

My Accidental Husband is a Billionaire

466 Chapter 465

When Keira said that, Nara slightly froze.

Matias immediately asked, "What jade?"

Nara looked down.

1

Keira was about to say something when Nara took out her cell phone and typed a message for her to read, "I lost it."

1

Keira was startled. "You lost it?"

Nara nodded.

Keira then frowned and said, "Alright then."

She and Lewis left after taking Matias and Nara home.

Matias then looked at Nara and suddenly asked, "Nara, that jade was left to you by the family member you were looking for. How could you just lose it? I know it's under your pillow. Why would you lie?"

With her gaze downcast, Nara gestured with her hands, "Matias, I found them."

Matias's eyes lit up. "Where are they? Are they wealthy? They must be wealthy enough to send out so

10.00

1/9

<

<

466 Chapter 465

many ads to look for you... Nara, now that you have found them, you can live a good life!"

But to his surprise, Nara's eyes welled up with tears as soon as he said that.

Matias was taken aback. "Nara, what's wrong?"

Nara gestured, "Matias, are you trying to send me away?"

Matias immediately waved his hands. "No, I didn't mean that. I just thought you could have a better life..."

Nara continued to gesture. "I want to live with you, even if life is tougher here."

Matias said, "But your family is looking for you everywhere. They must love you too! Nara, you..."

Nara suddenly began to cry, then with tears rimming her eyes, she looked at Matias and continued to gesture with her hands. "I don't want relatives like that. They are all bad people!"

They took lives with impunity!

They made her feel disgusted!

But sign language couldn't convey much information,

10:00

III

<

466 Chapter 465

so she could only express her revulsion.

2

Matias quickly said, "Okay, okay, let's not talk about it anymore... I won't say another word, don't get agitated..."

With tears circling her eyes, Nara entered her room and locked herself inside.

She wrapped her arms around her knees and began to cry.

How could she have such detestable relatives...

Especially Jackson, who was supposed to be her cousin, yet he tried to violate her... and he even broke Matias's leg!

And Austin...

He used to be her affectionate brother from childhood, but now he had become repulsive and loathsome.

She would never forgive them, not in her entire life!

As Nara cried, she pulled the jade from under her pillow and threw it into the trash can with all her might.

Having just thrown it away, she suddenly felt something amiss, so she picked it up. On closer inspection, she noticed that the quality of the jade seemed off. It was different from before.

10:00

3/0

466 Chapter 465

That piece of jade had been with her since she was a child, and she was accustomed to its appearance and warmth.

She had caressed it until it became very smooth.

F Nara held the jade and examined it, then suddenly realized it had been switched!!

This wasn't her original piece of jade...

Her eyes widened as she suddenly realized something...

It was Jackson...

Jackson must have hidden her jade and given her a fake one...

Did he think she would want to go back to that family?

She clenched the piece of jade tightly before throwing it back into the trash bin.

She looked down momentarily before leaving the room and going to Matias's side.

Seeing how agitated Nara had been just now, Matias

10:00

4/9

D

466 Chapter 465

was a bit flustered. Now that she came back, he immediately stepped forward.

"Nara, are you alright?"

Nara stared at him, motioning with her hands. "Matias, let's move to another city and start anew."

Matias was startled. "But, your university is here..."

Nara continued to gesture. "I won't attend university anymore. With the Gill family here, do you think they'll let me graduate?"

Matias fell silent.

Nara continued gesturing, "Matias, I can't find a job in Clance, and I can't graduate. It's better to leave this heartbreaking place."

She didn't want to be so close to that family...

She wanted to escape from them and to ensure they could never find her!

Matias said, "Didn't Keera say today that you should try interviewing at Nora Research Institute? We'll leave if it is a sham and you can't get the interview."

Nara nodded.

Neither of them noticed that outside, someone was 10:00

D

466 Chapter 465

sneakily watching them.

Jackson sent this person to monitor the siblings. The man knew some sign language and could understand Nara's gestures.

