Chapter 26 Chapter 26 The next morning, Lori woke up in Gabriel's arms, resting on top of his chest. She didn't know when they had switched positions, but she was pleasantly surprised that she woke up early enough for Gabriel to still be in bed. Which was quite a feat to be honest because all the times she had slept in his room, she always woke up to an empty bed. Gabriel stirred and opened his eyes. "You're awake." He said as he yawned. Lori gently pulled away from him. And you're still in bed." Hnmmm. Gabriel said as he buried his face in his pillow.

"Good morning." Lori said as she climbed out of the bed. She didn't wake up all through the night, Jenny and Sylvia had been alternating Emilia's night feeds just so she could sleep better. "Good morning. Gabriel murmured as she walked out of the room and straight into the baby's room. Sylvia was awake and already in the room. "Good morning Sylvia." "Good morning Lori." She said as she looked up from the table where she was neatly folding Emilia's clean laundry. "I hope she didn't give you much trouble." She asked as she peeped in the crib and saw that Emilia was still sleeping. "Not really.

She just woke up to feed around 4am and I gave her a bottle. Then I rocked her for some time before she went back to sleep." "Okay. Thank you for your help." She said and Sylvia shrugged. "No problem." She said as she walked out of the room. She checked the baby's wardrobe to bring out an outfit for the day for her. She would wake her up later, then after that she would change her diaper and then feed her. She was mentally planning her day in her head when Gabriel walked in. 'She's still asleep?' He asked and Lori nodded. 'Yea.' "Okay. That's good.

I'll be going out to make arrangements for our trip to Canada. You should start packing." "Okay. How many days will we be there?" "Hamm. I don't think we'll spend any more than three days." 1/5 Chapter 26 Lori nodded. "It's cold right now over there so pack a lot of coats." "Okay." They didn't leave for their flight till later in the evening. Lori packed all day.

It was her first time traveling with a baby and she had been so scared of forgetting to pack something important so she had gone over everything she packed over and over, obsessing over each item and wondering if she needed them or not. Sylvia also helped, they narrowed down the list of things she would need and the things she would not need to pack. She also quickly went out to buy coats, for herself. She didn't pack any so she went to a store to get some. Gabriel mentioned it was very cold where they were going even though it was April.

Gabriel had mentioned something about the place snowing all year. After they had packed and got their things ready, Tony drove them to the airport. Lori sat at the back with the baby, Emilia. Emilia who had probably suspected that something was going on was fussy all through the ride, refusing to stay in her car seat and staying in Lori's arms. They reached a private jet hanger thirty minutes later and Lori's jaw dropped when she saw that they would be taking a private jet. Whew! She had never even flown business class or first class before but she was going to be in a private jet?!

It was insane!! She was going to be flying in a private jet! Insane. "Are you good?" Gabriel asked her moments later when they walked across the runway towards the private jet. Lori nodded. Tony had grabbed their luggage while Gabriel had grabbed Emilia's car seat. "Yes. I didn't know you owned a private jet." Gabriel shrugged. "It didn't come up." "But yea. I own one." "Two actually." He added and Lori simply nodded. "Wow! I've never been on a private jet before." She said and Gabriel smiled at her. "Well. There's a first time for everything." There truly was.

Lori thought as she stepped into the jet. Who would have ever thought she'd be in a private jet, or actually going to Canada?! She had never been out of the country before in her whole life. The thought of traveling always appealed to her, but she didn't have any money, never did and she didn't even believe she would ever make enough money to travel. She just wanted to get by in life. The flight to Canada took a total of four hours, not that she was actually counting though, because Emilia was nervous and fussy throughout the entire flight and Lori did everything to calm her down.

She basically carried her throughout the entire flight. Gabriel helped, at least he tried to but he couldn't really calm her down, at least not the way Lori would. Besides, it was her job too so she wasn't complaining. They arrived at Calgary, Canada few minutes to ten and when they were finally done at the airport with clearance and all, they left for their hotel. When they finally reached their hotel room, Lori was exhausted. Thoroughly. Gabriel had booked a whole suite for them. The suite was large, not as large as an average suite but large enough in Gabriel's opinion.

