

A Journey 371

Chapter 371 The Three Beauties

Archer rushed inside and made his way to the bedroom where he left the eggs. When he opened the door he stopped in shock.

Three tiny Hydras the size of kittens were causing chaos in the bedroom, by ripping up the sheets and letting out cute roars as they dashed around.

He stood in awe at the scene before him. Each one had five heads which sat on long necks that moved like a serpent, and their bodies were a striking combination of black and violet shades.

They stood on four legs and had little tails that swayed behind them as they rushed around the room.

At first glance, their appearance might have seemed sinister, but all he sensed was a profound sense of love coming from them.

The Hydras collectively shifted their attention to him when he made a noise, they started emitting little chirps of excitement as they scurried toward him.

Without hesitation, they jumped on him as he squatted down, where they showered him with affectionate licks and made adorable sounds as he stroked each one.

His laughter filled the air, catching Llynriel's attention. She entered the cabin and was met with the heartwarming sight of the three tiny beasts frolicking all over Archer.

The three siblings were licking him and nibbling anything they could get a hold of. Once they calmed down they sat down in front of him.

Archer got up himself and saw thirty pairs of violet eyes watching him with love. That's when he noticed the one in the middle was bigger than the other two.

He looked closer and saw that all three were girls which made him roll his eyes before speaking to them in a sweet voice. "So you little girls came from the eggs?"

They all nodded as their eyes shined causing Llyniel to laugh, Archer looked back at her with a smile. "How long have you been there?"

"Not long. I heard you laughing and came to see what was happening. Who knew you had three new girls, who now see you as their Father." She said in a teasing voice.

Archer chuckled before speaking. "How do you know that?"

Llyniel's smile radiated warmth as she talked. "I can sense the deep affection they hold for you, and your mana seems to envelop them entirely. You must have aided in their hatching with your magic, and now they view you as their parent."

He nodded with a smile as he turned to the three babies who were staring at him in love and wonder.

With a tender tone in his voice, Archer addressed them. "You girls are staying with me from now on. I can't bear to part with such little beauties, can I?"

When the Hydra heard him they suddenly launched themselves at him and started showering him with even more affection by licking his face and nibbling his ears.

Llyniel giggled at their reaction as Archer got them off him, they started to look heartbroken.

But he quickly comforted them with a smile. "Don't worry girls nothing will happen. I just want to give you three names."

They all nodded and let out more happy chirps as they stared at him. He decided to scan them.

[Abyss Hydra]

[Rank SS+]

Archer looked at the two smaller ones and gave them their names. "You two smaller girls will be called Raven and Sable."

He turned to the bigger girl and continued. "You will be Azura."

After his heartfelt words, Archer gently lifted each of the girls, placing them with care on his broad shoulders.

The three Hydra sisters quickly settled into comfortable spots, their multiple heads curling up as they lay down, content and secure in their newfound bond with him.

They were still letting out happy chirps as some of their heads nudged him. Archer turned to the wood elf with a smile before speaking.

"Let's round up the monster army and go home. Pack up whatever you want in your garden. I have a better place for you to create one." He said with a smile as he walked outside.

Llyniel gave him a bright smile before she ran out to her garden followed by the spirits.

Before she got outside Sable chirped at her. The wood elf turned around and spoke. "Little Sable, I will be back soon. We can play after."

The Hydra nodded her five heads and got comfortable again. Archer made his way outside the cabin and walked to Remy's cave.

When he got there he put the three girls down who looked disappointed but he explained. "I need to do something. Also, I need to get you food so just wait." "I think you should take a look at Azura chirped at him for her sisters as he smiled and walked away from them. Archer took a deep breath and let out the loudest roar.

It echoed for miles and when he was done he sent messages to the three queens that he would come get them soon.

He walked back over to the sisters and picked them up causing them to let out more adorable noises as they licked his cheeks.

Rexy was already standing outside her den and looked at him before he explained. "Everyone is moving to their new home."

The large dinosaur nodded her head and sat down when a rumbling could be felt. That's when all the different roars could be heard.

A swarm of millions of Netherbeasts appeared shocking the three sisters, Rexy and Llynriel who mumbled. "Didn't you go overboard? I can't even see the land around us anymore."

Archer started laughing as he felt Azura nibble his ear and looked at the three babies sitting on his shoulders.

He found them adorable and was glad he received the eggs now. Archer summoned his wings and flew into the air.

As he hovered there he used mana to power his voice and talk to his Monster Army. "My Netherbeasts! You all shall move into a new and better home. You all will grow strong and will become a force of fear."

The beasts roared in support as he continued. "Only one group of Netherbeasts will be allowed to pass through at a time. You must find a home and no hunting any of your fellow soldiers, just the beasts I put in there which will be the ones not here today. If I find out any of you are hunting each other I will kill you. Understand?"

All the Netherbeasts roared as he descended to the ground and opened a portal to allow the first batch of creatures to enter.

Archer kept the portal open for hours as the untold amounts of Netherbeasts passed through it and were finding homes.

He stepped through himself under the shocked eyes of Llynriel, she followed behind him and looked around in wonder.

Her eyes widened when she saw the beautiful landscape that looked alive and thriving. She turned to Archer with question marks on her head.

When he saw this he started to laugh before speaking. "I will explain later."

Archer closed his eyes again and increased the size of the domain again while adding more biomes for his army.

As he finished the landscape he imagined a large and powerful wall that blocked off his people from the Monster Army.

Most of the land in the domain was used for his army while the rest was left for the people here which was more than enough for them.

Even if they had a population boom they would have more than enough room to house and feed them but just in case he increased the size of their land as well.

He sent a message to Jethro informing the old man what was going on and that a new rule had been established.

'No one is allowed to cross the wall and if they do they will die.'

Once he was done with that he returned to the Nether Realm and cast Stone Warden hundreds of times.

Archer ordered them to go capture any Netherbeasts they found and throw them in the portal which they did for as long as the portal was open.

Days passed like this as the Monster Army kept entering the portal and it was never-ending, while the Stone Men threw screaming Netherbeasts into Archer's domain.

Archer was sitting under a dead tree with the Azura on his lap as the Sable and Raven played with each other.

He ordered some Stone Men to bring him a few dead Netherbeasts for the girls to eat. They soon returned with Ox-looking creatures.

They threw them down before going back to work. Archer looked at the Hydras and spoke. "Go eat my little girls. Get big and strong so you can fight alongside me."

The little creatures rushed over to the bodies and all fifteen heads started eating. When they did that Archer noticed their little bodies glowing.

He saw that they were growing slowly as they ate the Netherbeast's flesh. Archer closed his eyes to sense the mana.

As he did that he sensed a lot coming from the creature they were eating. So he made his way over to the three.

Chapter 372 Moving In

He touched each one and injected some of his mana into them. When the three felt that, their little bodies shivered as they turned to look at him.

Their violet eyes glowed before turning back to their meal and started eating. The girls were too busy with eating to think about anything else.

As they were eating they started to grow, the three were now the size of large cats and Archer was mystified as to why they were growing so quickly.

He had read about Hydra's before and these three weren't like anything he the ones he knew about from the book.

Archer injected at least half of his mana into them and again they grew to the size of a large dog which shocked him.

Once he was done with that he left them to eat as much as they wanted. He went back to supervise the Monster Army entering the domain.

There were still so many Netherbeasts that needed to enter so he decided to go get the three queens and let them find a home in the domain.

He cast Gate to the Nightmare ant nest. When the sisters heard his steps they all looked at him and noticed he was leaving.

They rushed after him while letting out panicked chirps to get his attention which they did.

Archer turned to them with a big smile. "I'm not leaving you beauties behind, you can come with me."

They let out happy noises as they followed behind him as he entered the portal and appeared outside the colony.

When he did the warrior ants became aware but noticed it was only Archer and relaxed. He walked through the tunnels followed by the sisters who kept letting out adorable chirps.

They kept coming up to him and licking his face and rubbing their heads against him which gave them a smile before kissing each head which took some time but it made them happy.

Once the four reached Vivienne's chambers he saw that it was even busier than before as worker ants rushed all over the place.

Azura, Sable, and Raven's heads looked all over the place with excitement radiating from the three.

Archer noticed that they were going to "play" with the ants but he quickly spoke. "Young ladies. Do not hurt the ants they belong to me. So be nice."

All their heads turned to him but nodded in agreement. Archer smiled when he saw this and asked the Ant Queen Vivienne. "Vivi. Can I get a few beast bodies to feed them?"

The redhead nodded and spoke to some workers who rushed off. When they returned they had half a dozen bodies which they dropped in front of him.

Once that was done he turned to the sisters and spoke. "Eat ladies. We will be leaving soon."

He didn't even need to say anything as they started devouring the bodies with all their heads.

Archer wondered how they could eat so much but shrugged and didn't bother with it anymore as he walked over to Vivienne who was looking at him.

When he got closer he smiled. "Hey Vivi. How have things been? Ready to relocate?"

The ant woman nodded as her eyes didn't leave the three Hydras. She looked at him and spoke. "What are they? They are very powerful but also very young."

