

My Accidental Husband is a Billionaire

#Chapter 477 -480

Read My Accidental Husband is a Billionaire Chapter 477

477 Chapter 476

Leaving these words behind, Lady Gill strode away.

Upon hearing this, Austin panicked a little.

He stared at Lady Gill from behind with clenched fists. He still didn't dare to acknowledge what he had just been told.

No, he didn't dare.

He couldn't accept that he had bullied the sister he'd searched for so many years to such an extent...

He looked at Lady Gill, then turned to glance at Jackson one more time.

Jackson stood there with the help of others, his legs wide apart to protect his injured crotch...

He sounded frantic. "Austin, you must believe me!"

As soon as these words came out, Austin charged in front of him, grabbed his collar, and growled, "Tell me, she's not my sister, is she?"

"No, she's not!"

Austin glared at Jackson, his fingers trembling.

After a long moment, he pushed Jackson away and patted his shoulder. "Good, remember what you said."

After leaving that sentence behind, he headed out the door, following in the footsteps of Lady Gill.

Outside the operating room.

Lady Gill rushed over and, upon reaching the entrance, hesitated.

She dared not believe what she had been told and even feared to verify it...

Was the girl she had forced to jump off the building Barbara?!

Lady Gill trembled.

Just then, Matias saw her. Furious, he stormed up to Lady Gill, grabbing her arm forcefully. "What exactly did you do to Nara?! Why did she jump off the building?!"

Some people witnessed Nara's fall from the building.

So, they could testify that she jumped off by herself and nobody pushed her...

Thus, the hospital didn't call the police.

But Matias knew that Nara had just received her acceptance letter from the Nora Research Institute and wouldn't choose to commit suicide at this time.

They must have forced Nara to do something...

Lady Gill looked at Matias.

Although she was unsure if Nara was her daughter, she still felt vaguely guilty. While she was at a loss for words, Austin suddenly charged over and pushed Matias away. "What are you doing? Let go of my mother!"

Matias stumbled back and nearly fell to the ground.

He glared at them and charged at them again. "Were you on the rooftop too? Then tell me, what did you do to Nara?!"

As Matias charged at him, Austin sternly rebuked, "Don't be too presumptuous! If you come any closer, I'll make a move! You're no match for me!"

Matias stood opposite them and glared at them.

After a long silence, he suddenly said, "Do you know that Nara is the daughter you have been searching for seventeen years? How can you treat Nara like this and not regret it?!"

Austin rebuked angrily before Lady Gill could speak, "I told you she's not! Stop spouting nonsense here!"

She simply couldn't accept this fact!

Matias, overwhelmed with emotion, rushed toward them. "I understand now. The day she went to acknowledge you, she returned so dejected. It was because you denied her! If you don't want her, she's still my dear sister! You've hurt her, and I'll fight you to the death!!"

As Matias said this, he lifted the cane and swung it hard at Austin.

Austin wanted to push him away, but he suddenly thought about how Nara swung a stick at his head on the rooftop.

At that time, she must have been so unafraid. She had already decided to end it all by jumping off the building; such a person wouldn't usually show mercy...

With just a little bit more force, his head would have burst open.

But she ultimately held back.

This thought made Austin hesitate, and he turned his back, taking the blow without resisting.

Enraged, Matias lifted his cane to continue his onslaught after the first blow.

"I'll punish you for bullying Nara! Why did you search for her if you don't want her? Is it because she grew up with me and didn't have the grace of your wealthy family? Or is it because Nara is mute, and you look down on her?"

"Even if you don't want to acknowledge her, you didn't have to drive her to death! How could you do that?!"

As Matias hit and cursed, suddenly he threw down his cane, crouched down, and started sobbing, "When I found Nara, she was burning with fever, and it rendered her mute. While unconscious, she kept saying, 'Brother, run'... Austin, you bastard, you're her brother!!"

Austin was distressed by his crying.

But listening to those words, he felt as if his heart were clenched by an invisible hand!

He looked at Matias and roared again, "I said she's not my sister, so don't talk nonsense! Jackson has already said he found our sister!!"

"Not her?"

Upon hearing this, Matias suddenly looked up.

He raised his hands, which were covered in Nara's blood from just now.

He thrust his bloody hands in front of them. "If you don't believe me, then go test it!"

His demeanor startled Austin.

He looked at Lady Gill for help.

Lady Gill pressed her lips tightly but suddenly said, "Fine, let's test it now."

478 Chapter 477

Lady Gill nodded at the butler behind her.

The butler immediately found a nurse, took a cotton swab, collected a blood sample from Matias's hand, and then turned to Austin.

Before Austin could speak, Lady Gill plucked a strand of her hair and handed it to the butler, "Hurry up!"

"Yes!"

The butler hurried away.

Austin looked at Lady Gill. "Mom, how could you go through with the verification?! How could you believe his nonsense?!"

