Chapter 16 Chapter 16 The baby was cleared to go home. Het lever had gone down and she kooked better. The doctor told them to come back for regular checkups, Lori didn't have any problem with that But she did have a problem with the way the doctor was staring at her though, she couldn't imagine why but she had a feeling wondered if the woman somehow blamed her for Emilia's ear infection since she was het nanny.

She wanted to talk to Grace about it but then decided it was something too silly for her to be talking about and Gabriel drove them back to the house, his partner Draco had left much eather, claiming he had business to take care of. docter didn't like her. She sal to let it go. Back in the house, Lori put a fussy Emilia to sleep after a bottle and pumped so Gabriel talking in hushed tones. then she went downstairs to refrigerate it and found Care and She heard the word Suzie. She didn't know much but she knew Suzie was Emilia's mother Lea. Is she asleep now!!

Gabel asked he he straightened, Grace took a few steps away from Cabriel. Lori nocled. "Yes. She is." She said as he bypassed them and walked to the freeze. She put the milk into the freezers. That's good. Grace and wele re just talking about her visit to the hospital I want them to think she had interrupted Lori nodded as she walked past them, she intended to leave so they could continue the eir conversation, she didn't want them to them intentionally We were also talking about her mother." Grace added and Lori paused, wondering why they had mentioned her.

She turned to look at them, she couldn't hide her curiosity. "What happened with her mother?" She asked and Grace glanced at Gabriel who shrugged. "Well, Dr Calloway is a bit worried about Ensilia's mother's medical history. "Why? Is something wrong with her?!" Lori asked as she started to panic, she knew something was wrong, maybe something came up in the tests they ran, she could already feel the dread filling her. Cabriel shook his brod but she could see that he was lying, the faraway look in his eyes didn't indicate that he was fine or there was nothing to worry about..

There was definitely something going on that they weren't telling her about. *Emilia is fine. Really, she is. Her doctor just feels we should know more about her mother's medical history." Well... dont y You? Lori asked and Gabriel shrugged. "Suzie and I weren't that close... Gabriel said, at that moment Grace quietly excused herself from the kitchen as Lori moved closer to the kitchen and sat on the nearest stool. "Well... I don't

Chapter 17 Chapter 17 Gabriel checked his watch again. He didn't want to hurry Lori up but they had a long way to go and he already made a reservation to a restaurant in the city, it was far away enough for them to at least hurry. Grace had asked his permission to offer her Suzie's dress for the dinner and he had no problems with it. Suzie had bought a lot of dresses, many which she intended to wear after the baby was born. She had a generous allowance from Gabriel and she loved lavishing it on fine thing. It was quite sad that she didn't get to wear any of the things she bought.

After her death, the staff had packed up all her stuff and put it in the garage, her room had been locked after that, with Gabriel not even daring to open the door to the room. The night she had died had been very hard on all of them, it seemed as if the ghost of Suzie haunted them all, and hang around the room heavily. Gabriel was sure nobody slept a wink that night... The next morning he had ordered that her stuff be put away, he couldn't take it anymore. He supposed now he would have to rummage through them to find something, at least one thing about her family.

It could be a futile endeavor but he would do it anyway, if it meant Emilia would be fine. He heard the clicks of heels and looked up the stairs and saw Lori coming down in a simple black dress. Her hair was tied back, with only a few strands framing her face, her dress was a simple black gown with spaghetti straps and a fitted bodice, it flared slightly at the waist and it was short enough to give Gabriel a very good view of her creamy long curvy legs. Her feet were clad in black heels, the heel on them only looking four inches high.

She didn't even have a lot of makeup on, just what seemed to be lipgloss, eyeliner and mascota. She was beaming as she came down the stairs and Gabriel wondered if the lovely gown she was wearing was part of the clothes Grace had convinced her to "You look lovely." Gabriel complimented as he tried to tear his eyes off her but failed woefully, has wolf was howling inside and he fought hard to restrain it. "I'm sorry. I couldn't bring myself to wear any of Ms Suzie's clothes. Grace said you were fine with it..." "But I couldn't" Lori confessed as she finally stood in front of him.