Archer looked at the greedy Hydras who were eating their food really fast as they slowly grew which shocked him.

"These little beauties are Abyss Hydra's, I received their eggs back in my realm and decided to hatch them recently, but they are growing so quickly." He spoke to the Ant Queen.

Vivienne nodded her head. "Yes, they will grow very strong if you keep feeding them mana. I don't know if you know this but it looks like they also feed on it."

That's when their growing bigger made sense because he sent Mana into them. But he stopped thinking about that for now as he wanted to move the ants to his domain.

He looked at Vivienne and spoke. "Get your children ready. You can find a new home in here."

When Archer finished speaking he opened a portal to the domain in the middle of the queen's chamber.

Vivienne's eyes widened in astonishment as she saw the scene before her. However, she quickly ordered all the ants to return to the colony.

Meanwhile, Archer was sitting around waiting while the Hydras, who had been relishing the feast provided by the ants, reluctantly watched as their providers scurried away.

Soon after, the ants returned, each carrying more bodies to offer to the ravenous girls, who had now grown to the size of lions which scared the ants and pleased Archer.

After a couple of hours, all the Nightmare Ants were back, he ordered some scouts to go into the domain and find a suitable home for themselves.

While he did this he cast Stone Warden and ordered hundreds of Stone Men to capture every Netherbeast they could find before throwing them into the domain. I think you should take a look at

They rushed off to complete their task. Archer used Mana Manipulation to create a chair near the Azura who was lying down after feasting for ages.

She was the size of a small elephant which bewildered him to no end and wondered what kind of broken existence they were.

But not realizing it was actually him who is an anomaly that shouldn't exist but that's a story for another time.

Archer was looking at the biggest girl before calling to her. "Azura, come here."

All five heads reacted and gazed at him with love in all of their eyes as she walked over to him and sat down.

When she did that he asked in a curious voice. "Can you change your size?"

They instantly nodded and a violet light shone from her and she returned to the size of a kitten.

Azura climbed up him and sat on the top of his head which made him laugh. The other two saw their sister do this before copying her.

They rushed at him and clambered up to sit on his shoulders. Their behaviour was adorable which made him stroke each one.

He got cute noises and little chirps in response as the sisters loved the affection he was showing them.

Archer was pampering them as the ant scouts returned. He heard Vivienne talking to them before approaching him.

While this was happening the Stone Men came and went with all kinds of Netherbeasts in their stone arms.

They just tossed them through the portal before rushing off again, thousands of beasts were captured and were forced to live in the Monster Army part of the domain.

Archer allowed them to start moving in as the Nightmare Drones started walking through the portal as he followed behind.

He walked for a while before arriving at a clearing the ants were digging in. Archer looked around to see that it was the perfect place for them.

More and more ants appeared to help with the construction. It took half a day until they dug down deep enough to create the queen's chambers.

Once that was done the eggs were transported over and when that was over, Vivienne entered the domain.

She was shocked into silence as she saw the beauty around her. There were fresh and living trees all over the place.

Beast roars could be heard in the distance, Vivienne shook her head before speaking. "Thank you for taking us in Archer."

He nodded with a smile before leaving the ants to their work as he returned to a now empty colony.

The sisters were out cold while they relaxed on him. Archer did the same with the Chull who created a nest in a mountain that he created in the north.

The Cave Spiders discovered a spacious cave and diligently began expanding it further through their excavations.

Once he completed this task, he made his way back to the cabin, where he once again pampered the insatiable girls with a pile of the best bodies.

As they were eating he sent mana into all three causing them to let out excited chirps and little roars.

After that, he checked if the Monster Army was in the domain and they were but the Stone Men kept catching more beasts.

Archer let them do that for a while before dismissing them. He went to find the little wood elf and soon found Llyniet putting some plants in her storage ring.

When he reached her he spoke. "Are you ready to leave Llyn? I can create a new and better garden for you."

She gave him a bright smile before answering. "Yes, Arch. Let's go I have everything I need."

He nodded and opened a portal that led outside the treehouse. When they entered Llyniet's eyes widened in amazement as she took in the surroundings.

Archer guided her to a nearby clearing, closing his eyes in concentration as he held her hand while the wood elf looked around still in shock.

He started to create an area just for her with a charming house surrounded by flourishing flower beds that covered the landscape.

This new garden was ten times larger than their cabin in the Nether Realm, truly a remarkable and spacious place.

Chapter 373 War (4)

[The days before Archer returned]

[Starfall City]

Leira, Ella, and Sera helped out during the siege. The redhead rained down fire as the half-elf fired her explosive arrows into the crowds of soldiers.

While the two of them attacked Leira was casting Lightning and Fire spells at them which took out many.

That's when they breached the wall yet again and the Avalon soldiers engaged in a brutal melee but a high-ranked Stormhaven commander flew over the wall.

Sera saw this and transformed into her dragon form before chasing after him. The man tried to evade her but some of her fire blasts hit him.

The skies became their battlefield, a dance of fire and fury. The enemy commander twisted and turned, trying to evade Sera's relentless pursuit, but she was persistent.

As they clashed high above, fire erupted, casting an eerie glow across the sky. Sera's claws clashed with the enemy commander's sword.

They exchanged fierce blows, and the sound of her roar echoed through the air. The battle was ferocious, neither giving an inch as they fought for supremacy in the skies.

In a daring move, Sera lunged forward, her massive jaws snapping shut on the enemy commander's upper body.

She bit down with all her strength. Pain coursed through his veins as he thrashed and screamed in agony.

Unable to bear the torment, the enemy lost control and pulled out something and stabbed her underbelly.

Sera's jaws remained locked onto his body before she tore him in two. Her attack caused the man's two halves to fall out of the sky, crashing into the city below.

Buildings crumbled, and chaos erupted as their impact shook the very ground. Sera, battered and injured, tumbled from the sky, her large form crashing into the street.

She lay unconscious amid the ruins, her breathing shallow and labored, unable to wake from the mysterious substance that coursed through her veins.

The battle still raged on around her, but for now, Sera wasn't waking up as she returned to her humanoid form.

Ella and Leira rushed up to her to help but saw she was covered in injuries. They panicked before taking her back to the palace to get the Healer to see her.

When the Healers tended to her, they mended all the wounds she received but Sera was still out cold.

Days later the two girls took a break from tending to the redhead who still wasn't waking up. Ella prayed for Archer to return so he could help the dragon girl.

[Seastone Port City - The Aquaria Kingdom - Southlands]

Teuila led her troops on night attacks to raid their camps and got the drop on the Solhaven soldiers whom she butchered in their sleep.

Days after the raids, a pitched battle was taking place as Teuila and the general thought it would be good to try to break the siege.

She was leading the Riftbreakers a legendary Aquarian heavy infantry unit that was used to break the enemy's frontlines.

The battle was on the verge of commencing. On one side, the Aquarians stood firm, their armor gleaming with the colors of the ocean, ready for what lay ahead.

Facing them was the formidable Solhaven army, a force to be reckoned with in their own right.

As the sun hung low in the sky, casting a warm glow across the battlefield, Teuila raised her sword high, a signal to the Riftbreakers.

They were known throughout the realm for their strength, and today, they were the vanguard of the Aquarian assault.

With a thunderous roar, Teuila and her Riftbreakers charged forward. Their weapons gleamed in the sunlight as they struck with precision and power.

The Solhaven frontline, caught off guard by the ferocity of the assault, faltered.

Shields shattered as soldiers were sent sprawling to the ground as Teuila and her warriors smashed through their ranks.

The Aquarian infantry surged behind the Riftbreakers, pushing deeper into the enemy lines as they struck down many soldiers.

Victory seemed within their grasp as the enemies struggled to regroup. Teuila's heart swelled with pride as she saw her people fighting valiantly.

But victory was not to come so easily. Just as they gained the upper hand, a loud horn blared from the Solhaven rear.

Her heart sank as she turned to see a fresh wave of enemy reinforcements pouring onto the battlefield.

Their numbers were overwhelming. They swiftly flanked the Aquarian forces, turning the tide of battle.

Teuila's valiant Riftbreakers found themselves surrounded and outnumbered. Despite their heroic efforts, they couldn't withstand the relentless assault from all sides.

Realization hit her like a crashing wave. She knew the battle was lost. With a heavy heart, She shouted orders to retreat, her voice carrying over the turmoil of battle.

The Aquarians began to withdraw, their once-hopeful advance now a desperate scramble to regroup and escape the encircling enemy. I think you should take a look at Teuila watched as her soldiers retreated, her heart heavy with the weight of their losses. She knew they would fight another day, but for now, they had to retreat.

As the Aquarian forces withdrew, she cast a final glance back at the battlefield and saw the Solhaven army chasing after them.

She ordered them to rush back to Seaport City to fight from there but they ended up trapped and on the losing side as the constant attacks wore them down as they lost more soldiers.

[The Northern part of the Zenia Empire]

Nefertiti was leading the Arcane Mage unit and was preparing to attack the enemies that guarded the Sphinx's Watch Pass.

It was their way south and they needed to leave the North due to losing so many men. They never realized how many enemies would join the war which left them on the back foot.