He picked up his phone and called Jackson, "Sir, Nara said she would go for an interview at Nora Research Institute tomorrow. If she doesn't get it, she will leave Clance and never return!"

Jackson sneered. "That's great. Ambush them on their way out. Get rid of those two for me so they'll never be able to return!"

"Yes!"

After that, the subordinate hung up.

It was soon the next day.

Nara's mood had improved significantly after she 1.

Matias scrutinized her mood closely, and seeing no other concerns, he finally breathed a sigh of relief.

Then, grabbing his cane and limping, he followed at her side. "Let's go, it's time for the interview!"

10:00

<466 Chapter 465

Nara gestured, "I can go by myself. You should stay at home and rest."

But Matias shook his head, "It's indeed too bizarre, so I'll accompany you. If you run into danger, at least I'm a man."

Nara hesitated before nodding.

The two took a bus to the Nora Research Institute.

They stood outside, staring quietly at the grand and serene courtyard, not even daring to breathe too heavily.

Land price in Clance was exorbitantly high, yet the Nora Research Institute had such a large yard here, which was utterly astonishing.

The two approached the security booth.

Nara didn't even dare to ask.

It was the security guard who spoke first. "What you here for?"

Matias swallowed nervously. "We're here for an interview..."

The guard hesitated. "Interview? Do you have a notification letter? Let me see it..."

10:00

466 Chapter 465

Matias nudged Nara.

Immediately, Nara took out her phone, opened WhatsApp, and showed it to him.

After looking at it, the guard frowned.

Then he looked up, measuring Nara and Matias with a skeptical gaze.

Anxious, Matias inquired, "Is there a problem with this message? We were also confused, so we came to try our luck, not knowing if it was legitimate. Sorry for the inconvenience..."

Before he even finished speaking, he was about to bow apologetically.

From a distance.

called The person tracking them Jackson. "Ha!

Jackson sneered. "That mute is only a university student, but she wants to enter Nora Research Institute. That's simply a fool's dream!"

10:00

D

466 Chapter 465

No sooner had these words left his mouth than the security guard reached out to hold Matias's arm!

The content is on ! Read the latest chapter there!

467 Chapter 466

The security guard held Matias's arm and then pointed inside the gate, saying, "Please come in!"

Matias was surprised.

1

He looked at Nara in confusion, then turned back to the security guard, looking puzzled. "Huh?"

The security guard had a warm smile on his face. "Please come in. Do you know the way to the HR department? Wait a moment. I'll lock the door and take you there!"

Neither Matias nor Nara could understand the meaning of that text message, but the security guard could!

It was from Nora herself!

Nora had always been the legend of the research institute, and everyone was working on projects remotely controlled by Nora. Nora had never appeared in person but was able to manage the company in perfect order, and whenever there were technical issues, handing them to Nora.

10:00

467 Chapter 466

always resulted in great solutions!

The security guard had never seen Nora, but from the dean, he had seen her text message replies!

Therefore, he recognized at a glance that the person who had sent the message to Nara was none other than Nora herself.

As the security guard walked Matias and Nara toward the research institute, he couldn't help but observe Nara closely, wondering to himself, "Who exactly is this person? Nora personally sent her a message!"

Not far from the gate.

The person who had been following the siblings was dumbfounded.

Over the phone, Jackson was proudly asking, "How did it go? Were they kicked out?"

"... They, they..." the person stammered. "They were warmly... welcomed inside."

Jackson was dumbfounded.

He couldn't help but ask, "What did you say?"

The lackey continued. "It's true. They were warmly

10:00

467 Chapter 466

welcomed inside."

Jackson said, "You must be blind! Nora Research Institute is the dream of all pharmaceutical engineers. Nara is just a university student. How could she get inside?"

Nara was also contemplating this question.

She quietly observed her surroundings.

The institute was a series of bungalows on prime real estate in Clance, indicating the institute's financial strength.

The architecture was all of a traditional style.

There were pavilions, pagodas, artificial hills, and flowing water.