His voice was frantic, with a plea in it. "How could I possibly not recognize my sister? I loved my sister the most when I was a kid, and she was abducted by human traffickers when trying to save me. If she stood before me, there's no way I wouldn't recognize her..."

"So, she can't be my sister... right, it's impossible... Mom, don't be fooled by them!"

Keira listened to his words and suddenly turned to look at him. "Austin, are you scared?"

Austin was startled.

Keira stepped toward him. "You're afraid that Nara, who has been persecuted by you to this extent and may not get out of the operating room alive, is your biological sister, aren't you?!"

Austin took a step back, shocked by her blunt accusation.

Immediately afterward, he retorted, "Nonsense! I told you that girl couldn't be my sister!!"

"Thump!"

Matias threw a jade pendant on the ground.

Matias looked at them angrily. "Aren't you looking all over the city for this jade pendant? My sister has worn one since she was a child! And you still don't believe it?!"

When Nara decided not to acknowledge her parents and brother, she tried to throw away this jade pendant. Later, Matias saw it in the trash can and retrieved it for her.

Seeing the jade pendant, Austin was slightly taken aback.

Immediately, he picked up the jade pendant, examined it in his hand, and then scoffed coldly. "Matias, you're so ridiculous. Knowing that our family is looking for the owner of this jade pendant, you brought a fake one to deceive us! You're something!"

Matias was dumbfounded, "Fake?"

The jade pendant had been on his sister's neck all along, and it was there when they found her, so over the years, Matias had never examined it closely.

Even when their parents were sick and had no money to stay in the hospital, their family had never thought about pawning this jade pendant.

Because they thought the jade pendant was valuable.

But this jade pendant was fake?!

Matias frowned. "That's impossible! My sister has been wearing this jade pendant since she was little!"

"You're still lying!" Austin seemed to find a reason to convince himself. "Mom, do you see? They're lying! The girl in the operating room can't possibly be my sister!"

Lady Gill looked at him but didn't speak.

Keira laughed coldly. "So the jade pendant is a fake, no wonder... heh..."

Austin immediately turned to her, "Why do you say that?"

Keira said, "Jackson took Nara's jade pendant and told me to get it back from him, and he gave me this one! No wonder it's fake... He has given the real one to you! He said he had found your sister but already knew Nara was your sister!"

"You're lying!" Austin roared at her. "That's impossible! You can't fool me! I won't believe a single word you say!"

Keira watched his violent reaction and let out a cold laugh, saying nothing more.

Seeing her mocking expression, Austin felt even closer to breaking down. He yelled, "Don't even think about deceiving me! You are all tricking me! How could I possibly have bullied my sister?!"

"My mom is already getting a DNA test done, and we'll have the results in half an hour at the latest. Then I'll see how you can deceive me then!"

After saying this, Austin took Lady Gill to the side.

Yet his gaze couldn't help but remain fixed on the operating room door, his mind flashing back to the sudden familiarity he felt upon seeing Nara...

Austin shook his head fiercely.

What was he thinking about?

That was impossible...

Nara absolutely couldn't be his sister!!

But as he tried to convince himself, he failed to notice he had tears in his eyes, and his gaze couldn't help but settle back on the operating room.

When he was bullying Nara, he didn't feel much of anything, but right now, he found himself hoping that the person inside the operating room would come out safe and sound...

Before they knew it, half an hour had passed.

Suddenly, a rapid rush of footsteps came closer – it was Gerald, the butler, carrying a DNA test report.

His expression was solemn. He had only just approached when Austin cut him off. "Gerald, are the results out? Tell me! Surely they're lying, right?!"

Upon hearing this, Gerald showed a hint of hesitation.

He handed the test report to Lady Gill.

Trembling all over, Lady Gill stared at the piece of paper in her hand...

Unfolding the report would determine her fate...

Seeing she was afraid to look at it, Austin snatched it away. "Mom, why are you hesitating? I've already told you that girl can't be my sister! Let me see it!"

With that, he immediately unfolded the paper! His eyes first landed on the result, and he became rigid as if struck by lightning. He froze on the spot.

...A 99.99% probability of being biological mother and daughter.

479 Chapter 478

Austin stared at the report in disbelief.

He was completely stunned.

His hands began to tremble. "This can't be true! How can this be possible..."

Upon hearing his exclamation, Lady Gill immediately picked up the report, and after seeing the test results, she swayed.

Then, her gaze immediately turned to the operating room, and she threw herself toward it, frantically knocking on the door.

"Barbara, my Barbara! You must save her for me! Save her!!"

Lady Gill screamed.

Seeing this, Gerald couldn't help but sigh and quickly called all the hospital's experts over.

Doctors and nurses passed by the operating theater in a flurry, quickly entering the room.