It was clean and spacious. With a large four poster bed, a tv, a living room area with a couch that doubled as a bed and a large bathroom, a hot tub and a view. As he had predicted it was very cold, but the suite had a fireplace and central heating. 2/5 Chapter 25 Lora's gorts ranging Emilia's clothes for bed the makeshift basinet she brought with. Emilia had been fussy all through the night, it was understandable. it was her first flight and the rude must have spooked her a mile. Overall she gave Lora a hard time as she wouldn't stop crying. Gabriel could see that Lora was already so sad.

Want anything for dinner? He asked as he changed her into a plain white onesie after putting on a fresh diaper for her. Lora shook her head. I'm not sure. Maybe a cup of coffee would do." He murmured. It was so cold. They had dressed warm enough for the cold, but she was never fully expected now cold it was when they landed. And it was actually sowed that night! She was glad she had at least dressed the bay appropriately, fearing that she might catch a cold but Emilia was a fine. And when they got to their warm and toasty hotel suite she felt much better. "Anything else?"

Gabriel asked and she shrugged. "I'm actually not very hungry. I'm so tired. All I want to do is to sleep." She said and Gabriel nodded. "Me too. I'll ring room service to bring up a cup of coffee for you." He said as he walked to the living room where the phone was. Lori walked into the bathroom with a change of clothes, eager to see she was completely exhausted. Their coffee arrived minutes later and Lori quickly found out that she actually didn't really want the coffee. She just needed something but to drink a few sips, she dropped the cup and checked on Emilia. Gabriel walked up to her.

"Don't worry. I know you're tired. Just go to bed and I'll take care of her." "Really?" Lori asked as she rubbed at her sleepy eyes and Gabriel nodded. "Yes. Don't worry." He said and she murmured a thanks and she switched off the bedside lamp, fell on the bed and buried herself inside the covers. It didn't take much more for her to fall asleep. Vara had arrived early. Sabine didn't know if she could interpret that as bad news. She was hoping for good news anyways. Her meeting with Gabriel had left her in high spirits.

He had fallen into her hands, now all that was left was for her to find something to trap him with. She was not surprised when he had reached out to her asking for information about Suzie's family. It was inevitable. She had planted the seed and left it to germinate. Her only surprise was that he had contacted her sooner than she expected. She wasn't expecting him to be genuinely curious for another few weeks, months even, when he had time to really think on it, but his urgency was a cause of concern for her. Her ploy to use her knowledge of Suzie's family against him was pure coincidence.

Sabine didn't even know who Suzie was, but Vara did. And Vara knew about Suzie's family. Vara was a sort of old acquaintance for Suzie. They were friends when they were much younger, but after Suzie's pack started having problems it became harder to reach her. When Sabine's spies had confirmed that Gabriel's illegitimate child was conceived by Suzie, Vara had been shocked. Especially since she was also unaware of the news that Suzie died during childbirth. Vara had been the one to break it to Suzie's mother. Even though according to Vara, Suzie had not spoken to her mother in years.

They didn't have a very good relationship and it was mostly her mother's fault. 35
Chapter 26 Still, she had revelled in throwing the fact that Gabriel knew nothing about the mother of his daughter's family in his face and that she knew more than he did. Of course, that would bother him. She knew he would also want to do the right thing and start to seek out Suzie's family. Which he did right away. Much more sooner than she anticipated. She had given him the name and the last two addresses of Suzie's mother's home that she had been able to acquire all thanks to Vara.

She had also asked for his word in return. He should have said no, it was the logical thing any alpha would do, knowing how valid their word was. But he didn't and now she had endless ways to end him. Just thinking about it made her tingle. "Did you find anything?" She asked Vara who nodded. She dropped a brown envelope on her table. Sabine put out her cigarette, leaving the stub on the floor while she picked up the envelope with her crimson red nails. She reached in and pulled out a couple of pictures. She looked at them for a while and turned to Vara.

What is this?" Vara shrugged, looking bored already. "Our spies at the hanger saw Gabriel Caine heading for his private jet. He wasn't alone. There was a woman with him and his daughter." Sabine looked at the photos again, anger stirring up in her.

