone!

“The beautiful new psychology teacher did not even graduate from college, but she came to be a teacher at the university. What methods did she use to get an intern job?”

It was attached to a list of graduates from the school’s official website, as well as Ainsley’s entrance year.

According to the list, after Ainsley entered the school, there were no records of her graduation, which meant that she had not completed her studies in college. Hence, she could not be considered an undergraduate but just held a high school diploma.

“Based on the records, it can be seen that our beautiful teacher, Ainsley, has not graduated, but she has become our psychological teacher. I do not remember any precedent for special employment at our school, so I am afraid that Ainsley probably joined our school through some improper means!”

With the evidence and inferences that came out, the forum was in an uproar.

The students, who originally had a good impression of Ainsley, started to talk about it.

“Is this news real or fake? It’s hard to believe that the beautiful teacher is merely a high school graduate.”

“Here is the reply to the above net pal. Yes, it’s true. I particularly looked into the official website, and I didn’t find any information about her graduation.”

“In other words, she, a high school graduate, came to be a psychology teacher at our university? Is the school management crazy?”

“I’m afraid the school didn’t want to but couldn’t resist her methods. I wonder whether she got the job by her face or her body...”

“It’s so disgusting! What a sucked beautiful teacher she is!”

Ainsley already had a lot to talk about. In addition to such shocking news exposed, it caused the students to become angry. For a time, the posts piled up more and more, and it was uproar in the school.

Countless people were guessing how Ainsley joined the school and became the psychological teacher.

At the same time.

In the Psychological Counseling Room.

Ainsley was busy sorting out the previous materials and students' information. It was hot and stuffy, so the door was open.

From time to time, some students pretended to pass by the Psychological Counseling Room inadvertently. Some even stuck their heads out to the office, occasionally whispering.

Ainsley noticed this and wondered. She raised her eyebrows but said nothing. She continued to bury herself in her work.

Ainsley did not leave her office until lunchtime. She and Serina had an appointment to have lunch.

together in the canteen.

When Ainsley arrived, Serina was holding her phone and trotting over to her in a panic. She whispered, "Ainsley, do you hear anything about the forum?"

Starting with A Divorce Chapter 25-Slander Against Ainsley

"What Forum?"

Ainsley was stunned and shook her head.

Serina turned on her phone and clicked on the viral post and showed it to Ainsley.

"This one. Someone broke the news, saying that you only have a high school diploma and that you become a psychology teacher at this university by using some improper means."

Serina nibbled her lips and looked at Ainsley worriedly. Ainsley took a look at the post and then thought of those tentative gazes at the door of her office today. She suddenly realized what was going on.

Seeing that Ainsley did not respond, Serina, who was at the side, said in a little uneasy and anxious voice.

“Ainsley, many people have browsed this post, and everyone... speaks ill. If this continues, you will have a hard time at school...”

The more Serina said, the lower her voice became. However, Ainsley just smiled and gently comforted Serina, “Don’t worry. I will be fine. It’s just a post, not a big deal. Now, eating is the most important thing to do.”

This post was most probably related to Kaitlin, but Ainsley did not take it seriously. She had been through many difficulties. This sort of harm was not worth mentioning.

Ainsley lowered her eyes slightly and had a smile on her face, appearing even more gentle and calm. It was as if the vicious comments on the forum could not harm her in the slightest.

Out of the blue, Serina was thus appeased when she looked at Ainsley.

Serina revealed her smile again. She went to the canteen with Ainsley, waiting in line for food.

As soon as they entered the canteen, they attracted the attention of many people.

Serina was the daughter of the Gage family, and Ainsley was a beautiful teacher, who had met many matters ever since she joined the school, as well as went viral because of the post on the forum.

“Look, Aren’t they Ainsley and Serina? Why are they together?”

“Yeah. Why do they have lunch in the canteen together?”

“Why does Serina have contact with Ainsley...”

As everyone was talking, they suddenly remembered that post on the forum and guessed, "Could it be that Ainsley joined the school as a teacher because of Serina? It was Serina who brought.

Ainsley in. What do you think?"

"Come on, Ainsley claimed that she joined the school on her own. What does it have to do with Serina, the daughter of the Gage family? In my opinion, Ainsley is just trying to curry favor with Serina because of her great family background."

"That's right. She admitted that she relied on herself to become a teacher here. However, it's hard to say what she relied on herself..."

The meaningful words immediately let their imagination run wild.

"Hehe, what else can she rely on other than her body and her appearance... Anyway, these are hers, so she's right at some point."