There was even a small park. Working here would be so enjoyable.

The place where the researchers actually worked was far from the street, so it was very quiet. There was no traffic noise.

As Nara surveyed her surroundings, she marveled at 10.00

D

3/9

467 Chapter 466

what she saw.

What a fortunate thing it would be to work here!

While thinking of this, she was led by the security guard into the HR department.

Pushing open the door, the security guard invited the two inside. Nara nervously clutched the corner of her clothes and then sat down awkwardly opposite the HR staff.

Matias was even more at a loss.

Although the Freeman Sect had a similar environment, it was full of rough men practicing martial arts every day. They had never seen such brilliant scholars.

Matias had always thought of themselves as martial practitioners, and these scholars seemed the most impressive.

He even felt he was too burly and out of place standin in this room.

The HR staff was looking through Nara's resume and chuckled after reading it.

"Nara, is it? As a university student, I see you're pretty good with applied chemistry, and you've done well in biomedicine as well. Which of these two departments would you like to intern in?"

10:00

467 Chapter 466

Nara was perplexed.

What, just like that, straight to the point?

She hesitated, then gestured with her hands while Matias translated for her. "She says, can she choose either one?... I'm sorry, Nara doesn't know what she's doing. She'll go wherever you need her to go."

The HR personnel then smiled and said, "How about biomedicine? That might involve less interaction, which is more suitable for her."

Nara nodded frantically!

That was her favorite field.

She immediately stood up, ready to leave, but the staff stopped her. "Going somewhere? We haven't discussed your salary yet!"

Nara was perplexed.

The HR staff pondered for a moment. "We've never hired an intern before, so how about this? Tell me your expectations. As long as it's not too outrageous, we'll accept it."

10:00

7

467 Chapter 466

Nara thought for a moment and slowly raised two fingers.

Interns usually had low wages, just a little subsidy for living expenses. Her classmates interning at hospitals made about three hundred a month.

She was asking for two hundred... that shouldn't be too much, right?

She saw the HR staff frown, and she hesitated, raising one finger instead.

A hundred should be all right.

The HR staff, however, seemed confused. "Are you asking for an annual salary of a million or a monthly wage? I'm not quite sure what you mean."

Nara was dumbfounded.

They weren't talking in the same order of magnitude. She quickly gestured with her hands, shaking her head. Matias was dumbfounded as he spoke for her. "She means a hundred."

The HR staff paused for a moment. "An annual salary of a hundred? It's not impossible, but I would need to get approval from the management for that salary."

10:01

<

467 Chapter 466

Nara was confused Did they need approval for an annual salary of a hundred dollars? What the hell was that? Was it too low?

While she was thinking, Matias had come to a realization, and he was completely dumbfounded. "When you said a hundred, what's the exact figure?"

The HR staff was equally perplexed.

"Aren't we talking in millions? Many staff here have an annual salary of six million, although usually they are long-term employees. We've never seen that much for an intern; newcomers usually start at two million."

Matias was shocked.

He immediately gestured, "We're not talking about millions! She meant a hundred dollars a month!"

The HR staff was dumbfounded.

She seemed troubled and finally said, "We've never had such a low figure; how about a monthly salary of sixty thousand?"

20.02

467 Chapter 466

Nara quickly gestured with her hands.

The HR staff sighed: "Alright then, eight thousand a month! Can you accept that?"

Nara wanted to gesture again, but the HR staff said, "Any lower won't work. We won't be able to hire you then!"

Nara was speechless.

She walked out of the HR department with a look of complete bewilderment, and as soon as she stepped out, her phone began to vibrate wildly.

It was all messages from her classmates.

"Nara, did you really go to Nora Research Institute?"

"How was the interview?"

The content is on ! Read the latest chapter there!

Nara knew that those sending her messages didn't genuinely care about her; they just wanted to know what happened.

Besides these private chats, a heated discussion was also underway in her class chat group.

"Someone said yesterday that Nara received an interview invitation from the Nora Research Institute, but who knows if it's true."