It wasn't long before the hospital director arrived. "Lady Gill, what happened?"

Lady Gill grabbed the director. "I command you, by any means necessary, to save the girl in the operating room! That's my daughter, my flesh and blood! I've been searching for her for seventeen years!!"

She wept bitterly!

Receiving this order, the director immediately nodded. "Alright, Lady Gill, please calm down. I'll go in and see..."

After that, the director re-entered the operating room.

Inside the operating room, many doctors had already gathered by now.

When the director walked over, he asked solemnly, "What's the situation?"

"It's not looking good!"

The head surgeon was operating. "There are points of hemorrhage in the organs, but we just can't see where! It must be felt by hand, but no one in our hospital's surgery team can do that yet!"

As the head surgeon spoke, beads of sweat were rolling down his forehead.

He was panicked!

Who would have thought that what was supposed to be a simple rescue from a suicide attempt would turn out to involve the precious daughter of the Gill family?!

If she didn't make it, he feared he might not be able to stay at the hospital any longer!!

Thinking of this, the head surgeon trembled even more.

"Oh no, the patient's blood pressure is dropping, and her heartbeat is slowing!"

The nurse reminded him, which sent the head surgeon into further panic. "What do we do now? I've been feeling around here for so long, but I can't find the hemorrhage point! The amount of blood inside the organs is so obvious... No matter how much blood we transfuse, it's useless if we can't find the spot!"

Nara had sustained very severe injuries from the fall.

If it hadn't happened right in the hospital or without Lady Gill's deadly command, they might have already given up resuscitation!

The girl was bleeding out as blood was transfused into her system! Now, they were maintaining Nara's vital signs by performing four transfusions simultaneously, which barely kept her alive.

Seeing this, the director immediately walked out of the room.

As he stepped out, Lady Gill and Austin rushed over.

"Doctor, how is my daughter?"

"Doctor, how is my sister?"

The director hastily said, "Lady Gill, Mr. Gill, Miss Gill's situation is critical; she's lost too much blood..."

"Then transfuse blood!" Lady Gill roared. "No matter how much blood is needed, our family will pay for it!"

Austin also shouted anxiously, "Are you running out of plasma? It doesn't matter, take mine! My sister and I are both type B! Take mine!"

While saying this, he extended his arm.

Seeing this, the director sighed, "It's not that we don't have enough blood. Besides, Mr. Gill, you and Miss Gill are siblings. You can't give a transfusion to each other. It could cause hemolytic disease."

Austin had been ready to extend his arm forward, but he silently withdrew his arm upon hearing the latter part.

Lady Gill then asked, "Then what's the matter?!"

"Miss Gill has a ruptured organ and is bleeding out quickly. We can't locate the hemorrhage point at all. It's quite urgent, and we need to resort to blind stitching! The doctor has to depend on experience to determine where the bleeding is and then suture it. This kind of surgery is hazardous! So, I came here to give you a forewarning first."

Upon hearing this, Lady Gill staggered once again.

Austin was shocked. "How can you be unable to locate the bleeding?! If you go on like this, how could my sister recover?!"

The director sighed. "The hemorrhage point is too hard to find. She's bleeding too fast, and the equipment can't detect it... we've done our best!"

Lady Gill's face turned pale.

Austin then fiercely slapped himself, his eyes suddenly welling up with tears. "It's my fault! I'm the scoundrel who forced my sister to jump!"

"If my sister doesn't make it, I don't want to live either!"

Saying this, he leaned against the wall and slid down onto the floor.

Lady Gill looked at the director and demanded, "No matter what, you must save my daughter! She can't die!"

The director sighed. "Lady Gill, I can't guarantee that... After all, the risk of blind stitching is too great. For now, we could only say that your precious daughter might have a chance of surviving if Nora were here..."

Lady Gill was confused. "How could Nora possibly be here? Hasn't she always been abroad? I'll contact her right now!"

The director sighed. "But it would take time for Nora to fly back from abroad, whereas Miss Gill simply can't wait any longer..."

480 Chapter 479

Keira, standing nearby, was slightly startled when she heard this.

Why her?

She wasn't trained skilled in surgery at all!

Because of her research on medication, she knew a bit about medical science...

As she was thinking, Austin also asked the same question. "Isn't Nora someone who researches medication? Why can she save my sister?"

The dean said, "Miss Gill's is bleeding internally. Currently, we're gambling our luck and trying to guess where the bleeding point is. Suturing the wound carries a great psychological risk, and everyone's very nervous! At this point, the only person who could keep her hand absolutely steady is probably Nora."

After saying this, he explained, "As far as I know, Nora's hands are incredibly steady. Back when she was abroad, she participated in a surgery where the lead surgeon was too shaky to operate, and it was Nora who stepped in and completed the procedure. Her mindset and state are naturally cut out for surgery!"