She was finished with her spell when they fired at the Pharothon army which slammed into and wiped out many soldiers.

As the sun beamed down the Zenian general ordered the army to charge forward and soon they slammed into the enemy lines.

They clashed with the Pharothonian army on the vast battlefield like two mighty waves.

The battlefield was a chaotic frenzy as the Zenian army, under the leadership of General Erisa Sharifi, charged headlong into the Pharothonian forces.

Swords clashed, arrows soared, and battle cries filled the air as the soldiers engaged in a fierce and brutal struggle.

The Pharothonian army donned in golden armor adorned with the emblem of the falcon, fought to take land from the Zenians.

Spears thrust, shields clashed, and the ground quaked beneath the weight of the soldiers.

Amidst the chaos, a distant horn sounded from a distant hilltop. Heads turned, and hearts sank as the banner of the Osiria Kingdom emerged.

Its blue and green colors are stark against the sandy terrain. The Osirian forces, renowned for their formidable cavalry, galloped into the battlefield, flanking the Zenian army.

Nefertiti, a formidable mage and leader of the Arcane Mages, raised her hand high, invoking the arcane powers within.

Her mages began to cast spells, launching torrents of fire, lightning, and ice towards the enemy.

However, their concentration was shattered as the Osirian cavalry, swift and ruthless, slammed into them with thunderous force.

Nefertiti herself was caught in the onslaught as she struggled to defend against the enemy's ferocious charge.

Suddenly, from the midst of the enemy, a lone rider emerged, charging directly at Nefertiti with a gleaming lance in hand.

With lightning speed, the cavalryman closed the distance. Her eyes widened in realization, but it was too late to evade the approaching strike.

The lance struck true, piercing through the ranks of the mages, and Nefertiti herself was grievously wounded.

She staggered back, and Nefertiti collapsed to the ground as pain coursed through her body. The mages, loyal and unwavering, immediately formed a protective circle around her.

As the enemy cavalry continued their attacks, the mages summoned their last reserves of magic.

They created a shimmering barrier, a final act of sacrifice, to shield Nefertiti from further harm and make sure that she lived.

The barrier crackled with energy as it absorbed the onslaught of the enemy's assault. The brave mages, their faces marked with determination.

Everyone present knew that their sacrifice would buy precious moments for the soldiers to come to the princess's aid.

Nefertiti watched as her comrades, one by one, fell under the relentless assault. Soon, the sound of galloping hooves drew nearer.

Zenian soldiers arrived, charging in to repel the enemy cavalry and provide much-needed assistance.

They fought fiercely to protect Nefertiti, whose injuries were severe and they rushed her back to Sobek Castle.

As the battle raged on, the mages lay still, their bodies motionless, having given their lives to protect their princess.

The Zenian soldiers fought fiercely to push back the invaders, their courage unwavering.

General Erisa, witnessing the chaos on the battlefield, raised her sword high and ordered a retreat.

The Zenian army, battered but not broken, began to disengage from the relentless combined might of the Pharothonian and Osirian forces.

They vowed to regroup and return as they withdrew to safety, resolved to defend their homeland once more in the battles yet to come.

Chapter 374 War (Final)

[Arcadian Castle - The Solari Empire - The Land Of Mediterra]

Hemera was standing on the castle walls watching the enemy armies setting up their siege camps.

All over Mediterra the Solarians and Lunarians were winning battles but all of a sudden they were attacked from the east by an army of pirates and bandits.

The emperors dispatched any spare soldiers to the east to put a stop to it. But this left the western border weak.

That's when the Delphosian Republic and their allies attacked. They laid siege to castles along the Hyacinth River.

The Solarians tried to launch an attack to disrupt the enemy, but they were repulsed while losing hundreds of soldiers.

Talila was useful as she fired her mana arrows into the crowd of soldiers causing explosions all over the place.

But the Delphosian, Aeternumians, and Achaeans returned the attacks with ones of their own that hit the already damaged walls.

They fired their siege engines that sent mana blasts crashing into the castle's protective shield.

The commander who was in charge of the Arcadian castle was Hemera's cousin Kostas Solari rushed up to her to report the situation.

"Princess. The Delphosians are getting ready for an attack. While the Aeternumians and Achaeans are attacking on two other sides."

Kostas looked over the landscape and sighed to himself as he continued. "I was hoping you could ask Princess Talila to head to the Eastern Wall and take out the siege towers."

Hemera looked up at her cousin who she wasn't really close with but answered. "Yes, I'll ask her right away."

She rushed off to find the elf adventurer and found her bombarding the Delphosian soldiers who tried to bring ladders to the wall.

Upon spotting her, Talila's face lit up with a warm smile before she spoke, "Aunty, is something wrong?"

Hemera smiled and answered. "Kostas asked if you could go to the Eastern Wall to deal with the towers that are approaching."

Talila nodded her head before running across the wall but it was too crowded so she jumped up on the side and ran along that.

Her actions shocked everyone around as she reached the Eastern Wall and started firing her mana arrows at the enemy.

Talila's keen eyes scanned the horizon, and with a deep breath, she focused her energy on her bow.

Enemy siege towers loomed on the horizon, threatening to breach the city's defenses.

With a steady hand and unwavering concentration, Talila drew her mana-infused arrow and nocked it onto her bowstring.

The elf whispered an incantation. As she released the arrow, it streaked across the sky, leaving a shimmering trail of mana in its wake.

It struck one of the advancing siege towers with pinpoint accuracy, and a brilliant explosion erupted, showering the enemy with fiery debris.

Talila's eyes never wavered from her targets. With each shot, she unleashed the destructive force of her mana-infused arrows.

Her attacks were causing explosions that sent enemy soldiers scrambling for cover.

The siege towers, once a formidable threat, crumbled before her relentless onslaught. When the Solarians saw this they were amazed at the girl's power.

Talila's mana-infused arrows proved to be a devastating asset, turning the tide of the battle in favor of their besieged city.

She continued to rain down destruction upon the enemy siege towers until they lay in ruins, their threat neutralized.

Hemera rushed up to her again and spoke. "We need help at the western wall they are about to climb up.

Talila nodded as she followed the Sun Elf along the wall but once they got closer a mighty explosion erupted from the wall they were running to.

Thrown from the towering wall, the two women plummeted to the courtyard below, their bodies colliding with the ground.

They lay there for a moment, disoriented by the impact before their senses gradually returned, and they realized the dangerous situation.

Their surroundings came into focus, and they spotted enemy soldiers fighting on the ramparts above.

The Solarians, outnumbered and outmatched, found themselves in a dire predicament as they were cut down without mercy.

Overwhelmed and unable to resist, the Solarians were quickly subdued and captured.

Meanwhile, the vanguard took custody of Hemera and Talila, who had been instrumental in the city's defense.

In response to the unfolding chaos, the Delphosians issued orders to the Aeternumians, instructing them to locate and capture any members of the eastern empires' royal families.

What they didn't know is that shortly after that the devil alongside his army would descend onto Mediterra and forever change it. I think you should take a look at

[Sia Silverthrone - Sentinel Reach Castle - The Summerfield Duchy]

When Sia heard that the Emperor's Vanguard Legion had arrived in the south and had already beaten two Duskmire armies and were making their way toward them.

As the news spread the soldier's morale skyrocketed and they waited for him to arrive. Sia was standing on the wall when she saw a dust cloud in the distance.

It was heading in their direction and she guessed it was her Father. They all waited until they saw banners with a white wolf's head on them.

Sia turned to Valeria with a smile as she spoke. "We can finally get the upper hand in this war without getting beat all the time."

But she spoke too soon as another dust cloud could be seen in the opposite direction but this one was much bigger.

That's when her Father's army picked up the pace and made it to the castle. As they entered the Duskmire, Silverpeak, Everfallen, and Shadowfen Kingdoms armies all converged on them.

They quickly set up a siege camp and blockaded the city. When Albert got off his horse he saw Sia walking up to him looking worn out.

Albert smiled as he hugged her and spoke in a teasing voice. "Little Sia. You're going to be a married woman soon you got to look after yourself or a certain dragon will burn down the continent."

She laughed as she hugged him back before explaining the situation. "Well, now we have four armies breathing down our necks so let's prepare the defenses."

He nodded his head and ordered his army to rest before joining the defenders on the wall.

For days on end, the Avalonians and Moonhaven armies had stood united, defending Sentinels Reach against the relentless assaults of the four enemy armies.

The air was thick with tension as the clash of steel, the roar of war cries, and the boom of mana cannons filled every moment.

From the besieging armies of Duskmire, Silverpeak, Everfallen, and Shadowfen, waves of soldiers launched their assaults, each resolved to breach the castle's formidable defenses.

The soldiers on the walls fought back with powerful mana cannons, shooting beams of mana at the enemy, which briefly slowed down their advance.

The nights were ablaze with the eerie glow of the ongoing battle, as the cannons illuminated the darkness and sent enemy soldiers scattering.

The defenders of Sentinel Reach held strong, their determination unwavering in the face of overwhelming odds.

Yet, despite their valor, the enemy forces eventually managed to breach the castle's outer defenses.

