431 Chapter 430

What?

Everyone felt like they had misheard and incredulously turned to look at Keira.

Kate was especially flustered as she looked around and asked, "Where is the Senior Sister?"

James also eagerly turned to the entrance, eyes shining, "The Senior Sister is here? Where? Where?"

The couple really had a knack for complementing each other, which made the rest of the people seem much brighter by comparison.

Chris was already looking at Keira in astonishment, then back at Trevor, before suddenly pointing towards Keira and asking, "Trevor, is she our Senior Sister?"

This remark made both James and Kate abruptly turn their heads to look at Keira.

Just about to question the truth of their master's word, they saw Trevor nod, "That's right!"

James was stunned.

431 Chapter 430

He was completely dumbfounded, looking at Keira in disbelief.

Wasn't Keira just an Outer Sect Disciple of the Freeman Sect? How could she possibly be the Senior Sister?!

Even Lady Gill furrowed her brows. "Master Freeman, to shield her, you would actually tell such a lie? You really are..."

Trevor sighed. "She really is the Senior Sister. Why wouldn't you believe me? Could I possibly mistake my own disciple? Plus, the position of Senior Sister is tied to the future of our sect. How could I lie about something like this!"

Only then did James turn toward Keira, and suddenly as if realizing something, he said, "So, that day during the selection for the martial arts tournament for Outer Sect Disciples, it wasn't because I was too tired and momentarily lost focus that you won?"

Keira asked, "... Didn't you let me win that day?"

James was shocked.

When had he ever let her win? He had been trying his absolute hardest hadn't he?

11:24

431 Chapter 430

But, was she really that skilled?

As he pondered this, he heard his own master say, "No wonder yesterday when I said let's have a sparring match, you actually punched me and sent me reeling back several steps!"

James was perplexed.

He and Kate immediately turned to look at Chris, both speaking in unison.

"Master, weren't you going easy on her?"

"Dad, you were holding back, right?"

Chris immediately shook his head. "No, why would I hold back? She is obviously a master!"

James and Kate were shocked.

Even Uncle Olsen raised an eyebrow in surprise, looking toward Keira.

What others found hard to understand, he had instantly grasped.

The Senior Sister from the Freeman Sect wasn't Keera, it was clearly Keira!

A trace of relief suddenly filled his gaze.

11.24

His daughter had grown up in Oceanion and had been through so many changes, but the pressures of fate had never bent her spine. She had always stood tall and upright as a person... and she had grown up so well!

While the crowd was still shocked, suddenly a loud wail broke through. "Jackson, do you see that? Do you see that? I really didn't go easy on her! She's the Senior Sister, how could I possibly have let her win during the martial arts tournament?!"

Erick Miles stood to the side, his nose bruised and face swollen, suddenly breaking into loud tears.

Since the last martial arts competition, everyone assumed that he had been lenient toward Keera out of pity and tenderness, which was why he let Keera win that match. Otherwise, how could Keera have possibly won?

Therefore, the Gill family held a grudge against him. Erick's days at the Freeman Sect were simply unbearable. Everyone either hit or cursed him, and day after day people challenged him to a duel, and he couldn't refuse! a

He was beaten every day, and he went to explain to Jackson every day, but Jackson simply didn't believe him...

Until this moment, his role finally became clear!!

Erick wept bitterly. As he cried, he suddenly felt that something was amiss...

No... The timing seemed entirely off right now, didn't it?!

Trevor walked over leisurely and also stood by the Olsen family, facing Lady Gill.

"Lady Gill, this is the Freeman Sect's way, where we send Outer Sect Disciples to experience life. My disciple here, she's just too righteous and cannot stand all sorts of crooked and evil practices. Your son and your nephew have been bullying men and women outside. My disciple couldn't stand it any longer. As the Senior Sister, it's not too much for her to teach the junior brothers a lesson, right?"

James and Kate immediately chimed in. "Not too much at all! It's natural for our Senior Sister to educate us!"

Trevor then looked toward Jackson again, "As for you... you went to Matias's house yesterday, didn't you?"

11.

431 Chapter 430

Then, what did you do? Do I need to say it out loud here? Matias only has one sister, and she's mute. Are you even human, bullying her like that?! If my disciple hadn't arrived, you might have succeeded, right? What's wrong with her teaching you a lesson?"