Gabriel shrugged. "It's was merely a suggestion. It's not a big deal" "Besides, what you're wearing is fine anyway! I love it." "Really?" Lori asked as her eyes widened and Gabriel nodded. "Yes. It suits you very well." "We can't waste an "We can't waste any more minute. Are you ready?" Lori nodded as she turned to wave at Grace who was at the head of the stair. Grace waved back enthusiastically "Have fun you youngsters." She said as Gabriel gave her a look. Outside the house, Tony brought the Lexus RX 350.

Lori had never seen it before, not seen him drive it, there were about more than five cars in the house and she had only ever seen him use two. She moved to her side, her dress was short and she didn't keep it professional. She told herself again. She was embarrassed as she entered the car, her car it because she felt it would make her look trashy. But when she had suggested it to all.

Gabriel was her boss, nothing more, nothing less, she kept telling herself as he entered the car and the scent of something he looked at her made her feel hot all over she couldn't explain it. She sat upright, clamping her legs tight. She shouldn't be feeling this way about her boss. It was unprofessional and quite honestly distasteful. Why would he be attracted to someone he could waste any man but her. Lori was sure that if he knew half of her past he would not want anything to do with her.

The drive was long and a bit awkward with the growing tension between them. Len was mute, not knowing what to say, mercifully Gabriel had left the radio the sound of music filled the entire car with Gabriel silently humming to Paul Simon. Finally, they reached the city and were in their destination. The restaurant was Italian, just like Gabriel had mentioned and he had made a Gabriel opened the door for her again, holding her hand gently, the slight touch almost sent sparks flying in Lori's hand. He took her hand in his and they walked into the restaurant together after a brief talk with the valet.

The lights in the restaurant were dim, so dim that Lori wondered how anyone could properly see, mercifully, the place wasn't too packed and while she stared at them, they went back to what they were doing a few moments ago. It was great, she had been feeling so insecure about the dress she was wearing, she was glad that nobody else made it worse.

They were led to their table, a secluded table in the back where they could admire the stone exterior, arches, 17-foot-tall ceilings and lush marble from a better point of view. They were given glasses of Prosecco while the waiter brought their menu to them. Lori was hungry, she couldn't wait and everything on the menu seemed mouthwateringly good. But it was also mostly in Italian, so she could only make out a few words. "What will you order?" "I don't know."

"There's so many options!" She said as she glanced through the menu and flipped it rather quickly, too quickly because Gabriel was chuckling. "Would you like me to give you suggestions?" He asked and she nodded. "Yes please. I've never eaten here before." Chapter 17 she confessed and he nodded. "I know. That's why I bought you here, you'd love their food" for the appetizer, I'd suggest the Arancini, I won't tell you what that is but I'll assure you you'd love it: you'd love as he winked at her.

"Pasta of course for your main course and the straffoli for dessert." Loti nodded, she would trust Gabriel with the decisions. "That all sounds delicious. I'd love to try." Gabel nodded as he told the waiter their order, he also ordered the same thing and the connoisseur came to talk to him about wines. He convinced Gabriel to try their new batch of Barolo wine from Piedmont. Gabriel agreed, Lori barely touched her glass of wine, remembering she was breastfeeding. She had almost forgot. Then again, she wasn't very big on drinking. They talked about Ensilia.

Talking about her seemed to come so freely to the two of them, maybe because she was the one thing they had in common and the only consolation. They could have without things getting awkward. They were so engrossed talking about her that they didn't realize when the waiters came with their food, almost similar. Lon could smell the food and she closed her eyes and savored the smell? Oh good! She was so hungry. She thought as she started to dig in. When she took her first bite she couldn't help but moan, Gabriel's eyes widened. "I'm sorry.