The battle that followed was a brutal and grueling affair, as the enemy soldiers fought fiercely for control of Sentinel Reach.

In the cramped courtyards and narrow corridors, every inch of ground was contested.

The clash of blades, the roar of war chants, and the spatter of blood painted a harrowing picture of the struggle for dominance.

The defenders, now fighting a desperate last stand within the castle walls, refused to yield.

Days turned into nights, and nights into days, as the battle raged on. The once-mighty castle became a battleground soaked in the blood of both friend and foe.

The defenders of Sentinel Reach, though outnumbered and exhausted, held their ground with unwavering resolve, fighting not just for a fortress but for their way of life.

But as the relentless enemy onslaught continued, it became clear that the fate of Sentinel Reach hung in the balance.

The defenders could only hope that their resilience would endure and that reinforcements or a miracle would arrive to turn the tide in their favor.

In the final courtyard, surrounded by the chaos of battle, Sia and Albert stood side by side, their weapons at the ready.

The clash of swords and the cries of combat echoed around them as they defended their last stronghold with unwavering determination.

The fight was brutal, with enemy soldiers pressing in from all sides. Sia and Albert fought valiantly, their skill and resolve shining through in every strike and parry.

But as time wore on, the relentless assault took its toll.

Amidst the chaos, Sia found herself overwhelmed for a brief moment, and before she could react, she was captured by enemy soldiers.

Albert, fighting fiercely to protect her, suffered a similar fate, his efforts to free Sia in vain.

With their hands bound and their weapons confiscated, they were hauled off to the dungeons, the heavy iron doors closing behind them.

In the dimly lit, cold cell, they shared a knowing look, their spirits unbroken. Battered and bruised Albert sat up and looked at a sulking Sia. "When is that boy going to return?"

When Sia heard that she smiled as the two of them spoke about everything and used this opportunity to catch up.

Chapter 375 The Monster Armies Debut

Llyniel was excited as she rushed around the garden showing the spirits who followed behind her.

They were gossiping about Archer who they kept peeking out now and then. When he was watching Llyniel he heard footsteps behind him.

He turned around to see a panicking Hecate rushing toward him. When she saw him notice her she spoke.

"Hemera and Talila are in trouble, trapped at the border of the Solari Empire. They're encircled by the Republic's allies, and Starfall City is on the verge of falling. Inside the city, Ella, Sera, and Leira are also trapped, but Sera is unconscious due to something one of the enemy commanders did to her."

When Archer heard this his temper exploded before asking about the others, but Hecate looked away and hesitated as she knew he was going to go mad when he heard the rest.

But he spoke in a voice that was on the brink of losing it. "Tell me now Hecate! What has happened."

"Sia and Albert Silverthrone were captured as the south fell. Teuila is fighting a losing battle in Aquaria, as Seastone Port City is being attacked from land and sea."

She gazed at Archer, who was trembling with anger, but she pressed on.

"Nefertiti sustained severe injuries while aiding the army's breakthrough, but unfortunately, their efforts did not succeed, and took refuge in the Sobek Castle while barely hanging on."

Archer looked at her and spoke. "I'm not angry with you but these stupid kingdoms think they can take advantage of my absence and now they will pay."

He sent out a message to his Monster Army telling them to prepare for war before he continued talking. "How do you know all this?"

Hecate smiled as she explained. "Well, Ella told me everything. She kept in contact with everyone and I didn't go to Mediterra. I don't like it there."

Archer smiled before he kissed the Moon Elf on her forehead but the anger surged forward when he realized Sia had been captured again.

He woke up the three girls and put them on the ground. Hecate was amazed when she saw the little creatures but didn't ask as it wasn't the time.

When the Hydra's woke up they looked at Archer with question marks in their eyes as he spoke. "My beauties. How big can you get now?"

After speaking the three started to glow before they started to grow large until their body was the size of elephants which pleased him.

But Llyniel and Hecate were shocked before taking a step back. But Archer asked the sisters. "Do you want to fight with me?"

All fifteen heads bobbed up and down as he smiled before telling them to wait until he called for them.

He gave Hecate and Llyniel a kiss before speaking, "Stay here. I'll go find everyone. I could use magic to summon them, but I don't want to make Nefi and Sera's injuries worse."

The two girls nodded their heads as he walked away from them, followed by Azura, Sable, and Raven.

While Archer was walking he used the tattoos to see if everyone was okay and when he did that his anger skyrocketed even more.

Sera was hurt badly, while Teuila was injured and Nefertiti was suffering due to the attack she had received.

When he felt all their emotions it disturbed him as there was worry, panic, and all sorts of negative emotions flowing into him.

As he entered a clearing he cast Gate to Starfall City before whispering to himself. "Draco."

Archer transformed into his dragon form, and a bright white light blinded the three Hydras who were standing behind him alongside Hecate and Llyniel.

His massive wings stretched out with his four strong-looking limbs. His four beautiful horns reflected the sunlight.

He was angry as he stepped through the Gate and let out an earth-shattering roar that shook the ground.

Archer emerged from the portal as a formidable army bore down upon the city before him. At that moment, a wicked grin crept across his face, and he drew in a deep, ominous breath.

With a deafening roar, he released a colossal torrent of flames that washed over the enemy army.

The violet flames surged forward, a wall of blistering heat and roaring fire, consuming everything in its path.

The enemy soldiers, caught off guard by the sheer ferocity of the attack, screamed in terror as they were engulfed by the inferno.

Armor melted, weapons turned to slag, and the once-advancing army now found itself in a nightmarish sea of flames.

The ground itself seemed to tremble under the onslaught as Archer's dragon breath raged on.

But he didn't attack again as he returned to his humanoid form so he could speak to the enemy and also the Avalonians.

Archer summoned his wings and rose to the sky but before he got higher, a dozen spells flew toward him. I think you should take a look at

With a wide smile, he outstretched his arms, welcoming the spells that the enemy cast.

However, much to the mage's dismay, the spells merely bounced off him, sending them into a state of panic, while Archer observed their futile efforts with a grin.

He looked at the army and used mana to power his voice. "You humans have invaded something that belongs to me and now you shall pay. Also, who are the Stormhaven Kingdoms soldiers?"

A commander stepped forward with courage in his heart and spoke. "I am the general of the Stormhaven army. If I remember correctly you are the Avalonian's guardian?"

When Archer heard the man's words he smiled but nodded his head causing the commander to continue speaking.

"Our king will pay you handsomely and will allow you to marry any Stormhaven princess of your choosing."

Archer grinned when listening to the general. That's when he came up with a dastardly plan to get free gold from them.

"Okay, Mr. General. Bring me all the gold and treasure you have on you and you may leave this graveyard."

The human nodded and started issuing orders and five minutes later a pile of treasure was sitting in front of Archer.

When he saw this his eyes shined but he quickly stored it away and spoke. "Thank you for the generous donation to the cause. Makes things easier for me but now you all shall die for hurting my wife."

Archer suddenly opened a big portal behind him and called out. "My beauties. Come have some fun and food."

That's when everyone looked at him like he was mad until they started hearing the sounds of roaring coming from the portal.

Three Hydras the size of large elephants stepped through it and eyed the army with hunger, their fifteen heads moved around like serpents as they looked around.

Archer turned to them and spoke. "Eat as many as you want. just don't go near the walls."

Azura, Sable, and Raven nodded before charging forward after letting out a horrifying roar as they smashed into the soldiers.

Their scales glistened like black obsidian, and their violet eyes burned with an otherworldly, malevolent fire.

The ground trembled beneath their large forms as they closed the distance with alarming speed, their serpentine necks weaving and hissing menacingly.

The enemy soldiers, who had been confident moments ago, now found themselves gripped by a paralyzing fear.

As the Hydras drew closer, the enemy ranks descended into chaos. Arrows were launched desperately, but they harmlessly bounced off the impenetrable hide of the sisters.

Swords and spears were raised, but the soldiers were dwarfed by the towering, writhing monsters that advanced upon them.

The Hydra heads lunged forward in unison, venomous fangs bared and unleashed torrents of scalding Acid/Fire/Lightning/Ice/Dark beams that scorched the earth and consumed entire sections of the enemy's front lines.

Men and horses screamed in agony as the multi-element attack made it through their armor and flesh.

Amidst the chaos, the Hydras struck with deadly precision. Each head seemed to possess a mind of its own, snapping at soldiers and crushing them underfoot.

The enemy army, once organized and defiant, was reduced to a terrified, frenzied mob.

As the girls continued their relentless assault, the once-confident enemy soldiers were now fleeing for their lives, leaving behind their fallen comrades and broken formations.

The unstoppable force of nature had descended upon them, and there was no escape from the wrath of the three Hydras.

But as the enemy started to flee but were stopped when another portal opened and more horrifying creatures rushed through.

The battlefield was already a gruesome scene of destruction, with the three Hydras wreaking havoc among the enemy ranks.

But the horrors were far from over. As the portal to Archer's domain surged with energy, it expanded further, heralding the arrival of even more nightmarish abominations.