"It must be a lie, right? She probably just made it up!"

"The mute girl is dreaming too big. Why would a place like the Nora Research Institute allow her entry?"

"Why not just tag her and find out?"

Indeed, someone tagged Nara and asked her.

"Did you really go for an interview at the Nora Research Institute? Or were you deceived?"

What followed were comments full of mockery.

Nara didn't respond because she was still in shock, feeling as if she were dreaming.

Were the things that happened in the HR department real?

A monthly salary of eight thousand... which intern could earn so much?

And she was accepted... it was simply unbelievable!

As she was still in shock, her phone suddenly vibrated when a new message was posted in the chat group.

"According to a news report, Nora Research Institute has, for the first time, accepted an undergraduate student as an intern this year. The student, from the Class of 2022, has excellent academic records, consistently ranking first in her courses."

Upon this news release, the class group immediately exploded.

"Wait, what?! Isn't that Nara?! She's been at the top of our class every year since first year!"

"So, it's true, the Nora Research Institute really accepted Nara!"

"Oh my God! I'm so envious!"

"How is this possible? In past years, the Nora Research Institute only hired PhDs; suddenly, they accepted Nara this year... couldn't be because she's mute, could it?"

"Why would you say that?"

"Don't you know? Large companies are required to employ people with disabilities; maybe the Nora Research Institute just wants to use her to fill a quota?"

"That's quite possible. But the Nora Research Institute isn't exactly a large company, right? Their Clance office seems to employ only about a hundred people."

"Who knows how many people they actually have, but I'm sure that's the reason. Otherwise, why would they accept someone like Nara..."

"I've been watching you guys chat in silence, but I can't stand to hear this. What's wrong with Nara? Other than being unable to speak, is she missing an arm or a leg? The snide remarks in this group... I can smell them through the screen!"

"Exactly! If Nara hadn't offended someone she shouldn't have, she wouldn't be struggling to find a job! She's always been so diligent with her work, and for years, she's been the hardest-working one in our class. Isn't it only right for the Nora Research Institute to recognize her merit?"

"Even if the Nora Research Institute is using her to meet the disability hiring quota, I believe that Nara will do very well there!"

"That's right, if you don't have anything nice to say, just shut your mouths!"

...

Nara looked at the people in the group who were speaking out for her with righteousness, and she felt like crying.

She turned to look at the Nora Research Institute again, but she was no longer confused.

Even if the Nora Research Institute admitted her merely because she had a disability, she wouldn't let go of such a good opportunity!

Nara had known since she was young that opportunities only came to those who were prepared.

She looked at Matias and gestured with her fingers. "Brother, we're not leaving the city! I must work really hard and try to stay at the Nora Research Institute after I graduate!"

Matias, amidst his excitement, immediately nodded. "Great!"

He then picked up his phone and sent a message. "I'll also let Keera know. She'll definitely be happy for you!"

...

When Keira received their message, she wasn't very excited. She simply replied with a congratulations and put down her phone.

She looked at James sitting opposite her, massaging her temples. "I won't interfere with Mary's matters."

James had a pained expression. "But Ellis already has a fever and has been sent to the hospital. If this torment continues, he won't be able to take it. Keera, please have mercy on him!"

Keira shook her head. "Did he ever have mercy on Mary when he drugged her?"

James didn't know what to say.

He wanted to say more, but Kate pushed him away. "Exactly, Keera is right!"

James continued with a sorrowful face. "I just can't bear to see Ellis so upset and not lend a hand to help, alas!"

He rested his chin in his hand. "Is there really no chance for Ellis and Mary to reconcile?"

Keira said, "That's Mary's decision. Let her think about it herself. I can't favor him just because he's my brother and let Mary give him a pass; that wouldn't be fair to Mary."

James nodded reluctantly, "Fine."

He then looked at Keira again. "The company has been hectic lately. Uncle Olsen comes to the office every day to stop some of the old employees from making trouble, and Ellis is ill in a time like this!"