"I'm so sorry" She said with her palm covering her mouth. Gabriel shouted. "Don't be. You have no reason to be" "I know..... it's just not proper." She sighed and Gabel shrugged. "I don't care much for rules like that" "Su He answered and she raised her eyebrow... "Really?" He nodded "You love the food, that's a good reaction." "Yes, it's your free time. You should be relaxed." "Besides, it's He answered and Lon nodded. Well he was right. "You're not drinking?" He noted as she signaled the waiter for a glass of water. Lori shook her head. "The baby.

Chapter 18 Chapter 18 He asked and Lori sighed. She wiped her tears, looking straight ahead. She always knew a time like this would come. A time where her past would collide with the present. She was foolish enough to think that she had escaped from everything. And everyone. She was shocked to see Asher. Last time he saw her, he spared her because she was pregnant. Now he had seen her again and he was probably wondering where the baby had gone. Which was crazy, seeing as What son?! never cared much about her or the baby in the first place. Now he was suddenly asking about his son?

To think she had been happy, very happy and finally at a good place. At a place where she was calm, relieved, a place where she felt safe, all for everything to be dismantled all in one night. With only a few sentences. She had also conducted herself poorly, she thought she would be able to handle seeing Asher, but no, i Lori could foresee more nights with endless nightmares. "He was the father of my baby." She finally answered and Gabriel nodded. "Were you two close?" ing him had awoken her worst and deepest fears. She shook her head.

Did he know about what happened to the baby?" Judging from his reaction, he didn't know, which meant that Jared didn't tell him what transpired between the two of them, which meant that Jared and Asher were probably not on speaking terms. "No. When he found out I was pregnant he didn't say anything. He just left. We were never close." Gabriel nodded. "When you saw him, you were shaking Lori, really badly, did he hurt you before?" Lori was deathly quiet. Was it that obvious? Did she make it that obvious?! "Yes. I don't want to go into details but yes." She admitted.

There was a short silence between them, Lori had finally stopped crying and Gabriel was watching her intently. "You're safe. You're safe with me Lori." He assured her, she still looked pretty unconvinced, so he put his hand on her shoulder and he noticed she flinched a little. Gabriel pulled away quickly. A thought crossed his mind. God no! His brain was putting together all the pieces. That bastard! He thought as he clenched his fist. He must have assaulted her. He should be He took a deep breath, trying hard to control the inging anger he was feeling She whimpered She was right.

He didn't know much about her, practically nothing about her if they were being completely honest Your right. But I can tell you're a good person. You re a good human Lan. Lori shook her head, her head still shaking with uncontrollable sobs, she looked out the window, she couldn't bear to look in his eyes, to see the pity written "You gave my daughter your milk, despite losing your own son....." "I gave him away" the uid, interrupting Gabriel. Gabriel asked and Lori shrugged and she turned to look at splotchy. Her mascara was running down her cheeks.

My son I put him up for adoption "I didn't want him. I'm not a good person Gabriel, Her eyes were bloodshot from all the crying she had been doing and her face was red and Masbe, maybe that's why he died. Maybe that's why God took him away from me Lori shrugged. "Tell the truth! You know. I didn't even get to see him She started laughing monically "Can you believe that?!" She exclaimed "I carried him for months and I didn't even get to see him when he was born!" "I didn't deserve to have him." She mumbled and Gabriel head No. I don't believe that.

He was your son and you did what you thought was best for him." You're a good person Lori. I believe that..." He said as he brought out a handkerchief from his breast pocket and brought it slowly to her face, wiping her tears. The gesture startled Lori, but she stayed tears gently. Chapter 18 The two of them so quiet that the sound of their breathing could be heard. "I'm sorry about your son. I really am. But I hope that you know that it's not your fault....." He said softly to her, softer than she had ever heard his voice. Lori smiled, he was so kind. So kind to her.