"You are right. After all, she is a beautiful teacher. It doesn't matter whether she is a teacher or not.

It's enough to be beautiful..."

All kinds of dirty guesses gradually sounded. Serina listened to everyone's discussions and glanced at Ainsley who was eating quietly. She felt more and more injustice for Ainsley.

"Have you said enough? Ainsley is not like what you think!"

Serina stood up and angrily swept her gaze at everyone in front of her.

Serina's voice was not loud. However, everyone stopped talking and instantly quieted down. They looked at each other in dismay and then looked at Ainsley and Serina hesitantly.

It was a long time before someone spoke. He secretly cast a glance at Ainsley and then advised Serina.

"Serina, don't be deceived by her. She can be a psychology teacher here with a high school diploma. I'm afraid she is very scheming."

"That's right. A woman like her looks harmless, but who knows what means she used to get the job? Maybe she climbed on a man's bed."

"Yeah. Serina, we are not targeting you, but we just hate to see such a woman who is not worthy of being a teacher..."

"No, it's not like that. Ainsley is..." The more Serina listened, the angrier she became. She was about to explain.

Just then, a woman's mocking voice was heard from the crowd.

"Serina, Ainsley has done such a shameful thing with such a bad reputation. Why are you still hanging out with her..."

Starting with A Divorce Chapter 26-The Legendary Senior Schoolmate

Serina turned her head and saw Kaitlin pretending to be shocked as she looked at Serina.

"According to the posts on the school forum, Ainsley only has a high school diploma, which is even lower than ours. She used some improper methods to become our psychological teacher. We're all ashamed to be with such people!"

Kaitlin glanced at Ainsley and said with an arrogant expression.

Serina was so angry that she was about to argue with Kaitlin. Ainsley, who had been quietly eating at the side, frowned, stood up to pull Serina behind her, and went up to Kaitlin.

Ainsley calmly stared at Kaitlin and asked, "You did this on the forum, didn't you?"

"So what if I did it?" Being exposed in front of everyone, Kaitlin did not feel any remorse. Instead, she became even more triumphant. "Can you deny what I said is not the truth?"

Kaitlin did not care if Serina knew who did it. Ainsley had indeed not graduated from university, so she only had a high school diploma. Kaitlin felt nothing to be afraid of because she had just told the truth.

Ainsley's gaze rested on Kaitlin. "That post is very popular. You might not know, those who fabricate facts, slander against others, will be put in prison for crimes if the circumstances are severe..."

Ainsley's voice was with a faint chill. Everyone could not help but look at them back and forth. The atmosphere suddenly became tense.

"Slander?" Kaitlin tittered with contempt. "Why don't you specify which one is slander, graduating from high school or using improper means? Did you rely on your capability to become our psychological teacher?"

How could someone who graduated from high school be a psychological teacher at university?

It was true that Ainsley had not officially graduated from school.

Everyone did not believe that Ainsley could bring out any evidence to fight Kaitlin back.

However, Ainsley's resolute voice sounded, "Yes."

Everyone was astonished immediately.

Kaitlin frowned and was stunned. "What did you say?"

"I said, I became a psychological teacher here through proper means."

Ainsley looked at Kaitlin indifferently and said in a calm tone, "You are right. I have not graduated from here, and I cannot be considered a university graduate..."

"Then how could you become a teacher here?" Kaitlin questioned through her teeth.

"Because..." Ainsley looked at Kaitlin and said slowly, "Exactly speaking, I'm still in the suspension of schooling."

In the suspension of schooling?

Everyone was shocked. According to the time, Ainsley should have graduated long ago.

And based on the school rules, no one could quit school for so long....

Once a student exceeded the graduation year limit, he or she will be expelled from the school.

“Back then, I could not continue to study and graduate on time because of some reasons. The school had specially made an exception for me and gave me an indefinite suspension certificate. Until now, my school status is still kept in the school... This time, I returned to the school, part of the reason was for my internship, and the other part was to complete the rest of my studies.”

Ainsley’s expression was calm, and everyone was dubious.

Kaitlin, however, turned her head and sneered, “Ainsley, you’d better make it up reasonably.

Everyone knows that the school will never make an exception for anyone. You have quit school for a few years. Do you think that you are the owner of the school...”

Before Kaitlin finished speaking, someone in the crowd exclaimed, “Ah! I know who Ms. Easton is!

No wonder I always feel that she looks so familiar!”

Everyone was attracted by the voice, and they saw a round-faced girl looking at Ainsley with excitement and admiration.