As he was speaking, the nanny walked in and came directly to Keira. "Madam, someone is outside claiming to be your Aunt Helen. Should I let her in?"

Aunt Helen?

Keira paused for a moment, remembering that she had seen this aunt at the family reunion banquet the other day.

She nodded.

James, also curious, asked, "What is Auntie doing here?"

The servant walked out and soon brought in a middle-aged woman. As she entered, she looked at Keira and said, "Keera, do you know that because of you, the Olsen Group is facing off against the Gill family?"

Keira nodded. "I know."

Aunt Helen's face turned cold immediately. "Then do you realize how domineering your father has been in the company? I heard that the shareholders all oppose falling out with a major corporation over personal reasons. Still, your father insists on having his way, and for your sake, he single-handedly stood against so many shareholders' objections. He's working so hard. Are you going to watch and do nothing?"

Aunt Helen continued. "I know your father loves you dearly; you didn't grow up in the Olsen family, and he feels guilty toward you. But Keera, the Olsen Group isn't your father's personal enterprise; many people and issues are involved! Furthermore, the Olsen Group is a listed company. Last time, the scandal involving Ellis and Mary blew up, affecting the stock prices. Luckily your brother quickly advertised the company's new product.

"Now that your situation has gotten out, it's going to impact the company's reputation again! So, if you are sensible and understand the difficulty we elders face, come with me now to apologize to the Gill family and put this matter to rest."

469 Chapter 468

After Helen finished speaking, Keira furrowed her brows.

Keira said, "I would like to turn our strained relations with the Gill family into a friendly one, but do you think that just by apologizing, the Gill family will let this matter go?"

She didn't want to bring a bad end upon the Olsen family because of her personal affairs.

Besides, she was planning on cooperating with the Gill family...

Although Helen's suggestion was a bit extreme, Keira didn't mind suffering a little indignity if it could mend the relationship.

After all, finding her mother was also a matter of urgency.

Helen immediately said, "I will step in and mediate for you. Trust me."

Her words made Keira hesitate slightly.

James immediately explained, " Aunt Helen is from the Gill family. She's Austin's paternal aunt."

Keira was surprised.

She never imagined that the Olsen and Gill families were connected by marriage.

If that were the case, why did Lady Gill have to make things so unpleasant?

Helen sighed and said, "Keera, in truth, this matter is mainly because my sister-in-law got carried away. You don't know her... She's all about saving face! She used to have a crush on your father, and despite pursuing him for so long, your father never spared her a glance. She has held a grudge for a long time, always wanting to prove herself to him. If this situation involved any of the brothers, including Ellis, my sister-in-law wouldn't have made such a big issue out of it!"

She looked at Keira. "You didn't cause this trouble right after you came back. It's more like that your father has dragged you into this! But now isn't the time to figure out who is right or wrong. It was never a big deal to begin with. Jackson is always fooling around. Do you think Lady Gill doesn't know the truth? It's just that she can't swallow her pride!"

Helen continued. "I came here today intending to act as a mediator. As the younger generation, if you go with me to apologize to my sister-in-law, admitting that you were too heavy-handed, we can resolve this crisis between our two families, which would be good for both sides!"

Seeing Helen speak so sincerely, Keira stood up decisively. "Alright, Aunt Helen, I'll listen to you. Let's go."

James and Kate immediately followed behind her. "Keera, we'll go with you!"

"That won't be necessary."

Keira stopped them. "Taking so many people there isn't good; it'll look like we want to provoke them. Just Aunt Helen and I will be enough."

She stopped Lewis from following and left for the Gill family just with Helen.

They weren't turned away at the door, but the butler ushered them into the parlor, not the living room.

Helen's face stiffened.

Every time she returned to her maternal home, she was treated as if she were in her own house. Since when did they start being so courteous?!

It seemed her elder sister-in-law was indeed angry at them!

Helen sighed again, glanced at Keira, and said, "Don't worry, and don't be afraid. My elder sister-in-law may seem cold on the outside but is warm on the inside; she won't do anything to a young woman like you..."