What did she do to deserve such a good boss. She nodded her head slowly. "Thank you." She murmured. Gabriel nodded. "If you need a minute, we can stay here longer..." Lori shook her head. No. I think I'm ready to go now. She said quickly, suddenly longing to hold Emilia in her arms. Her breasts ached at the longing and she quietly prayed they wouldn't leak. Gabriel nodded. play then" He said as he started the car, The minute they got out of the car and into the house Lori took off her heels and practically ran to the nursery.

Upon opening the door, she saw that the lights were out, Emilia must be sleeping. She wondered as she walked into the room gently, heading for the crib. She picked her up gently, as gently as she could, hoping not to wake her up and she pulled her closer to her chest, inhaling her soft sweet baby smell... "I missed you." She whispered as she nuzzled her nose on the baby's cheek. There was a gentle knock on the door and Lori turned to see Gabriel standing in front of the open door. "Is she awake?" He asked and Lori shook her head. "No. She's asleep." She whispered and Gabriel nodded.

"Alright then." me kiss her goodnight." Let me He said as he walked towards her, he was so close to Lori and the baby that Lori could see how blue his eyes were. He kissed Emilia gently on the forehead. His eyes turned to Lori and he reached out and touched her cheek gently. Don't forget what I said. You're safe with me."

Chapter 19 Chapter 19 in her surroundings, slowly, and then she gasped There was the all too familiar feeling of dread that was pooling deep in her stomach The dusty brown bed covers, the wall with the peeling paint and the dresser that was in her view, it was all too familiar and scary All so familiar No! Not That can't be, this can't be She couldn't be back here, in this same room, where she had so desperately tried to leave. It wasn't possible. What happened!

she asked herself as she found out that her hands were tied, so hard that she was already bruising She wiggled her legs and found out they were Her eyes darted around the room, she was alone, all , that was good, now she had to find a way to leave, because she knew what was coming. She rolled out of the bed and fell hard on the hardwood floor, hitting her head on a pair of old worn brown boots. She ignored the pain, more focused on her she looked down and saw her legs were tied with ropes, fortunately, the ropes were a bit loose, so she wiggled and wiggled till she got free of them.

It hurt like hell and she was pretty sure her ankles were chafed in the process, but that was the least of her worries. She stood up on shaky legs and walked towards the door, trying to lock it a few times only to realize that it was unlocked. Suddenly, the door clicked, as if someone was opening it from the outside and Lori took a step back. The door opened up and Asher stood in front of her, a cruel smirk on his face. He was wearing the same clothes he was wearing when they had met at the restaurant where she and Gabriel were having dinner and she was still in her flimsy little black dress.

Asher's eyes took over her with uncontrollable lust. "Where are you going now?" He taunted as he took a step closer to her... "The fun party began...!" He said as he pushed her violently, causing her to lose her balance and fall on the floor. Asher knelt in front of her, pulling her towards him with one strong arm. He touched her cheeks with his fingers, gently caressing them, Lori choked on his disgust, she couldn't help but have him touching her. Lori was trying to string together a simple sentence but words were failing her, she couldn't even get a whisper out "Come here Loretta.

"I've missed you so much." Asher whispered into her ear as he stood up, grabbed a fistful of her hair and yanked painfully, throwing her to his bed. This isn't happening again. Lori thought as she screamed. Gabriel was awake, he was working on his laptop even though it was midnight. He couldn't get any sleep, he was deeply worried about Lori, he just couldn't stop thinking about how scared she had been and how much of a hold that man had on her. He couldn't imagine what she must have gone through in his life. He was still on his bed, on a distress signal.

As an alpha his father had taught him that sometimes his connection with his birth or werewolves who took the blood oath could transcend and on rare occasions feel things that they were feeling if the feeling was strong enough. Pain for example. the physical. He 13 Chapter 15 But this didn't only apply to his beta or werewolves, it also applied to his mate. Lori was sending him a distress signal.

He thought as he jumped out of bed, he was barely out of his room when he heard a bloodcurdling scream, one that was so loud he could hear it pounding his eardrums. He rushed to Lori's room, prying open the door from its hinges with effortless ease even though the door was locked. There she was, practically writhing in her sheets while she kept on screaming. He quickly held her in his arms. He called as he practically shook her out of her nightmare. She finally opened her eyes, panting and scrambling away from his touch. He understood.