From the violet colored portal emerged creatures that defied description. Their forms were grotesque and ever-changing, a twisted fusion of nightmares and pure malevolence.

Some had elongated limbs ending in razor-sharp claws, while others slithered on countless serpentine bodies.

Tentacled horrors, eyeless monstrosities, and all sorts of different beasts poured forth, their presence casting a pall of dread over the battlefield.

Chapter 376 Enraged

The very air seemed to chill as these new horrors materialized, their eerie shrieks and guttural growls echoing through the ranks of both friend and foe.

The enemy soldiers were already overwhelmed by the earlier onslaught, now faced an even more terrifying wave of nightmarish adversaries.

With a chaotic, discordant roar, the fresh horrors charged forward, driven by an insatiable thirst for violence.

They collided with the fleeing soldiers, rending and tearing through armor and flesh with savage ease.

Their attacks were merciless and indiscriminate, and the enemy army numbered just over a million dissolved into a chaotic frenzy of death and despair.

The battlefield became a nightmarish carnival of terror as the new horrors joined the fray.

Archer, standing near the portal, watched with a sinister smile as his army of monsters continued to pour out.

The enemy soldiers were now engulfed in a surreal and unending nightmare, their hope extinguished as the horrors from the portal showed no signs of relenting.

He hovered in the sky while watching the carnage below as he commanded his Monster Army. "Collect all the hearts you can my monsters! Eat as much as you like!"

Archer heard a chorus of howls, roars, and hisses as they washed over the five-army alliance.

He transformed into his dragon form and began attacking them as well.

His claws turned dozens of soldiers into blood mist as he swiped at groups of them while his Dragons Breath rushed over another group turning them into ash.

The Avalonians who were watching this from the wall were scared, excited, relieved but more importantly horrified because the boy now has an army he can call on.

Everyone watched as a horde of monsters appeared out of nowhere and were charging with reckless abandon, tearing through the enemy.

Tentacles lashed out, rending armor and flesh. Spectral wraiths passed through enemy lines, sowing terror and death.

Nightmarish creatures with jagged claws and serrated teeth left a trail of mangled bodies in their wake.

The battlefield turned into a nightmarish carnival of carnage as Archer, the three Hydras, and his Monster Army worked in eerie harmony.

Warriors who had once been proud and defiant now found themselves paralyzed by fear and despair.

Banners fell, and the once-unified alliance crumbled into chaos. Archer himself was on the battlefield, his claws, tail, and teeth turning soldiers into meatpaste.

He cast his Soul Sunder that struck terror into the hearts of the enemy. His violet eyes glowed with malevolent delight as he watched the enemy alliance fall apart before him.

The earth trembled beneath the weight of this cataclysmic confrontation as the combined might of Archer and his monstrous forces bore down upon the enemy alliance.

In the end, the five-army alliance lay broken and defeated, their once-mighty forces reduced to a shattered remnant.

The Monster Army ran wild and slaughtered hundreds of soldiers as they went, he soon noticed the Nightmare Ants, Chull Warriors, and Cave Spiders were dragging bodies into a portal he opened for them.

That's when he saw his Tarrasques and the Dinosaur-like creatures running wild and attacking the high-ranking soldiers and crushing many others.

Nightmare Ants swarmed over pockets of defenders who still stood. But as they were killing he ordered.

"Take any commanders alive to the Cave Spiders and have them trap them until I'm ready!"

Archer and his nightmarish army had emerged victorious, leaving a desolate battlefield in their wake, a testament to their dreadful power and the horrors they had unleashed.

Amidst the carnage, he positioned himself at its center, surrounded by his monstrous minions who dutifully retrieved hearts and presented them to him.

Alongside ten prisoners looked at Archer in fear and were dragged off by the Cave Spider Warriors.

Once all the hearts had been collected and stored away in his Item Box. He reverted to his humanoid form, ready to address the city's inhabitants.

[The girl's POV]

Ella and Leira were looking down at the now quiet battlefield as Archer stood in the center of a horde of beasts straight from a nightmare.

The two eyes landed on him as he stared at them with a smile before he spoke in a loud voice thanks to mana. "People of Starfall City the enemy are dead and the city is safe."

In a solemn hush, the assembled onlookers awaited his words.

"Father-in-law," he began with an air of expectation. "I expect rewards for the actions I have taken and what I am about to undertake from the empire and every friendly kingdom. Relay a message to every Avalonian commander and soldier: seek refuge within the walls if you value your lives, for dire consequences await those who do not."

The two girls looked over and saw Osoric sitting there with a relieved look all over his face as he started smiling. I think you should take a look at

Now that he's back they wanted to rush down to him but before they could do anything they vanished from the spot.

[Back to Archer]

He was standing outside the city looking up at two who were staring at him. Archer clicked his fingers and they appeared in front of him.

Ella and Leira looked at him with wide eyes and the half-elf spoke first. "You've gotten taller and even better looking Arch."

The cat girl commented to her as her green eyes shone. "You look wilder and even more handsome now. What happened to you?"

Archer smiled as he replied. "We will talk when everyone is together."

Leira started sniffing the air and looked at him with narrowed eyes. "I smell a female on you. She smells like nature."

Ella got a big smile on her face before speaking. "You and Llyniel got together while you were gone?"

Archer flashed her a grin and assured her they could delve into the matter later, but for now, he needed to assist the other girls first.

She nodded in agreement, and as he snapped his fingers, Sera materialized in his arms. The little redhead lay unconscious but he sensed the mana inside her.

With purpose, he channeled his magic into her, casting Aurora Healing and infusing her with his own mana.

As they waited, tension hung heavy in the air. Then, abruptly, Sera's peaceful slumber gave way to agonizing screams.

Her body convulsed, and he could see the transformation taking place. Red scales spread across her form, her claws elongated and sharpened.

Finally, as the pain subsided, Sera rose to her feet. Archer observed her closely and saw newly formed blood-red scales.

Her brown skin glistened as her ruby-red eyes emitted a captivating glow. She lunged at him and clung to his body as he started kissing her.

They separated and Sera spoke with a smile. "It's good to see you again Sweetheart."

He kissed her forehead and put her down as he told them he had to get back to business as he called out to the Monster Army.

Just as he was about to talk he heard Leira speak. "Darling. Father has said everyone has been warned."

Archer smiled as he spoke to the Netherbeasts waiting for his order. "Hunt every soldier that is roaming outside a town, city, or castle. I will summon you back to the domain, so make sure to complete your jobs."

He looked up at the flying Netherbeasts and spoke. "You lot up there will locate the enemy and tell the others. Now go!"

When he was done with that the Monster Army rushed off to hunt the remaining invaders.

After that, the three Hydra sisters appeared to look bigger than they were before. They all nudged their heads against him causing him to laugh.

The girls were confused and scared of these three. But Archer turned around and introduced them.

"El, Leira these three beauties are called Azura, Raven, and Sable. I helped hatch them while we were in the Netherrealm and see me as some sort of parents."

He looked at the sisters and asked them to shrink down which they did. The three Hydras were now the size of kittens.

They stood there looking at him as he introduced the three. "Ladies these three lovely young ladies are my wives, they will also look after you."

Azura, Raven, and Sable looked at Ella, Sera, and Leria. They walked over to them and let out really cute chirps as they rubbed their heads on their legs.

Sera bent down and picked up Sable and looked at her wiggling heads as she spoke. "You're so adorable. Do you want to play with me? We can go to the domain."

Archer rushed the girls there so he could go help the others. All three girls kissed him before taking the Hydras to the domain.

He let out more Netherbeasts and gave them the same orders before he cast Gate to the Zenia empire.

But before he left he felt snowflakes hitting his face as it suddenly started. Archer loved the feeling but got back on track.

Archer cast Gate to the Zenia Empire and stepped out. When he was there he felt the same heat as before but not as hot.

He took off and flew north to help Nefertiti who was injured. After flying for an hour he saw Sobek Castle in the distance.

It was surrounded by the Pharothonian and Osiria Kingdoms. With a smile, he sped up as he whispered. "Draco."

Chapter 377 Rescuing The Girls

When Archer got close to the two armies he transformed into his dragon form and crashed on top of the enemy camp.

His fall caused chaos in the siege camp as he let out a Dragons Breath that drove the Pharothonian and Osiria armies back.

Archer returned to his humanoid form and made his way inside Sobeks Castle. As he did that he used Aura Detector to find Nefertiti.

He located her with a group of people and cast Blink to get across the castle and ended up outside a brown door.

He walked in and saw several healers trying to work on her but it was useless. When Archer walked in the guards tried to stop him but he slapped them out of the way.

As the Healers rushed towards him in an attempt to intervene, he cast Mana Manipulation on them, freezing them in their tracks and preventing them from moving.

Once he was done he approached Nefertiti who was asleep on a bed. Archer approached her and leaned over to kiss her on the forehead.

The Healers looked at the scene with shock in their eyes before one man spoke. "How dare you violate the princess! You will pay for that."

Archer looked at the man like he was an idiot before retorting. "She's my fiancée, you stupid human. Now shut up."

He placed his hand on her wounds and cast Aurora Healing on her. Archer felt his mana invading her body.