Keira didn't know what to say.

So that was the reason.

Her hands didn't shake simply because it came from turning screws in Oceanion!

After leaving the Olsen family, she worked several jobs.

She first worked as a courier and eventually grew into creating her own courier company.

As a chef, she ultimately took over her master's restaurant.

She even cleaned at a horse track and dabbled in the computer industry...

Back then, she desperately needed money and was too young to meet the legal age for temporary work, so she could only work for a couple of hours in different place, essentially getting paid by the hour.

She was paid little for doing lots of work.

She worked harder than others, striving to keep a stable job, she had to perform better than the rest so that her boss would realize her excellence and would continue to secretly employ her, an underage worker.

This led her to be the best she could be in each industry according to her understanding at the time.

Even in the unskilled job of turning screws, she earned the title of "Senior Fitter" in the factory!

It was all thanks to her steady hands!

So, upon hearing this, she immediately stood up. "My hands are very steady. I'll do it."

At her words, several people turned to look at her.

The dean instantly frowned. "Well..."

Lady Gill stared at her.

Austin immediately said, "Keera, don't mess around! That's my sister!"

Keira ignored him and walked straight to the dean, "My hands are very steady, and I've been involved in several surgeries. Just tell me what to do, I can handle it."

The dean sized her up and after a long pause finally said, "Young lady, what you think of as steady hands is actually different from what we in the medical field define as steady hands. That..."

Before he could finish, Keira walked straight to the operating room door and said, "Stop wasting time, hurry up, isn't the person about to not make it?"

The dean: ?

Lady Gill frowned. "Miss Olsen..."

Keira looked at her. "Lady Gill, you don't trust me?"

Lady Gill bit her lip.

After a moment, she turned to the dean and issued a direct command. "Let her have a try!"

The dean was dumbfounded. "Lady Gill..."

Lady Gill turned back to Austin. "Contact Nora immediately and see if she has time to perform surgery on your sister!"

Austin replied, "Yes!"

Seeing that she had said nothing further, the dean then proceeded to lead Keira into the operating room.

As they entered, the dean couldn't help but whisper to Keira. "Miss Olsen, isn't it? Volunteering at this time is unwise! Normally, people's hands don't shake, but seeing a bloody scene and performing micro-operations is an extreme test! Many veteran surgeons can't do it. You can still back out now..."

Keira had no intention of wasting words with him and went straight to the sterilization room and changing area, having a nurse help her change into the scrub.

She then walked to the operating table and looked at the lead surgeon.

The lead surgeon's face was covered in sweat; he was extraordinarily tense.

The data showing on various instruments indicated that Nara's condition was far from stable. Any further delay would certainly result in her death!

At that moment, a delicate, slender hand reached over, taking over the surgical procedure, followed by a woman's calm voice. "What needs to be done? You direct, I'll do it."

...

Outside the operating room.

Lady Gill and Austin were pacing back and forth.

Austin couldn't help but look in the direction of the operating room and complained softly, "Mom, how could you let Keera mess around like this? How could she possibly save my sister?! If something happens to my sister..."

Lady Gill was frustrated and also felt some apprehension for not having stopped the action earlier.

She didn't know what had come over her, but after meeting "Keera's" gaze, she had impulsively felt that "Keera" could do it!

Now she was extremely anxious...

Lady Gill turned to Matias. "Do you know if Miss Olsen is skilled in medicine?"

Matias, who had been staring blankly at the operating room, heard this and tightened his jaw. He shook his head but then added, "I believe she must have her reasons for doing this! Keera never acts out of line!"

Austin couldn't help but curse angrily, "You believe? What good is your belief?! Why didn't you say something earlier!"

He then looked anxiously at Lady Gill, "Mom, what is she doing? If my sister dies because she's not treated properly, I won't let Keera off!"

"Shut up!"

Lady Gill scolded, "Didn't you hear what the doctor said? Your sister is in a life-or-death situation, they can't handle it at all! Even if something really happens...it has nothing to do with Miss Olsen! Don't you dare to escalate the feud between the Gill family and the Olsen family!"

Austin, furious, paced back and forth, looking toward the operating room again. He suddenly kicking the wall. "She must have done it on purpose. She's murdering my sister to deprive me of the chance to be forgiven by my sister!"

As he said this, he slowly squatted down.

Then he covered his head. "She knows Nara is my sister, so she's deliberately doing this to me, just to make me feel guilty and to make sure that I won't forgive myself! Keera is such a terrifying woman, how could she be so ruthless?!"

Lady Gill looked at Austin, knowing he had entered a dead end.

She didn't speak any more.

Matias also swallowed nervously; at the moment of life and death for his sister, he was too distressed to bother explaining Keera's character to Austin...

All three were nervously staring at the operating room.

Time passed, and finally, the doors of the operating room opened, and they tensed up immediately.