She looked around, still very much afraid, far-away, Gabriel's ears could detect movement, Lori's scream seemed to have woken up everybody, even the baby who had now launched into a cry, "Lon, it was just a nightmare" He said softly and she finally calmed down, tears streaming down her face. "I'm sorry. I'm so sorry..." She begged and he shrugged. He looked towards the door that was now lying in the hallway, he had pried it off the hinges.

It was the only way he could think of to get in, the door had finally walked in at that moment, quietly stepping around the door, she was in her nightgown and by the look on her face, she was distraught, she had heard the scream too. "Is everything okay?" She acted and Gabriel nodded Yes. Please check on the baby. Lori's not feeling well. He said as he dismissed her. Jenny nodded and went into the baby room, Lori hugged the sheets as she looked at him for waking you up. I didn't mean to.. "I'm so sorry Gabriel shrugged. to, you had a nightmare. "It's okay.

You didn't mean to, you had a "I'll go get the baby. " She started and Gabriel shook his head. "No. You need some rest. Jenny will take care of her, come on, let's go." He said as he stood up and held his hand out. "Where are we we going?" She asked and he pointed to the door. 23 Coster 19 "You can't sleep here, you'll catch He took in her small cold hand in his and they both walked out of the bedroom. As they stood tight in front of his bedroom Lori looked at him wide eyed and he shrugged. There is no way Tes letting you sleep alone tonight." He said as he opened the door of his room.

You're sleeping with me." He said. His tone was final, authoritative and it left little room for argument Lori nodded, gulping hard, His room looked dark and toasty, just how she remembered it, only that it looked somewhat bigger. She felt embarrassed, she had a nightmare and she had woken up the whole household, she wished Gabriel had not bothered so much about her, no matter how much he thought he would help her she wouldn't be able to get much sleep after that. She climbed into his bed and he pulled the covers over her exposed legs, tucking her in.

She had forgotten that she slept in her little black dress, there was he wouldn't have seen the hot pink panties she was wearing, with how short her dress was, no way Gabriel went to the other side of the bed, settling in next to her and turning off the head lamp without so much as a word to her. Lori laid there in darkness, her eyes blinking and slowly adjusting to the dark room. She could feel Gabriel next to her, she could hear his breathing, slow, calm and steady, Goodnight Lori. Gabriel said as he reached out beneath the sheets and held her hand.

His large warm hand suddenly enveloped her cold hand and Lori shuddered at the touch. He entwined his fingers with hers, "Goodnight Gabriel," She whispered quietly. After a while, Lori closed her eyes and attempted to sleep. A few moments later, she was asleep. Chapter Comments

Chapter 20 Chapter 20 Lori blinked, her surroundings were different. She wasn't in her own room, but rather someone else's. She rubbed her eyes as she looked around, taking in the entire room and her eyes widened as she realized she was in Gabriel's room. She sat up, startled, she looked next to her and found out that the space next to her was empty and quite cold, Gabriel must have left for work early. She looked around and her eyes landed on the bedside drawer where the time on the digital alarm read 9:45 am. Her eyes widened.

How was it that she had slept for so long, so comfortably without even waking up?! She jumped out of the bed, rushing out of the room and back to her bedroom. She met the door of her bedroom completely gone and stared at her open room in bewilderment. It looked like someone had ripped it off its hinges, Crazy! She thought as she shook her head, She didn't have time for that though. She thought as she waved her curiosity away and changed into shorts and a large black T-shirt. She in walked into the adjoining bathroom in her bedroom and brushed her teeth.

She wondered why Gabriel didn't wake her ¶ up. God she had been such a nuisance last night, with everything that had happened and with the nightmare she had. She didn't mean to be such a burden to him but apparently it was much harder to avoid her past than she thought. The nursery was empty. Which meant the baby was probably downstairs. She sighed, Jenny or Grace must have been busy taking care of her while she was sleeping Downstairs, Lami found Emilia in the living room, inside the bassinet where she was awake and stretching, contentedly staring at the ceiling.