The mana rushed to the wounded areas and started stitching the skin back together, by the time it was done the skin looked brand new.

It rebuilt all of her damaged areas before he stopped. But the pink-haired girl didn't wake up straight away,

But Archer couldn't stay as he needed to rush to Aquaria to help Teuila. He turned to the Healers and spoke.

"Keep an eye on her. She should wake up soon but tell her I will be back when she does."

They all nodded in amazement as he cast Gate to the Aquaria Kingdom and stepped through.

Archer appeared on a road and took off to fly toward Teuila. He used the bracelet to find her location.

As he flew he decided to try out something. With a burst of magical energy, Archer propelled himself through the air with newfound speed.

He extended his hands forward, fingers crackling with power, and unleashed a focused Azur Cannon.

The spell's force surged behind him, creating a powerful forward thrust that sent him hurtling through the sky like a speeding comet.

Archer's surroundings blurred as he streaked towards Teuila, the spell's propulsion caused a sonic boom to be heard all over the Southlands.

Soon he appeared over the battlefield and saw the enemy armies breaching the wall as they also attacked from the sea.

He flew over to the fleet that was blockading the city and when he got closer he whispered. "Draco."

Archer turned into his dragon form and let out a loud roar that caught everyone's attention before he started attacking the ships with his Dragons Breath.

Amidst the wild waters of the Solhaven Bay, Archer, in his colossal dragon form, loomed like a force of nature.

His scales glistened snow white, reflecting the fury in his eyes. With a thunderous roar that shook the very heavens, he summoned the might of his draconic breath.

A searing inferno erupted from his mouth, a torrent of scorching violet flames that blazed with an intensity that defied mortal comprehension.

The sky above was painted with a hellish glow as Archer unleashed his wrath upon the Solhaven fleet.

The hapless ships, once a symbol of naval prowess, now stood no chance against the unleashed fury of the dragon.

Wooden hulls ignited instantly, and sails turned to ashes in an instant. The unfortunate crews screamed in terror as they were engulfed by the merciless blaze.

Their ships became funeral pyres upon the churning sea. Archer's flames danced with an eerie grace, snaking across the water's surface to reach every vessel.

The once-mighty warships were reduced to skeletal frames, their cannons silenced and their mighty masts toppling into the abyss.

As the last of the Solhaven fleet succumbed to the relentless blaze, Archer's draconic form soared above the smoldering wreckage.

The sea hissed and steamed, bearing witness to the utter devastation he had wrought.

With a triumphant roar that echoed across the bay, he circled in the darkened sky, a harbinger of doom to all who dared challenge his might.

The Solhaven fleet, once a threat, now lay at the bottom of the sea, a testament to the unbridled power of the dragon.

[Teuila's POV]

Teuila was fighting on the city wall as the general took the port side to stem the tide of Solhavenians that were flowing into the city.

But all of a sudden a loud roar was heard freezing the whole city apart from Teuila who grew a big smile as she knew who it belonged to.

At that moment, a colossal white dragon appeared in the sky above, unleashing its fiery wrath upon the Solhaven ships.

Teuila watched as Arhcer swooped down to fire a Dragon's Breath all over the ships causing explosions and screams to erupt from the sea.

Soon he was finished and he flew over the city before casting multiple spells into the enemy armies causing them to retreat but it was too late.

A portal opened behind them and horrifying beasts appeared outside they crashed into the fleeing Solhavenians, Nethanians, and Aurelian soldiers.

Teuila watched on in shock and wondered what Archer had done to get such a powerful army that was slaughtering the vulnerable enemy soldiers.

[Back to Archer]

He was hovering over the battlefield casting spells into the siege engines to destroy them.

This time around he summoned the Netherbeast Dinosaurs that he collected, the beasts charged into the enemy soldiers.

They were butchering soldiers left and right. Once the battle was underway he returned to his humanoid form.

Archer looked toward the city wall and quickly found his Ocean Princess just staring at him with wide eyes.

She was covered in bruises and cuts, so he cast Blink and appeared next to her which made her jump.

He quickly grabbed her into a tight hug before speaking. "I'm so glad to see you're okay Teuila. I've missed you."

When the blue-haired girl heard his words she got extremely happy and hugged him even more.

Archer smiled as he ran his fingers up and down her back before he turned to the battle and saw that the Monster Army finished off the enemy army and was now collecting hearts.

Once that was done he ordered them to return to the domain as he stored away all the hearts when he Blinked to the pile with Teuila in his arms.

He looked at her and spoke. "Are you okay to come with me?"

Teuila shook her head before replying. "I have to help out in the city but I can meet you in the domain later?"

Archer smiled as he kissed her which caught her off guard but soon she returned it as her arms circled her shoulders.

Soon they separated while smiling at each other, Archer grabbed her hand and Blinked back on the wall.

When they arrived the soldiers looked at him with shocked looks on their faces. He looked around before chuckling.

He looked at Teuila who had a silly smile on her pretty face and spoke. "I'm going to go help Hemera and Talila then I will deal with the invaders."

She nodded before kissing his cheek before he cast Gate to the Solari Empire. Archer said goodbye to his ocean princess and stepped through.

Archer appeared outside Ravenna City. When he looked around he saw the wall was patrolled by hundreds of soldiers.

He cast Blink and appeared on the wall which made the soldiers panic but they soon saw it was Archer and calmed down.

A commander walked over to him and spoke as he saluted. "White Prince. It's good to see you in these troubled times."

Archer nodded before asking. "Where is the castle that the Princess Hemera is trapped in?"

The elf pointed to the west and he smiled before flying off in that direction. He did the same trick as before and fired spells behind him creating a sonic boom as he soared west.

He couldn't get a clear view of the ground below, but after a short journey, he reached a besieged castle.

Archer replicated his previous actions, summoning his formidable Monster Army and commanding them to engage the forces besieging the castle.

He transformed into his dragon form as he slammed into the surprised Delphosians, Aeternumians, and Achaeans.

His claws and tail swiped at the soldiers and slaughtered them while crushing some underfoot.

The Netherbeasts joined the fray and tore into the scared soldiers. Archer attacked a few more times before returning to his humanoid form.

Archer flew up to the castle walls and started scanning for his two girls but didn't see them so he used Aura Detector and soon found them in the keep.

Chapter 378 Death Goes South

Archer was standing outside a large wooden door and opened it to see Hemera and Talila arguing with two older men and a woman.

"Princess I don't mean to offend you but you're not the smartest when it comes to tactics." One of the men spoke with a shit-eating grin on his face.

The other men agreed before Talila snapped at them. "What do you mean smartest? The reason this castle still stands is because of her plans. You wanted a pitch battle with our army which is three times smaller than the enemies."

That's when one of the women spoke with sarcasm in her voice. "Yes your plans were good at first but General Ioannis is more suited to the situation now it is dire."

After the woman spoke Talila and the two men started arguing while Hemera looked annoyed and upset which made Archer angry.

He swiftly appeared behind the trio, seizing the woman to his right and the man to his left, while sinking his teeth into the middle man, eliciting a piercing scream.

Archer tossed him off to the side with a crash before he spoke with a menacing voice. "How dare you speak to my woman like that. Do you think you can get away with such a thing?"

The elf woman looked scared and started thrashing around but before Archer could snap her neck Hemera spoke. "Don't kill her Darling. She is scared of those two."

He looked at his nerdy elf fiancée and smiled before tossing the woman to Talila who grabbed a hold of her.

But he didn't let the man go as he took off the storage ring he saw and pierced his heart with his tail.

Archer walked over to the moaning elf he bit and shot a small Eldritch Blast into him. Once he was dead he took the storage ring.

He turned to the aunt and niece who were staring at him with wide eyes before rushing over to him.

The two women hugged him tight, he wrapped his arms around the two before peppering their faces with kisses.

His actions caused them to start giggling before the three calmed down and Hemera asked. "What happened to you?"

Archer told them that he would explain what happened when everyone was safe so he asked them to return to the domain while he rescues Sia and his Grandfather Albert in the north.

The two agreed and returned to the domain to join the others. Once they were gone he cast Gate to Sentinel Reach.

Upon entering the portal, he materialized high above the castle and began to hover in mid-air, surveying the scene below.

Four massive camps were set up on the grassland outside, he saw thousands of men running around like a colony of ants.

He was going to use his Monster Army but decided against it and decided to use the three sisters who would grow bigger.

Archer folded his wings and aimed his fall at the largest tent he could see. He flew toward it when he got closer to the ground he cast Blink and appeared outside.

His sudden appearance shocked the guards but before they could do anything Archer cast Soul Eater and tore their souls from their bodies and ate them.

The hollow remnants of their armor clattered loudly upon hitting the ground, creating resounding clangs that reverberated throughout.

Archer stood there with a satisfied smile, catching the attention of the nearby soldiers.

Then, he conjured a portal and cheerfully exclaimed, "My beauties! Come join the festivities."

Initially, those around him regarded Archer with bewildered expressions, thinking he might be out of his mind.

However, their skepticism quickly turned to amusement as three diminutive creatures emerged from the portal, prompting laughter among some of the soldiers.

