464 Chapter 463

Keira strode into the hospital room and fixed her gaze on Jackson.

She had heard every single word he just said.

If Matias hadn't stopped Jackson, the real Keera might have already been violated!

This man... was simply despicable!

If he hadn't been injured already, Keira would have definitely added a few kicks!

She stared hard at Jackson. "The Gill family doesn't own Clance. Do you really think you can do anything you want?"

Jackson stared back at her. "I don't know about other industries, but in the medical industry, I'm sure of it! If the Gill family says the word, she'll find a job in this field!"

"She has already found one."

Keira said lightly.

Jackson was stunned for a moment, then scoffed.

"Who would dare to take her in? The only medical team in Clance that is not controlled by my family is the Nora Research Institute. You're not saying that she was accepted by them, are you? How could that be possible? Hahaha..."

The lackeys standing around him also laughed.

"Stop daydreaming already!"

"The Nora Research Institute never hires undergraduates, especially interns. They've never recruited interns all these years!"

"All medical teams in Clance are controlled by the Gill family. Don't be so delusional!"

While the crowd of people babbled on, Keira just dug at her ears, feeling very impatient.

She simply turned her head to look at Matias and said, "Get up."

Matias was still kneeling there with bandages tied around his leg. He didn't move when he heard her and his eyes were red-rimmed as he clenched his fists tightly. "It's my fault... it's because of me that Nara has ended up like this..."

"It's not your fault!"

Keira bent down, grabbed Matias by the collar, and hoisted him up from the ground. "Your leg was broken by him. If you are bullied, do you just bear it? Since when did fighting back become wrong?! Do you have to silently endure others' bullying? Nara is your sister! She should be standing with you against these evil forces!"

But Matias shook his head. "It shouldn't be like this... It shouldn't... Nara has done nothing wrong, yet because of me, she's ended up unable to find even a job... She's a good kid, the best among all the university students..."

Keira sighed, "I said, she found a job!"

Matias was taken aback, then looked toward Nara. "Is that true?"

Nara hesitated a little.

She wasn't actually sure if she had found a job, but she did receive an interview notification from the Nora Research Institute today.

She hesitated and then nodded, gesturing, "Brother, I received an interview notification from the Nora Research Institute."

Matias was shocked. "What? An interview notification from the Nora Research Institute?"

Nara nodded.

Matias's eyes widened, and just as he was about to speak, he heard Jackson say, "Nara, what lies are you telling now? If you could receive an interview notification from the Nora Research Institute, I'll eat this stack of papers!"

His subordinates also scoffed. "Exactly, the Nora Research Institute never hires undergraduates, let alone an intern without a diploma..."

"You're lying through your nose! Stop bragging!"

"Hahaha, that's hilarious!"

"Nara, you wouldn't have dreamed that they sent you an interview invitation, right? Or did you prepare false documents and deceive them?"

"The Nora Research Institute isn't foolish. They recruit the top talents in the medical field. Even if you did receive an interview notification, it doesn't mean they'll employ you... Nara, you don't really believe you're already part of the Nora Research Institute, do you?"

Nara looked at them angrily but didn't retort.

Because she herself felt that the notification was so inexplicably timely... Even now, she felt like she was dreaming.

Matias then said, "Really?"

Nara immediately picked up her phone and showed him the text message about the interview from the Nora Research Institute.

When Matias saw it, his eyes lit up. "It's true. Nara, go to the interview tomorrow!"

Nara immediately nodded.

Just then, Jackson scoffed and said, "This must be some scam text, right? If the Nora Research Institute was really notifying you for an interview, they would call, not send a text message!"

Keira curled her lips.

Of course, it was because of Keira's reminder!

Nara was mute, and she wouldn't be able to speak on the phone, so naturally, she wouldn't answer it!

But upon hearing this, Matias frowned. "That's right, Nara, why would they send you a text? It couldn't be a scam, could it?"

Nara looked confused, not knowing how to respond.

"It's not a scam."

Keira said indifferently, pulling Matias to his feet, "Try it tomorrow, and you'll know, won't you? For now, come with us and leave this place!"

She also wanted to ask Nara what the deal was with that piece of jade! Talking to Jackson here was a complete waste of time!

Matias was dragged to his feet, and he helplessly looked at Keira, still not wanting to leave the room.

No matter how Jackson treated Matias, the latter could live with it, but he didn't want to involve Nara.

Perhaps sensing his dilemma, Keira sighed and said, "Haven't you realized? No matter what, Jackson won't let you guys off, so there's no need to stay here. Some people have hearts made of stone, which will never soften."

Matias looked toward Jackson.