She sighed as she went towards the bassinet and carried the baby out of it and into her arms. "Awwn. Did you miss She asked as she smothered her with kisses. "I missed you too." Lori cooed as Emilia wiggled her feet.. "Oh! You're awake? Grace said from behind as she walked towards her with a bottle with milk in her hand and a burp napkin on the other side. "Go Good morning Grace" Why didn't anyone wake me?" She asked and Grace shrugged. "Well, we were instructed not to. Besides, you had a long night, it wasn't such a bad idea to let you sleep in." Lori still felt pretty bad.

It was her job to be a nanny, she was being paid to be a nanny, what sense did it make if she couldn't even do her job right. "Who watched over the baby?" She asked and Grace shrugged, a small smile on her face. "Jenny handled it quite well. And Mr Gabriel was with her this morning Lori sighed. I feel bad. I'm so sorry. I'll apologize to Jenny." Grace chuckled. Chapter 20 "Apologize for what?" "You had a nightmare sweetheart. Speaking from experience in how bending these can be "Besides, Mr Gabriel was very worried about you.

That was why he didn't mind you sleeping in.." Grace walked up to her and examined her face, the old woman's deep brown eyes but turning into her hazel ones. She pressed a hand on Lori's temple.. "Are you fine now? Do you feel better? She asked and Lori nodded, stretching her hands to receive the baby's bottle from Grace Grace handed it to her and Lori sat down on the nearest couch and plopped the bottle into the baby's mouth. by shirts. Grace sat next to her, her hands folded in the pleats of her grey skirt.

She always dressed in the most formal way, such long skirts and starchy "Mr Gabriel told me what happened." Lori asked and Grace nodded. "I feel like I have done a great disservice by not asking you about the circumstances of your son's birth. I didn't want to pry..." She shifted uncomfortably, Grace on the other hand remains calm while watching her intently. "It's okay Grace. I wouldn't have felt comfortable talking about it with you to be honest." She sighed. "should be the one apologizing. I withheld the information from you." Grace shook her head strongly. "No! No!

You did no such thing-i "But I did!" She interrupted her "If I told you I gave my son up for adoption, you wouldn't have considered me for the job..." Grace hesitated. "Well, maybe. You may be right. But I want you to know I don't judge you for it. And if I had known way earlier I still wouldn't have judged you for it." "Well Thank you. That's nice to know Lori said and Grace smiled.

She stood up from the couch, ready to "I hope in the future you can trust me enough to confide with me Lori." She had never had anyone to confide in, not even friends, she wished she had some, but the years of her life had been spent in abusive and uncomfortable situations. She didn't find any friends worth confiding in..

Still, she nodded Twill." Gabriel had slept very little, he was more focused on Luni, all night, he had been focused on her breathing, watching for the slightest hitch of breath of the slightest distress, just to make sure she was fine and she wasn't having another nightmare. Luckily, she slept through the night, a great relief Chapter 20 Unfortunately he woke up early the next morning with a bad headache.

He left his room quietly, eager not to wake her up and he had instructed everyone in the house not to wake her up either He saw Emilia after that, she was very fussy, Jenny mentioned something about her probably missing Lori. He held her, changed her diaper, gave her a bottle and changed her clothes By the time he was done he was late for work. He showered in another room and quietly picked up his clothes from his room before going downstairs for He met Grace, who had just arrived for the day and he gave her a brief download of everything that was happening.

Grace was of course very shocked Did he look dangerous? The man?! the asked and Gabriel nodded. He looked dangerous. But I don't think he has any real influence. He was probably some gang member." Grace groaned. "Ugh! How did she get mixed up in such a crowd! Gabriel shrugged. "I don't know. But I dont think she willingly got mixed up in all that, either way, whatever he did to her, she is still very traumatized." Im very worried." Grace sighed. "What should we do? What if the nightmares come back?! She asked, concern lacing her voice.