Jackson's face turned dark.

That part of a man represented a certain ability, and now he was ruined! He would never be able to bed a woman again!

At this particular moment, his psyche had become completely twisted!

Trevor looked at Lady Gill once more. "Lady Gill, the Freeman Sect has given you an explanation. Are you sure you still want to fight today?"

Lady Gill took a deep breath in anger.

After a long pause, she extended her finger toward Trevor and Uncle Olsen, pointing at each of them and then finally at Keira. "Well, the young lady is quite capable! Hiding your identity just for this trick, huh?! I'm utterly convinced!"

Then she angrily looked at Trevor. "You have gone too far. From now on the Gill family will sever all business relations with the Olsen family and all cooperation with the Freeman Sect! Austin and Jackson will leave the Freeman Sect from this point.

forward and will no longer be disciples of the Freeman Sect!!!"

Having said that, Lady Gill swung her arm fiercely, leading her group majestically as they prepared to leave!

Keira watched her, thought about what Lady Gill had said, and slightly furrowed her brows. "Wait a moment!"

Lady Gill stopped and turned back to look at her.

Keira sighed silently. "Lady Gill, this matter has already been clarified. As the Senior Sister, it's only right for me to discipline them. Why must you..."

"Hah, the Gill family has been fooled and applauded your actions time and e again, is that fun for you? I£you Had made clear your identity from the start, I wouldn't feel this humiliated!

Young lady, since you've done the deed, don't try to play innocent!"

Keira didn't know what to say.

No... She hadn't known from the start that she was the Senior Sister!

431 Chapter 430

But saying this, she was sure they wouldn't believe her.

...Never mind.

The more she explained, the messier it would get. Besides, although she wanted to cooperate with the Gill family, she didn't want to do so while feeling constrained, especially since it was Austin and Jackson who had done wrong...

Seeing her expression, Lady Gill let out a cold laugh, turned to leave, but then heard her say again. "Wait a moment!"

Lady Gill turned around, wondering what she would say next, only to see Keira walked past her, approached Jackson, and stared at him with a grim look.

Jackson panicked. "What, what are you looking at?"

Keira said, "The pendant you stole from Nara yesterday, give it back to me!"

Upon hearing this, Jackson instantly panicked, his gaze involuntarily shifting toward Austin. 3

432 Chapter 431

Austin looked at Jackson with suspicion, not understanding what was going on.

Jackson swallowed hard. "What thing? I've never seen it!"

Keira immediately grabbed his collar, almost lifting him off his feet.

Jackson suddenly screamed, "Auntie, look, she's trying to kill me! This is a blatant bullying of the Gill family!"

Lady Gill glared over in anger.

But Keira did not back down at all.

When Nara talked about the pendant yesterday, she hesitated, initially seeming reluctant to tell her, wanting to avoid troubling her.

But in the end, she still wrote it down and told her, which meant the pendant was very important to her!

Nara was never one for troubling others. When she told her that Matias was sick last time, and Keira asked if the family had money for the treatment, Nara had nodded affirmatively.

It wasn't until yesterday's visit that Keira discovered her family really was extremely poor.

Nara had graduated from college, and was currently just an intern with low wages- barely enough to live on after paying rent.

Matias was an Outer Sect Disciple in the Freeman Sect, and the money he got every month wasn't much either.

All the savings over the years had gone to Nara's education...

When Matias got sick, he went to a small clinic...

Therefore, Keira had to help Nara get the pendant back.

Keira told Lady Gill, "That pendant is very important to my friend, so I must get it back. I presume Lady Gill wouldn't object, right? After all, it belongs to someone else!"

Jackson spat out resentfully. "Her thing? Don't try to scam us here! Yes, you're just deliberately provoking!"

Keira stared at him unflinchingly, her gaze briefly shooting toward the bulge in his groin. She scoffed coldly. "Are you sure you won't give it back?"

11:24

Jackson was frightened by her gaze and suddenly cried out. "I'll give it back, I'll give it back!"

It was then that Keira let go of him.

Jackson took a deep breath, then said, "I can give it to you, but take a look at me, I've already changed into patient clothes. I don't have anything on me, but I'll send someone to deliver it to you once I get back!"