Jackson sneered. "If your manhood is also destroyed, can you spare the culprit? Indeed, I'll never let you I'll torture you little by little, slowly!"

off.

Matias's eyes were red, and he stared hard at Jackson.

Just then, Nara grabbed Matias's hand and signed with her hands. "Brother, let's go. I don't want to see his face"

Matias lowered his head and walked out the door with her.

Matias still limped as he walked. Just as they left the room, they heard Jackson's mocking voice. "Ha! What a pair of disabled siblings! A cripple and a mute, that's pathetic!"

Matias's steps faltered slightly, but he didn't look back.

After leaving the hospital room, Matias sighed and said, "Nara, I'm sorry. It's my fault."

Nara shook her head and gestured with her hands. "Don't say that! Brother, we are a family."

Matias nodded and said, "Don't worry. If it comes to it, you can transfer to another university, or if necessary, we'll go abroad. My leg is almost healed now. Tomorrow, I'll go look for a job to save money for I don't believe the Gill family's influence can reach another country!"

Nara nodded firmly and continued to sign. "As long as the two of us are together, life will be good."

She then looked at her mobile phone.

Seeing this, Matias said, "Do you want to attend the interview at the Nora Research Institute?"

Nara nodded.

Matias sighed and said, "I've also asked about the Nora Research Institute. It's true. They don't recruit interns. Nara, you were probably deceived by someone."

Nara also looked dejected, feeling it was impossible.

Keira pursed her lips and said, "If you want to know if you're deceived, why not just go and see for yourself tomorrow?"

Nara looked hesitant.

But Matias immediately agreed. "Right, let's go tomorrow and give it a try. I'll go with you!"

Seeing the hopeful light in Matias's eyes, Nara hesitated momentarily, then nodded.

No matter what, tomorrow's matter was an opportunity to seize.

Without trying, they would regret it in the future.

Seeing they had made up their minds, Keira finally relaxed. She was about to speak when she heard a voice with a foreign accent in the distance, "I discovered that the same family owns several bridges in Crera!"

The secretary said. "Really? That's not likely."

"It's true," the person with the accent continued. "I went to Oceanion and saw a sign, 'Dumond Yore Bridge welcomes you.' Yesterday, I went to Inevale and saw 'Inevale Yore Bridge welcomes you'... I also saw the 'Bidiff Yore Bridge welcomes you.' It's so strange in Crera. Who is this Yore family, and why do they own all the bridges?"

The secretary was dumbfounded.

Keira arched an eyebrow and looked over, only to see an old acquaintance: Scott Martin!

She remembered that in Oceanion, she initially thought he was a construction worker and gave him an umbrella, only later finding out that he was an overseas real estate tycoon.

There wasn't much interaction afterward, and she had forgotten about this person. But now, why had he come to Clance?

However, they walked away, engaged in conversation, and didn't notice Keira.

Keira didn't think much of it and looked away.

But the moment she looked away, she caught a glimpse of a familiar figure

Was that... Doctor Matthew?!

Keira's pupils contracted, and just as she was about to follow him, she saw him turn the corner.

She quickened her steps, but when she reached where he had been, she found that he was already gone.

Keira frowned.

Matthew was special to her.

Back in Oceanion, he reminded her to have her monthly iron infusions, serving as her personal doctor.

Keira pursed her lips, recalling their past.

She didn't know Matthew at first.

When she moved out from the Olsen family, she was emaciated and often sick. Matthew was the doctor at a small clinic near the apartment she rented.

The first time she experienced heavy menstruation without knowing she had anemia, she fainted outside.

When she regained consciousness, Matthew was taking care of her and telling her, "The day before yourm period each month, you need to come for an infusion, or else you'll faint from anemia. If you're not treated in time, you may go into shock or even die, got it?"

Back then, Keira just nodded, looking bewildered.

Yet, she sensed a mystery surrounding this man.

He seemed related to her somehow...

He had secrets.

But Matthew was always deep in thought, so Keira subconsciously kept her distance from him.

Their relationship was close yet distant. Since she couldn't afford the o know, with our infusion fees, Matthew gaid, e age difference and the same surname, I could be considered your older brother, so I'll give you free treatment from now on.

But Keira didn't understand his action, nor did she know what he was up to.

After her "death", she returned to Oceanion in the guise of Keera and tried to find Matthew, only to lea that he was no longer there.

She didn't give it much thought then, but what was he doing in Clance?

As Keira contemplated, Lewis cleared his throat, J

Then, Keira turned to Matias and Nara, who were waiting for her m "Nara, the jade pendant you asked me to get back from Jackson, may I see it?"