He had not thought of that possibility, but it could possibly be that she would have such nightmares occasionally, either way, he looked forward to preventing them. Gabriel looked around, checking to see if they were alone with no one listening in on them Before she screamed. I could feel a pulk a distress signal the she was calling out to me. My father told me such connections exists between mates. It was enald feel scary and interesting to feel The mating bond must be growing stronger. Every day that you spend together makes it stronger.

That connection you speak of doesn't happen easily." Crace's voice had a warning to it, a somber tone. "If you plan on rejecting her, I suggest you do it quickly enough, before it leaves you both irreversibly heartbroken. Gabriel sighed. See, that's the problem. I'm not so sure that I want to reject her." Her eyes widened at his words, out of surprise and a little bit of excitement. So, you will tell her? Gabriel shook his head, he picked his jacket that he had slung over the sofa and shrugged. Not yet.

If her nightmares are a regular occurrence we might have to seek professional help, get to the root of it all" In the meantime, take good care of her Grace. Make sure she doesn't think too much, keep her occupied." time, tak las he waved her goodbye and left. "Sc. Drace is here to see you" Chapter 20 His secretary April said as Gabriel ended the call with some board of directors he was talking to. Much of his day had been spent in a meeting or the other. He forgot just how much work he had left in the office waiting for him.

He wondered why Draco had come, he had sent Draco to do some digging on Suzie's family just yesterday, he wondered if he had come up with answers so quickly. "Let him in." He said in a clipped tone as he went back to his work. Shortly after she left, Draco walked in, he was wearing the same outfit from the day before. Gabriel looked up and acknowledged his beta with a nod. "Alpha" Draco grunted before settling down. "Any news." "What kind of news?" "Suzie. Her pack." Draco sighed. "I found her pack. Or rather what's left of it.

They've been in conflict for years now, the pack is split into like three fractions." "What makes it worse is that they won't talk. If they know something about Suzie, they're not saying a word." Gabriel sighed. Of course, he didn't expect it to be that easy. He reclined in his chair and sighed. "I was really hoping Sabine won't be our next alternative but turns out she might be." Draco nodded in agreement, "I'm sure she would be more than willing to work with us for the right price. That bit was true.

For the right price, but knowing Sabine, she wouldn't ask for money, it would be much more worse. "Anything else to report." Draco was silent for a few seconds. "Actually, there is something I want to ask you." "What is that?" "You didn't tell me about Lori." Gabriel paused. Then he slowly looked up. Of course, Draco would figure it out, he wasn't dumb. Besides, he was his beta. He would have picked up the signals. Gabriel would have mentioned it to him, but he was too busy being worried about Emilia. His mind was way too occupied during those moments.

"And the fact that she's the baby's new nanny, and the fact that she's your mate and the fact that she's human?" "Oh. I was going to tell you." Draco raised his eyebrow and Gabriel shrugged. "Eventually." Draco scoffed. Chapter 20 "Well, when I saw her in the hospital, I managed to get a good sniff of her." Draco was a Bloodhound. A special ability a handful of wolves had. It made him valuable at his beta's side. "He asked as he leaned on his table, eager to hear what Drace had to say. "I don't think she's human." Gabriel was slightly taken aback. "What?" Draco nodded slowly.

"Are you re "I am. I never miss "What do you think she?" Drac shrugged "If I have come across her kind before, it would have been much easier in identifying what she is, but I have not, in therefore I cannot state what I think she "But whatever she is, she is not fully human. * "Or perhaps someone or something in her bloodline is not human. Either way, the scent hangs strongly on her" Well, this was a new development. "You have met a lot of supernaturals Draco, are you sure you cannot categorically state what she is or what she might be?" He pressed. Draco sighed.

"At first sniff, I thought witch. But then the more I could smell the more complicated the smell became." "Whatever she is, do you think she's dangerous? Or will become harmful to the habby?