“Ms. Easton, you’re the mysterious legend of the Department of Psychology, who entered our school with nearly full marks, finished all the three-year major courses in one year with all full marks, and began to treat thousands of psychological patients in your second year at university, aren’t you?

“As far as I know, the legendary senior has not graduated, and all the professors in the Department of Psychology have been waiting for her return. I saw a photo of you and the professor at the professor’s office before. To my surprise, you really come back!”

Starting with A Divorce Chapter 27-The Evidence

The girl's eyes lit up. She was excited.

Ainsley couldn't help but smile, "It's me. I didn't expect that the professors would wait for me to come back and graduate."

Her words stirred the crowd.

Especially the students of the Department of Psychology.

The entire department knew that there was a legendary student who was not only a straight-A student but was also unprecedentedly outstanding in practice. She was called a rare genius in the Psychology Department.

When the legendary student was about to quit school for some private reasons and said she wouldn't come back, all the professors, including the dean, unanimously asked the school to allow her to take some time off.

They didn't set a time limit for her break.

All the professors in the Department of Psychology seemed to tell her that they were willing to wait for her to come back.

When Ainsley recalled the past, she felt warm and touched.

The people started to gossip with excitement.

"So it's her. My goodness. I was fortunate enough to read her thesis. It was a masterpiece."

"If Ms. Easton is the legendary student, she's qualified to be a professional psychologist, let alone a mere university psychology teacher. Her talent and experience are outstanding. I heard that she worked with the police and cracked many cases."

"Wow, I put her on a pedestal. I admire her, and now she's my teacher. Since the professor showed us her paper, I've been hoping to see her in person. I didn't know it was Ms. Easton..."

Seeing that Ainsley was getting an upper hand and everyone was looking at Ainsley with admiration, Kaitlin got angry and glared at the round-faced girl resentfully.

“Do you think she’s the legendary student? You’re blind. You have no evidence at all. You’re trying to help Ainsley to pass for the legendary student.”

Kaitlin didn’t believe that Ainsley was the legendary student. She didn’t think highly of Ainsley.

If Ainsley had been so intelligent, she couldn’t have been so compliant with the Baldry family for years.

The round-faced girl blushed and said indignantly, “Nonsense. I’m not lying. Ms. Easton is the legendary student.”

“Really?” Kaitlin said disapprovingly. “Show me the evidence.”

Ainsley did not say anything and glanced at Kaitlin.

It was not that she could not prove it, but she shouldn’t bother the teachers for such a ***woman as Kaitlin.

Kaitlin thought Ainsley didn’t have the evidence, so she said with a smirk, “What, can’t you prove it? You’re an impostor and try to bluff it out...”

“Who says she can’t prove it?”

Everyone heard a dignified and ***voice from behind. They looked back and saw a refined middle-aged man fixing his eyes on Ainsley.

“Oh my goodness! There he is.”

Someone gasped in the crowd.

The middle-aged man was Jack Miller, the deputy dean of the Psychological Department. He was worshipped by the students of the department because of his great personal charisma.

Jack went up to Ainsley and said with gratification, “You’re finally back. It’s been a long time.”

“Mr. Miller,” Ainsley called out softly.

Looking at the teacher she respected in the past, Ainsley could not help but feel rueful.

It was stupid of her to miss out on so many things for a marriage that was not worth it.

If she had not married into the Baldry family and wasted time on a man, things would have been much different for her.

Starting with A Divorce Chapter 28-Go Home Together

As if sensing her emotions, Jack gently patted Ainsley on the shoulder. "It's good that you're back. It's good that you're back."

Ainsley looked up and met Jack's encouraging gaze, her nose stinging.

Jack withdrew his hand and looked at the excited crowd and Kaitlin, who was shocked.

He explained with a smile, "Ainsley is indeed my student. The Psychology Department allowed her to take an unlimited break because we didn't want to give up such a talent. When Ainsley was at school, she won all the credits within the shortest time and obtained hands-on experience by working with the police, the asylum, and the counseling center. She was only a step away from graduation. Such a genius in psychology is naturally qualified to be a psychological teacher."

There was undisguised pride and recognition for Ainsley in his tone.

Everyone was curious about Ainsley and admired her.

Following that, Jack turned solemn and looked at Kaitlin.

He said sternly, "I heard that someone was slinging mud at the teachers on the forum recently. As students, you should focus on learning instead of getting jealous and venting your anger. The university will punish those who make mistakes according to the rules. I hope everyone will learn a lesson from it."

Following that, Jack gave Ainsley a comforting look and turned to leave.