Seeing he was, indeed, wearing patient clothes and didn't appear to be carrying anything, Keira didn't trouble him further, simply saying calmly, "I should see that object tonight, or I'll find out which hospital you're staying at..."

Jackson immediately looked panicked.

Austin then said, "You..."

"Elders are speaking, don't interrupt at will," Keira cut him off, silencing Austin. "

Austin was speechless.

Keira indeed was the respected Senior Sister.

The respected Senior Sister had a special significance within the whole Freeman Sect, so there was no problem in referring to her as an elder.

11:20

It was just that Austin felt aggrieved.novelbin

Keira took a step back, and only then did these people leave.

After they had gone, Keira finally breathed a sigh of relief, then turned toward James and Kate.

Before she could speak, James rushed to her, "Sister Keera! You, you're actually my Senior Sister! You're too amazing! Come, let's spar a bit, let me witness the strength of the Senior Sister!"

"Step aside!" Kate also rushed over, grabbing Keira's arm with glittering eyes. "Sister Keera, can you teach me how you can be so skilled in martial arts but have such soft flesh?!"

Keira was dumbfounded.

"Come on, tell me, I hate those rock-hard muscles the most!"

Keira twitched her lips and glanced at Trevor. "Maybe, it could be, because I'm not diligent enough?".

Kate was confused.

11:24

Trevor didn't know what to say.

Trevor glared at her. "Kate, don't listen to her nonsense. She has endured too much inhumane torment since she was little, and that's why she has developed such great muscles. Normal people can only get them through training!"

Kate asked curiously, "What kind of inhumane torment?"

Uncle Olsen heard this and turned his head, pricking up his ears.

Trevor said, "When I first met her, she wouldn't say a word to me. Later on, I got friendly with a group of old men and women, taking them to practice Tai Chi every day..."

Keira interrupted him. "You mean dancing in the square, right?"

Trevor was dumbfounded.

The rest of the people immediately looked at Trevor, unable to imagine their solemn Sect Leader actually joining a group of people for dancing.

But Keira laughed.

prer At that time, her master only taught her for two hours a day; the rest of the time, he was bored and decided to strengthen the bodies of the old men and women. Initially, he had wanted to train them in martial arts, but in the end, he was led to participate in dancing!

A master of martial arts, twisting his waist alongside a bunch of old men and women, it seemed so comical in retrospect!

Trevor coughed. "That's not important!"

He continued. "After I got to know them, some of them knew Keera and told me a lot about her childhood..."

They said when she was just born, her mother wouldn't breastfeed her, and she almost starved to death... Later on, she was hardly ever given enough to eat and was made to do heavy labor, and then they would beat her daily, which was light punishment on her. She seemed to frequently have broken arms and legs, and was also forced to kneel as a penalty...

Trevor sighed quietly. "When I heard.

this, I got so angry. I wanted to rush over and kill that mother, but she stopped me. She said that, after all, she did give her life.."

11:24

432 Chapter 431

Trevor still didn't know the complexities of Keira's background; he was still at the initial stage.

Keira didn't explain.

Just as she was about to say something, suddenly she heard a deep voice suppressing anger. "And what else?"

Trevor added. "Oh, I also heard that when Keera was about three or four years old, her mom deliberately threw her to human traffickers. Later, it was the police who came knocking, saying they had found her daughter, and she even refused to acknowledge her!"

Trevor looked at Kate. "Would you want such a mom?"

Kate immediately shook her head, then looked at Keira. "Senior Sister, your life was so tough!"

James also said, "No wonder a scumbag could deceive you, it must be because you were too starved for love!"

Keira didn't know what to say.

This guy was confusing her own life with Keera's.

But she didn't explain too much. "Alright, there's nothing else. Everyone back to their position!"

11:24

432 Chapter 431

Trevor nodded and then suddenly said, "Aren't we forgetting something?"

"Seems like it... Isn't there someone we still haven't dealt with?"

As they were speaking, everyone left at a leisurely pace. Erick Miles, who had been hiding in the crowd trying his best to be invisible, finally breathed a sigh of relief!

Gosh...

He had already paid the price for his past assistance to Jackson in committing wrongful deeds!!

Lady Gill left the building with her people and suddenly looked at Jackson. "What did you take from that girl?"

Jackson had a moment of confusion. "No, nothing..."