But that soon died as the Hydras started to glow and grew to the size of very large elephants. Their heads moved around like snakes looking at all the soldiers.

Archer now smiled before speaking to Azura. "Have a feast. Make sure you grow bigger for me because soon we will be annihilating some kingdoms."

All fifteen heads bobbed up and down before charging further into the camp. The three sisters started eating soldiers.

He watched all this as he took in the guard's memories and found out that Sia and Albert were taken to the Everfallen Capital Astralyn City.

Archer walked into the commander's tent and saw a table with three men staring at him with narrowed eyes but he moved quickly as they stood up.

The men went to draw their weapons but were too slow as Archer appeared behind them and quickly cast Soul Sunder on the three.

He tore their souls from their bodies causing them to feel excruciating pain and devoured them as they fell to the ground. I think you should take a look at Once that was done he left the tent and called for the sisters. They returned with bodies of the Everfallen soldiers in their mouths, he shrugged before opening a portal for them.

Archer spoke as the three looked at him. "Return to the domain and I'll call for you's soon. We will be visiting a large city soon."

They nodded their heads and entered the portal he opened, Archer quickly took off and flew toward Astralyn City.

Archer flew across the land he saw an army marching toward Sentinel's Reach. But once he got close he took a deep breath and let out a Dragon's Breath.

The flames washed over the Shadowfen soldiers causing them to burn into ash that floated away on the afternoon breeze.

He continued flying forward until he saw a city in the distance and sped up by casting Azur Cannon.

Archer flew forward and soon stopped above it and looked down. He quickly noticed the city was full of soldiers and wondered where the citizens were.

But he didn't bother with it and used Aura Detector to scan the whole city to find Sia which he soon did.

His gaze fixed upon a grand castle nestled in the heart of the city. Archer didn't know what to do so he dived toward the fortress.

He grabbed a soldier off the wall and soared back into the sky. Once he was high up and cast Soul Sunder on him.

Archer ate the soldier's soul and learned the Everfallen King had evacuated the citizens to an underground network of tunnels.

But he wasn't bothered by the citizens but he wanted the soldiers so he descended to the city streets to the shock of the surrounding soldiers because he still heard the dead man.

When they were all staring at him they shook their heads and rushed at him. Archer acted swiftly.

With a burst of energy, he raised the lifeless soldier, his body now a weapon of grim necessity.

Time seemed to slow as he swung the limp body with uncanny force, striking the approaching enemies with brutal precision.

The impact was devastating, and his enemies were sent sprawling, some knocked unconscious, others recoiling in horror.

When the enemy soldier's unexpected sight of a fallen comrade being wielded as a weapon sent shockwaves through the enemy ranks.

After doing that he threw the body at another group of soldiers which took them out. Archer kept making his way through the city.

Archer fired off spells and used his claws to take out many soldiers as he walked through the city streets.

As he strolled through the city he stopped in a square. When he was there he opened a portal to the domain and called out. "Come out ladies!"

Azura, Raven, and Sable appeared looking excited as they rubbed their large heads against him before he told them to run wild in the city.

After that Archer started walking and left a trail of dead bodies behind him until he came to a large castle gate.

He grinned as he cast Azur Cannon at it. The air crackled with energy as his hands began to glow with an intense violet light.

He could feel the magic surging through him, a torrent of raw mana ready to be unleashed. Archer raised his hands, and from his palms, a swirling vortex of violet mana emerged.

It merged into a radiant sphere, humming with unimaginable power. The castle gates loomed before him, a barrier that had kept Sia and Albert captive.

He released the Cannon with a deafening roar. The brilliant sphere hurtled toward the gates with unstoppable force, and upon impact, it erupted into an explosion of sheer devastation.

The gates, once imposing and unyielding, were shattered into countless fragments, scattering like confetti in the night sky.

The shockwave of the blast rippled through the castle grounds, leaving a trail of chaos in its wake. Archer stood amidst the smoldering debris, a triumphant glint in his eyes.

The path to Sia and Albert was now wide open, so he made his way in and saw soldiers lying all over the courtyard.

Archer cast Crown Of Stars which started shooting out as he Everfallen soldiers rushed at him.

He followed Aura Detector until he came to a set of stairs that led down. Archer looked down at the dark stairway and started walking.

Chapter 379 The Everfallen Kingdom

Archer walked down the dark stairs until he came to a door but soon he heard soldiers coming from the top of the stairs.

He summoned smaller Netherbeasts and ordered them to kill all the soldiers in the castle and collect their hearts for him.

They bowed and rushed off to complete his orders as looked at the door. He started hearing shouting but ignored it.

Archer was blocked by a door but not for long as he booted it off the hinges and looked in. That's when he saw dozens of prisoners trapped in the cells.

He scanned for Sia and found her at the back and quickly made his way there while ignoring the pleas from the other people.

Soon enough he reached a cell that they were held in and saw Albert was battered but Sia was fine.

She was still sleeping when he ripped off the cell door before stepping in under the watchful eyes of the other prisoners.

Archer walked over to Albert and cast Aurora Healing on him. A bright light enveloped him and soon all his injuries were gone.

He walked over to the slumbering dragon-kin woman and bent down in front of her as he gently moved some of her black hair out of her face before kissing her forehead.

His kiss roused her from slumber, coaxing her bright blue eyes to flutter open and land on his face.

However, it took a moment for her groggy mind to fully grasp his presence as she gradually awakened.

Sia rubbed her eyes and finally came to. When she saw Archer she lost it and lunged at him and started hugging him like there was no tomorrow while mumbling into his ear.

"I knew you were fine husband. Sorry, I got caught again. I couldn't leave Father or my soldiers behind."

Archer smiled as he cast Aurora Healing over her while she cuddled him but soon they heard a groan from behind them.

They separated and spotted Albert waking up, he sat up and rubbed his head as he looked around and spotted Archer.

The Santa Claus-looking man got a big smile on his face as he stood up as he spoke. "My Grandchild! Thank you for coming to help us boy."

In a dimly lit cell, where cold stone walls bore witness to their shared ordeal, his grandfather extended his arms and enfolded him in a heartfelt bear hug.

Tears welled in the older man's eyes as he held Archer close, his overwhelming gratitude and relief evident.

"Archer, my boy," he rasped softly, his voice trembling with emotion. "You've saved me and my daughter. Thank you."

Archer, taken aback by the unexpected embrace, wavered briefly, a flicker of hesitation in his eyes that Albert quickly recognized.

He leaned in, his voice a gentle reassurance. "You will be fine, Archer. What transpired with your Father and Mother won't repeat itself among the rest of us."

When he heard this he hugged the older man back before letting him go and spoke in a casual voice. "You two go to my domain and wait for me while I finish off the Everfallen Kingdom."

Archer opened a portal to the domain and the two hugged him again before walking through.

Once they were gone he turned to the other prisoners and spoke. "I will free you all and transport you out of here."

He cast Gate to the road outside the city before ripping off the cell door and freeing the people.

They rushed through the portal before Archer smiled to himself and whispered. "Draco."

Archer transformed into his dragon form bringing down the castle causing everyone inside to be crushed to death.

He stretched his wings out and roared to summon the three Hydra sisters. That's when he heard loud stomping coming toward him.

After waiting for a few seconds Azura crashed through the closest build and he was shocked at their size.

They were three times the size of an elephant which he got excited about before the other two appeared next to her.

He asked them to grow smaller and enter the domain which they happily did, Archer soon took to the sky.

The city below him trembled in fear and awe, he soared through the sky, his massive wings beating with thunderous force.

His scales shimmered, reflecting the sunlight like a living gem. With a resounding roar that echoed off the buildings. I think you should take a look at Archer unleashed a burst of searing flames that devoured everything in its path. Buildings crumbled into fiery wrecks as his fiery breath washed over them.

The streets below were a chaotic frenzy of panicked soldiers, desperately fleeing from his anger.

Archer's enormous claws scraped against the ground as he landed, creating deep furrows in the earth. He moved with a primal grace, his eyes scanning the chaos he had unleashed.

Despite the destruction. He was a force of nature, both awe-inspiring and terrifying, and as he moved through the city, he left a path of devastation in his wake.

He spent hours attacking the city and soldiers he could find. After doing this for a while he was laying down in the city square.

Archer had summoned an army of Stone Men and Netherbeasts to deal with the remaining soldiers.

The Stone Men brought him piles and piles of treasure, which he kept storing away the loot he saw the Netherbeasts bringing a group of people.

He saw that they were dressed like royalty and smiled before returning to his humanoid form as he summoned a chair using Mana Manipulation.

Once he got comfortable he motioned for the beasts to bring them forward. When he spotted them he grinned even more.

There was what he assumed was the king and his sons while a group of scared women were behind him.

The king turned around to shut them up but Archer interrupted his rant. "Shut up human. Don't you dare talk anymore? Understand."

When the man heard him he stopped speaking and nodded his head as he looked around at all the nightmarish beasts circling them.

"Well, Mr. King. It seems like you messed up. Why don't you have the common sense not to touch a dragon's woman? And you even kidnapped my grandfather."