Everyone's gazes fell on Kaitlin. Just now in the cafeteria, Kaitlin had admitted that she was the one who made the post on the forum.

Apparently, Jack said those words to Kaitlin, who was the cause of all this.

Kaitlin had never imagined that Ainsley was the legendary student of the Psychology Department!

Sensing everyone's gazes, Kaitlin blushed. Thinking of what Jack had said, she was frightened. She fled from the crowd.

After the farce ended, many people gathered around Ainsley and excitedly asked her questions. Ainsley smiled and did not say much. She left with Serina.

Serina held Ainsley's arm and smiled brightly, her eyes glinting.

"Ainsley, you are awesome. It turns out that you are the legend of our school. Even the deputy dean supported you and beat Kaitlin like a drowning dog..."

"Don't talk nonsense. Jack is not this kind of person." Ainsley helplessly corrected her. "I'm not that good. The professors are tolerant toward me."

Ainsley couldn't help but sigh.

Although the professors knew she had given up her dream because of love, they were willing to invite her back to university. That was why an upright teacher like Jack was willing to protect her and stand up for her.

Serina stopped and looked into Ainsley's eyes, whispering earnestly, "Ainsley, that's because you're very good. We all like you and are willing to tolerate you."

Ainsley paused when she met Serina's clear eyes. She smiled gently.

After getting out of the cafeteria, Ainsley returned to the psychological counseling center.

After a short time, the university announced punishment for Kaitlin and her follower.

The posts on the forum had also been deleted.

A new post was made in the section of the Department of Psychology. It was filled with admiration toward the legendary student, and the name was replaced with Ms. Easton.

At four o'clock in the afternoon.

When Serina finished her lessons, Ainsley almost finished her work. Serina came over to wait for Ainsley to go home together.

Ainsley did not want to keep Serina waiting, so she tidied up and left with Serina. Serina leaned close to her and whispered, blinking. "Ainsley, my brother said he would come to pick go for dinner together."

Manuel?

Starting with A Divorce Chapter 29-She Is Secretly Photographed

Ainsley paused.

When Ainsley thought of Manuel's gentle but domineering face, her heart beat faster.

She bit her lips and was about to refuse when she saw Serina waving happily to somewhere not far away. "Manuel!" Serina called out.

Ainsley raised her head and saw a man walk out of the car. His neat handmade suit made him look a bit more spirited, but his eyes were still unfathomable as ever.

Ainsley felt somehow creepy and she walked toward the man under his overwhelming gaze.

"Mr. Gage, what a coincidence."

Manuel suddenly looked up at Ainsley and smiled, "I don't think so."

Right then, Kaitlin walked out of the school office with gritted teeth, clenching tight her punishment order in her hands.

Her fingers quickly swiped on the screen, skimming through the confession posts on the forum, and she felt even more irritated and unwilling.

Kaitlin couldn't believe that Ainsley was actually that Psychology Department girl.

Ainsley had never ever mentioned it to them!

Thinking about how Ainsley had hidden this huge secret for years in front of the Baldry family, Kaitlin was even more certain that Ainsley had done it on purpose!

Kaitlin thought, ever since this ***married my brother, she has been going against the Baldry family. She occupies our house, and now I'm punished by the school because of her!

She used to be obedient to us, but now she has become a completely different person!

No!

I must tell my brother what Ainsley has done to me!

Kaitlin was walking in ager, but her attention was soon drawn by Manuel and Ainsley, who were not far away.

She widened her eyes in disbelief and immediately became furious.

That ***Ainsley... She actually finds a new man so quickly! Kaitlin thought.

Ainsley and the others were a bit far away from Kaitlin, so Kaitlin couldn't see clearly the face of the man with Ainsley. She could only vaguely see that it was a fit man.

But somehow, Kaitlin found that man a bit familiar.

Kaitlin did not think too much about it. She quickly took out her phone, aimed the lens toward Ainsley, and took many photos in a row. Only then did she put away the phone in satisfaction.

She thought, ***! You are gonna pay for what you did!

Kaitlin would show these photos to her brother and sue Ainsley for having an affair. Kaitlin thought she could not only get the house back but also crash Ainsley's reputation.

Ainsley didn't want to interact too much with Manuel. She originally wanted to find an excuse to slip away, but Serina held her arm.

Serina blinked her big eyes and looked at Ainsley pitifully. "Ainsley, we agreed to have dinner together. You can't leave now."

Ainsley's arms were tightly held. She lowered her eyes and saw Serina's clear eyes full of sincerity, so Ainsley nodded unconsciously, "Alright then."