Keira raised an eyebrow, about to say she wasn't afraid when Aunt Helen said, "Moreover, I'm here today. If the Gill family dares to lay a hand on you, I will stop them!"

Keira didn't know what to say.

She wanted to say there was no need to do that; these people probably weren't her match.

But seeing Helen's resolute demeanor, she kept her silence.

Helen had gone to see her and asked her to come and apologize. Though Keira felt somewhat displeased, Helen's protective stance...

Helen must have been sincere about the welfare of the two families.

Just then, footsteps approached from outside, followed by Lady Gill's icy entrance. Upon seeing Keira, she gave a contemptuous snort and sat on the sofa before turning to Helen. "Helen, what brought you back today?"

Helen couldn't help but retort. "This is my home! Can't I return to my own house now?"

Her tone carried a hint of endearment.

Lady Gill scoffed. "Your home? Isn't your home the Olsen residence? I almost thought you had forgotten your last name!"

Helen sighed and walked straight up to Lady Gill. "I've brought Keera here today to apologize to you. Our family and the Olsens have been on good terms for many years. This time, that brat Jackson was out of line! Keera saw him bullying her good friend and couldn't contain herself. She hit him a tad too hard... Please don't be mad."

Lady Gill scolded. "A tad too hard? And what would you call a real beating then?"

Helen pouted. "Don't take this the wrong way. Jackson is, after all, from the second branch, and you know the kind of person my brother is. He's flaky, and my sister-in-law spoils the child rotten. As a result, Jackson has caused no end to the trouble for so many years! How can you blame Keera for being tough on him if he isn't disciplined?"

Besides, I've heard that when Keera was in the Freeman Sect, Jackson bullied her for years! As for accountability, the Olsen family hasn't even pursued it with him, which is fortunate for you. So why are you turning the tables on us?"

Lady Gill sneered. "You keep talking about the Olsen family—if you're one of them, why are you here at our place?"

Helen grew angry. "My last name is Gill, and I can come over whenever I want! Are you favoring and protecting Jackson and won't let me speak? It was his fault... Don't we Gills also stand for reason?"

Helen then turned to Keira. "Moreover, I've brought Keera here, and that should be enough. Don't waste the chance I'm giving you to make this right! Do you want to put the Gills and the Olsens through the wringer over one Jackson? Do you know what people outside are saying about us now?"

She stared at Lady Gill. "Keera's father is surrounded by shareholders at the company, demanding an explanation. I think the Gill family isn't putting similar pressure on you. Are the two great families headed toward being mortal enemies? Have you made up your mind to make me choose between my natal family and my marital family over that no-good nephew? Didn't you look down on him before? How can you be so foolish this time?"

Lady Gill silently sighed. "Do you know what Jackson did?"

Helen shook her head. "I don't."

Lady Gill said, "He helped us find Barbara's jade pendant."

Helen was immediately dumbstruck. "What? Barbara? You have news of Barbara?"

Barbara was Lady Gill's missing daughter.

Lady Gill immediately nodded. "With Jackson earning such merit for us, how could I not protect him? If we can find Barbara, even if it costs our family's entire fortune, I would willingly pay it!"

Helen was rendered speechless.

Everybody in the Gill family was looking for Barbara, especially those from the first branch. If Jackson had helped them find such critical evidence, then no wonder Lady Gill staunchly supported him.

Jackson had indeed earned a great merit for the first branch!

As she struggled to find words, Keira seemed to realize something and asked, "Lady Gill, the day that Jackson helped you find the jade pendant, wasn't that the same day the incident occurred?"

Lady Gill asked reflexively, "How did you know?"

How did she know?

Of course, it was because, on that day, Jackson snatched away Nara's jade pendant!

Afterward, she even went purposefully to the hospital, asking Jackson to return it to Nara... At the time, she had only caught a glimpse and hadn't seen it.

But now...

In an instant, Keira understood something!!

The Novel will be updated on this website. Come back and continue reading tomorrow, everyone!