Lady Gill, however, coldly cut in, "Then give it back to her! We, the Gill family, aren't so petty! Do not bully the weak!"

Jackson immediately lowered his head, "Yes..."

Lady Gill then turned to Austin. "You didn't come home yesterday; where have you been skulking around?"

Austin sighed and glanced at Jackson.

After a long pause, he suddenly said, "Mom, I think..... I might have almost found my sister!"

Lady Gill staggered upon hearing this, quickly grabbing his hand. "Where?"

Austin took out the pendant he had in hand and handed it to Lady Gill. "Look, this is my sister's jade!

She's in Clance!"

Austin had intended to wait until Jackson recovered, but after thinking it over, he decided this matter should involve Lady Gill and his two older brothers.

Lady Gill immediately turned her gaze to Jackson.

Jackson then dropped his gaze, his eyes flashing with a ruthless light. "Auntie, a friend gave it to me. We're already looking for her. Rest assured, I will find my cousin, but... my vendetta..."

Lady Gill said decisively, "If you can help me find my daughter, you'll be a benefactor to our family! I will help you avenge your grudge, even if it means using all the might of the Gill family!"

She declared with overwhelming presence. "We're not afraid of the Olsen family or the Freeman Sect!"

Jackson immediately breathed a sigh of relief, then hurriedly nodded in agreement. "Thank you so much, Auntie!"

Keira was taken aback for a moment as she looked at him.

A wave of warmth suddenly surged from the depths of her heart.

She nodded. "I want to cooperate with the Gill family."

Uncle Olsen was startled, "Why?"

To find her mother, she had to complete the task given by the South family as soon as possible. Although she did not yet know the reason, having now deeply offended Lady Gill, the only way to seek cooperation would be through Uncle Olsen.

"No, thanks. My car is waiting for me."

Keira pointed to a modest black car parked at the side of the road not far away.

Seeing it, Uncle Olsen pursed his lips, suddenly feeling somewhat dissatisfied. "Doesn't he have to work? Just driving you around every day?"

Keira nodded, "He's been a bit scared since the last incident."

Uncle Olsen fell silent for a moment, then said, "The Olsen family will always be your home."

"I know."

Uncle Olsen got into the car under Keira's watch.

The motorcade started up, and Uncle Olsen's car began to move forward slowly.

Through the rear-view mirror, he could see Keira's light-footed steps as she turned and walked toward the roadside car.

Uncle Olsen's lips slightly curved into a smile, and after a moment he muttered,

"Once you find her, make her suffer! Have her confess everything she did to my daughter, and pay her back tenfold!"

The secretary was about to speak.

Then Uncle Olsen suddenly thought of Lewis...

He wasn't the generous type; if he knew how brutally Keira had been treated, he would definitely step in...

"Okay!"

The two hurriedly left the house with the jade.

Austin followed them. "I'll go with you!"

After the group left, Lady Gill finally sat down on the sofa and took a deep breath.

435 Chapter 434

Matias stared at the advertisement, just to see that someone was looking for the owner of this jade and asked people to contact them, leaving their contact information."

Matias immediately excitedly wrote down the contact information, then looked directly at Nara and said, "Nara, these are your family members, they're looking for you!"

After saying this, he took out his phone, wanting to contact the other party, "I'll call right now, let's see who they are, and if possible, you should meet them!"

Unfortunately, before he could make the call, Nara stopped him.

Nara waved her hands and gestured: I'll contact them myself.

Matias was taken aback, "How will you contact them? You can't make phone calls, can you?"

Nara glared at him, stubbornly pouting and gesturing: Can't I send text messages and type?

Matias: ...

Matias knew his sister appeared gentle and frail, but she was actually very stubborn inside; when she made up her mind about something, nobody else could decide for her.

He silently sighed.

Then he spoke up, "Then you send a message and ask now."

Nara nodded, took her phone, and went out the door.

She sat on the steps at the entrance, quietly looking ahead.

Many people rented rooms within this courtyard house, the neighbors had all watched her and her brother grow up since they were little, and now they were all taking walks and chatting.

Nara watched them, her thoughts somewhat complicated.

She had known since she was little that she was adopted, and she also wanted to know who her biological parents were and why they had abandoned her.

Was it because she was mute?

Her brother said that when he found her, she was about four or five years old, had a fever, and after waking up, she couldn't speak anymore.