After saying that, she raised her eyes and met Manuel's slightly playful black eyes.

Ainsley's heart beat fast inexplicably.

She felt as if she had walked into the trap set by Serina and Manuel.

"Let's go."

The black Cayenne slowly stopped beside the three of them.

The driver pressed the lock button on the car door. Before Ainsley could react, Serina had already slipped into the passenger seat. Then, she rolled down the window and poked her head out with a smile. "Ainsley, I get motion sickness. I'll be sitting in the front. You and my brother can sit in the back."

“Ms. Easton, please.” Before Ainsley could react, Manuel had already opened the door of the back seat. He raised an eyebrow at her like a gentleman. “Ladies first,” he said.

Ainsley didn’t refuse anymore. She just got into the car and sat down.

The back row of the Cayenne was ***, but Manuel was tall. After sitting down, the space seemed to be a bit lacking.

found that it was quite a pleasant smell.

The wind created by closing the door carried the faint aura of Manuel toward Ainsley and she Ainsley quietly moved closer to the door.

Manuel, who had been silently paying attention to this side, clearly noticed Ainsley’s small movements. His eyes narrowed with a smile, and then he felt relieved for a moment. He knew that Ainsley always treated strangers that way.

“Mr. Gage, are we going to Pearl Hotel?” The driver looked through the rearview mirror. His tone unconsciously became respectful when she saw the woman dressed in simple but graceful clothes distance herself from Manuel.

Pearl Hotel had always been the place for Manuel to treat guests and he would always use a specific private room there for all these years.

Manuel thought for a moment and looked at Ainsley. “Ms. Easton, do you have any recommendations?”

Ainsley was stunned and thought for a moment. “Mr. Gage, Pearl Hotel would be fine. You helped me a few times before, and Serina helped me today. Let me pay the bill tonight. Just take it as my thanks for you.”

She indeed owed Manuel a favor. Although Manuel was only helping her for Serina, Ainsley had offered to treat Serina herself. Therefore, she still had to return the favor.

Manuel did not refuse her. “Well,” he said, “Let’s go.”

Pearl Hotel was a superior hotel in Seattle, and it was also one of the top luxury places in the city. People who came there were either rich or noble. Many of them would spend thousands of dollars just for a dinner.

The black Cayenne stopped at Pearl Hotel.

As the top rich man from the Gage family in Seattle, Manuel's black Cayenne was quite low-key among the cars parked in Pearl Hotel. However, the eye-catching number string on his license plate still made the waiter at the door recognize Manuel at a glance. They respectfully rushed forward and opened the door for Manuel.

The lobby manager rushed over and smiled, "Mr. Gage, please excuse my slowness. Your private room is ready. Is it two, you and Ms. Serina?"

Manuel frowned when he saw Ainsley getting out of the car by herself.

Only then did the lobby manager notice that there was another woman in Manuel's car. He was surprised because rumors had said that Manuel never cared about women.

People who managed to make their way into places like Pearl Hotel were usually smart people. With just a look, the lobby manager analyzed Ainsley's appearance.

He found that Ainsley's clothes were fitting and could not be considered inferior, but it was no luxury brand. The bag should not be more than 200 dollars, but the face was indeed beautiful, and the temperament was also outstanding. She looked somewhat like a perfect match for Manuel.

Anyway, the lobby manager dared not to underestimate Ainsley because she had managed to get in with Manuel. The manager said with a respectful smile, "I am really sorry. I've never seen a woman other than Ms. Serina coming out of Mr. Gage's car. It was our negligence."

Ainsley shook her head. "It's OK," she said gracefully.

The three of them attracted many people's attention.

After all, Manuel had always stood out among the famous people in Seattle, so it was difficult for him not to be noticed.

Cason was with Kaliyah. He heard Kaliyah exclaim in a low voice as soon as they arrived at Pearl Hotel's parking lot, "Cason, is that Ainsley?"

In an instant, Cason looked up and saw a tall and slender woman standing generously beside a man with an outstanding temperament. The passers-by all had envious expressions on their faces.

Cason exclaimed in his heart, it's Manuel! I've never heard of him taking a woman to a meal.

In the three years in the Baldry family, Ainsley had always been obedient and given priority to the family. Not to mention eating with other men, she didn't even have a male friend.

Cason stared at Ainsley's figure not far away with a gloomy expression. An inexplicable sense of irritation surged inside him..

He wondered when did Ainsley hook up with Manuel?

If anyone knew what Cason was thinking, they would definitely roll their eyes at him and say, "Wake up, you are already divorced."