Archer stood up and continued as he strolled around the captives with a charming smile on his face as he continued. "I've only just met him but he seems like a nice man, even though he's a bit touchy."

He shook his head and walked over to the king before stopping in front of him. The man pleaded. "Please don't kill us. Let my family live and take my life."

Upon hearing this, Archer offered a sinister smile and a subtle nod to the man. Swiftly, he employed his tail as a lethal instrument, thrusting it with deadly precision into the man's heart.

The man let out a pained grunt before collapsing to the ground with a resounding thud. Archer looked up at the family who he swore looked relieved but ignored it.

While he was walking an older woman stepped out. She had auburn-colored hair with a pair of brown eyes.

She wasn't as tall as him but the woman wasn't short as she stopped in front of him and spoke. "White dragon king. Thank you for releasing us from such a man."

When Archer heard this his eyes opened in shock, and he shook his head before replying. "I killed your husband and you're thanking me? Why?"

The woman laughed before replying in an honest voice. "He forced me to marry him as he held my family hostage but they are dead now and I choose to survive for my children."

Archer looked at the woman and wondered what to do with them so he shrugged and asked. "You can go live in the empire or my domain. Your choice."

The woman and three little boys stared at him with confusion in their eyes. He laughed before answering. "Well, I don't kill innocents. My domain is just a land where you can live free and happy but you have to swear a mana oath not to betray me."

When the queen heard his offer she nodded her head and started her oath alongside her children which pleased him.

He opened a portal to the domain before called for Ella and she soon appeared. She stepped through it and saw the chaos Archer had caused and shook her head with a smile.

She approached him and kissed his cheek before asking. "What did you want Arch?"

Archer smiled as he asked her to take the queen and her children to Jethro and set up somewhere to live for the family.

Ella gave him a nod before leading the family away. That's when he turned to the remaining captives and spoke with an evil smile on his face. "Give me all your rings now and you will live."

The group quickly handed over their stuff causing his smile to grow even more before he ordered the Netherbeasts to eat them.

Chapter 380 Destruction

Archer watched as the Netherbeasts ate the other Everfallen survivors and some went around collecting the hearts for him.

He cast Gate to outside Starfall City and called for the Monster Army that he left in the Avalon Empire.

An uncountable number of beasts appeared before him and after they were all through he closed it.

Archer started giving them orders to run wild all over the Summerfield duchy. But he forbade them from killing innocent people which they happily agreed to as they rushed off.

He flapped his wings and took off to go find the Duskmire and Silverpeak Kingdoms, after flying for a couple of hours he crossed the border.

Archer saw an army traveling toward the duchy He smiled as he swooped down letting out his Dragon's Breath on top of them.

The flames washed over them causing them to turn to ash. Once that was done he descended to the ground.

When he landed he summoned more of his Monster Army and told them to destroy the soldiers in the Duskmire Kingdom.

But gave them the same orders, only kill soldiers or people who attack them. They bowed their heads and rushed off while howling.

Archer watched this and shook his head as he soared into the sky again. He soon came across a fort which he quickly attacked.

By the time he was finished, the fort was covered in blood and broken bodies. Archer was standing there in front of twenty scared soldiers.

He looked at them and spoke with anger in his voice. "You stupid humans keep messing with me and now you've forced my hand. So here I am."

One of the men quickly spoke with fear. "Why are you killing us? We've never seen you."

Archer looked at him with narrowed eyes before asking. "Do you know who General Sia Silverthrone is?"

The soldier looked at him and gave him a small nod causing Archer to smile before continuing. "Well she is my wife and your kingdom kidnapped her. So do you now understand?"

When the man's eyes widened but before he could say anything Archer slashed his throat using his razor-sharp claws.

He quickly finished all of them off before he made his way to the palace where he found the king, queen, and a few princes who were looking at him like he was the demon king.

They were standing in the throne room surrounded by their royal guards who numbered over one hundred that were preparing to attack him.

Archer stopped in front of them before opening a portal to the domain and called the Hydra sisters.

Raven walked out first followed by Sable then lastly Azura. They were the size of large lions which shocked the Duskmire Royal Family.

He looked at them and smiled as their heads rubbed up against him. But suddenly Raven reacted and her head snapped to the side.

Archer looked at the soldiers who were trying to sneak up on them and had missing heads as their armored bodies dropped to the floor with a clang.

The royal family looked on his terror as two of their guards were killed by the large beasts. He smiled before he spoke to the Hydras. "Kill everyone, I'll go find the treasure vault."

After walking for a while Archer found the Duskmire vault and started smiling when he saw how much treasure was there.

So like the loot gremlin he was, Archer stored it all in his Item Box before making his way back to the throne room.

When he arrived the sisters were eating and no one was alive. Blood and bones littered the floor but he ignored it and told them to follow him.

Archer stepped into the palace's courtyard and cast Stone Warden. He summoned hundreds of them and told them to loot the city and bring it back to him.

After he issued the command, the three hydras swiftly exited the palace, shrank in size, and pounced on him.

They started licking his face and all their heads were rubbing against him causing him to start laughing.

He started pampering them by kissing all their heads and stroking them which caused the three to let out extremely adorable chirps and other noises.

They found some grass and laid down, the sisters curled up next to him as the four nodded off.

Hours passed while they were sleeping in the courtyard guarded by hundreds of Netherbeasts.

Soon enough he woke up to one of the girls licking him. He looked at who it was and saw Azura looking at him in his eyes.

For some reason, he could feel her love for him and it was overwhelming but he treasured it. He kissed the innocent girl on her head before standing up.

He stretched out his body and felt his back click which made him let out a sigh before he looked at the pile of treasures.

Archer quickly stored them all away before dismissing the Stone Men and ordering the Netherbeasts to return to the domain.

Once he was done with that he looked at the Hydras and spoke. "Shrink down as much as you three can so I can bring you with me."

All their heads nodded before they shrunk down to the size of a kitten and rushed over to him again.

They clambered up him and got comfortable, Azura was curled up on his head as her little tail wrapped around his horn.

While the Sable and Raven were on his shoulders, after checking up on them he took off and flew toward the Silverpeak Kingdom.

As he was flying he saw his Monster Army rushing all over the place and was shocked by the amount of Netherbeasts he had.

He ignored them for now and would pick them up after he finished with the Shadowfen Kingdom.

After flying for a couple of hours he saw mountains in the distance and knew the last two southern kingdoms were near the Nagendra Kingdom.

Archer couldn't find anyone or anything but soon came across a Shadowfen castle in the distance and smiled.

He woke up the sisters and asked them to get ready as he passed over the castle wall and the Hydra's jumped off him.

As the three fell they started to glow and got big all of a sudden before crashing into the castle courtyard shocking all the soldiers.

But they soon started firing different element beams all over the place causing pure chaos. While the sisters did their thing Archer was laughing.

He watched as they rampaged through the castle until they slammed into the keep bringing it crumbling down.

The soldiers attempted to flee, but Archer summoned half a dozen Tarrasques to obstruct their path.

As they emerged from the castle, they unwittingly ran straight into the colossal creatures.

Archer observed the Tarrasques' eyes gleaming with an eerie light and relished the spectacle as they devoured the soldiers, all the while laughing at the foolish humans who dared to challenge him.

After casting the Gate to Starfall City, he let out a resounding roar, causing the remaining Monster Army to hastily flee towards it.

Archer patiently waited as a wave of Netherbeasts poured through the Gate, observing them as they gathered.

He couldn't help but notice that many of them appeared larger than before, prompting him to wonder about the cause.

But he soon spoke to them. "I will give you the same orders as the rest. No killing innocents and only soldiers. If I hear of any of you doing it I'll kill you myself. Understand?"

The Monster Army nodded like chickens as they knew he would kill them. That's when Archer noticed a group of Ettins approaching him with large bags.

As they got closer their leader stepped forward and handed him them while bowing to him.

Archer looked inside and saw hundreds of hearts in just one bag. He quickly stored them all before ordering them to attack every southern kingdom that invaded Avalon.

Days passed as the kingdoms south of the empire lay in ruins. Cities were burning and castles were crumbling.

After finishing off the Duskmire, Everfallen, Shadowfen, and Silverpeak kingdoms which he left in ruin before he made his way south to the Southlands.

Archer was flying over the Sunfire Mountains and saw the Zenia Empire so he started looking for any enemy armies.

Soon he saw one that was marching somewhere but that caused him to smile and descend to the ground in front of the army as he returned to his humanoid form.

When the soldiers saw this they panicked and started to surround him, a tall brown-skinned man appeared in front of Archer as he looked at him with his green eyes.

The older man remarked in a threatening tone. "What are you doing in the Nethania Kingdom demi-human?"

Archer looked at him and started cackling before commenting with a grin. "I'm going to eat your soul human and find out all your dirty secrets."

He quickly cast Blink and appeared in front of the commander which spooked him but Archer cast Soul Eater.

Archer pulled out his soul and ate it gaining all the knowledge he needed. All the soldiers around him saw the man drop to the ground lifeless.

That's when he cast Thunder Wave to throw the Nethanian soldiers back before he tore into them using his claws.