So, did her family not want her because she was mute?

Or because they were poor?

She had thought of countless possibilities, never expecting to see something on the TV today related to her own identity...

Thinking up to this point, she picked up her phone, hesitated for a long time, and finally sent a message to the other party: "Hello, I am the owner of that piece of jade, may I ask who you are?"

The other party did not reply to the message for the time being.

Nara stared at the phone, her hope gradually fading.

It seemed her family didn't want to recognize her either, right?

That's why they didn't reply to her message promptly...

Nara gave a wry smile.

Then she suddenly saw a person entering through the front gate and immediately stood up-it was Keira.

She walked up to Nara and said, "Did someone from Jackson deliver your pendant back to you last night?"

Upon hearing this, Nara hesitated for a moment, then shook her head.

Keira's expression immediately darkened. "Then I'll go and get it back for you now!"

Nara thought about it for a second, eventually nodding; knowing Keira could not understand sign language, she took out paper and pen to write it down, "I want to go with you."

The fact that the jade had been on the news meant it had come from Jackson; could this mean that her relatives were in the hospital, too?

She wanted to check it out...

Keira nodded and went in to greet Matias.

Since Matias couldn't walk yet, Keira asked him to stay at home. She then left with Nara.

After the two left the alley, they saw a black sedan parked on the side of the road: Lewis was leaning against the car waiting for them.

He was still dressed in casual attire, his demeanor relaxed, and his profound gaze fixed on Keira. His affectionate dark eyes seemed as if they wanted to draw her in.

Sunlight poured in from behind him, casting a golden glow over him.

For a moment, Keira was lost in a daze.

Lewis had truly transformed into a driver for her sake during this period, paying no mind to business affairs...

She lowered her gaze, letting Nara take a seat in the back.

Then she got into the front passenger seat.

Nara was sitting in such a luxury car for the first time. She looked somewhat restless as she gazed at the clean leather cushions, clutching the corner of her clothes tightly. She then looked down at her dirty shoes, afraid of soiling the car.

Keira seemed to sense her discomfort and made small talk. "Nara, is that pendant very important to you?"

In a short while, Nara handed her a piece of paper that read, "It was left to me by my parents. I was adopted by my brother."

Keira was startled when she read this. "What? Then don't worry. I will definitely help you get it back!"

Nara quickly replied, "Thank you."

Keira looked at her through the car's rearview mirror.

The girl sat there quietly, her clothes somewhat old but not dirty. She was a lovable girl.

Keira just curled her lips into a smile.

Jackson was in a hospital that, while not publicly disclosed, was easy for Keira and Lewis to find out about if they wanted to.

The car soon arrived at the hospital.

Keira still had Lewis stay in the car while she took Nara upstairs.

The two walked down the long corridor and finally found Jackson's hospital room.

Jackson was in a VIP room, and the corridor on that floor was rarely populated. It was very quiet.

Nara followed Keira nervously and quickly arrived at the door.

Austin was inside at the time, chatting with Jackson.

Austin began anxiously. "Jackson, where exactly did you get that jade piece? We've placed advertisements, and too many people have responded! We're still screening one by one! If you get any information, you have to tell us fast!"

As he spoke, several more messages popped up on his phone.

They were from people he didn't know, who had mysteriously sent messages to him.

Most of them were asking, "That jade piece is mine, when can we meet?"

Others were inquiring, "I can provide information about the jade, can I get paid for it?"

Jackson saw these and immediately said, "Austin, these messages are just trying to scam us for money..."

Austin, without hesitation, replied, "How much money do you want?"

As he answered, he said, "As long as we can find my sister, no amount of money is too much!"

Jackson was speechless.

After Austin sent that message, he scrolled down further...

At that moment, the door was suddenly pushed open, and Keira walked in with Nara confidently.

Jackson, upon seeing them, immediately became anxious, yelling fearfully, "Keera, what are you doing here again?"

Austin also sprang up. "Senior Sister, we've already left the dy left the Freeman Sect.

You can't come to reprimand us anymore!"

Keira, finding their reaction amusing, said, "I'm here to get something from Jackson!"

Austin frowned. "What thing?"

Keira looked toward Nara, "What is the specific pendant?" Nara took out paper and pen and wrote, "It's a piece of jade, moon-shaped."