The photos showed Gabriel holding a baby carrier with the baby inside, a man in front of them who seemed to be helping with their luggage and a small petite woman next to him, her raven black hair was blowing in the wind and Sabine couldn't see her face, but in the photos she and Gabriel were staring at each other, he even holds her in one of the pictures. "And we don't know who the woman is?! Isn't there any way of finding out?" Vara sighed. "No. Not really.

Gabriel's staff and employees are members of his pack, so even if they knew who this woman is, they would never say a word." "The only other way of finding her is using Chrissy Garcia." Sabine jerked towards her. "Suzie's mother?" Vara nodded. 'I'd assume the woman is important enough for Gabriel to take her on the trip. Since she is, we have to find out what she means to him and who she is." "For the right price, Chrissy Garcia would sing like a canary." Vara said with a sly smile on her face.

Chapter 27 Chapter 27 Gabriel woke up well rested the next morning. He had tried to get out of bed twice when Emilia got fussy but despite his protests, Lori promised to handle it. So when he woke up and still found her sleeping he decided to give her more time to sleep. She would not be accompanying him anyways. He had thought long and hard about it and decided that it was very risky for him to bring her along. Especially since there would be certain conversations that he wouldn't be able to talk about in front of her.

He would ask her to stay in the hotel, then see Mrs Chrissy Garcia, taking her granddaughter with him. He had decided on an escort last minute, feeling weird that he had travelled without Draco by his side. Gabriel couldn't remember the last time he had traveled without Draco. His escort would be arriving with a car in the next few hours and he only had little time to get there. Sabine had not told him much but from what she described Suzie wasn't in good terms with her mother. But her mother had tried to reconcile with her.

Gabriel didn't know what her mother did that was so serious but he has decided it wasn't really his business. He was more concerned about Emilia than any other thing. Well, Emilia and Lori now. He thought as he looked at the beautiful woman sleeping on the bed. He would ask questions. He would even pay Mrs Garcia if she wanted payment. Emilia was still sleeping, so he decided to let her sleep some more while he took a shower. Lori stirred a bit, rubbing at her sleepy eyes. She patted the bed and noticed that it was empty.

She rolled to the other side to check on Emilia in the makeshift bassinet and found out that she was still sleeping. Oh she was still quiet tired. She could hear the shower running, Gabriel must be getting ready to leave then, she thought as she jumped out of the bed. In front of the vanity mirror she loosened her hair from bun and brushed it. She was still quiet tired as hell, the baby had been so fussy and the nights she had with Emilia not interrupting her sleep had made her forget just how many times she had to wake up and take care of her in the night.

It was why she had refused Gabriel's help when he asked. She felt like she should do it, besides the only reason Emilia was fussy in the first place was because she was in a new environment. She was probably very confused and struggling to grasp why they were moving around so quickly. She walked to the living room and called room service, Emilia would be waking up anytime soon and she needed to make her bottle. She needed some hot water and also breakfast. She didn't eat anything, although she had some food on the flight though it was only complimentary pastries.

1 She was in the living room sorting out Emilia's outfit for the day when the door of the bathroom opened and Gabriel came out. Lori stared at him. He was dripping wet and wearing a towel. The towel was wrapped tightly around his waist, but low enough for Lori to see his V line and when he turned towards her. Oh God she was staring again. She looked down, focusing on the clothes she was picking out and waited until Gabriel directed his gaze at her. 'Hey! You're awake.' Lori nodded. 'Yea.

Good morning." "Good morning." "I actually didn't know you'd be awake this early, I thought you'd sleep in after all the stress." Lori shrugged. "I heard you in the shower and woke up. Besides we're leaving soon right?" Gabriel grimaced. He walked closer to her, there was a towel around his shoulder and he used it to dry his hair. "That's the thing. I actually want you to say in the hotel." "What?! Why?" 1/5 Chapter 27 Lori asked as she dropped the clothes. "Lori will be meeting her grandmother today and I think she might find it weird that you're with me.

I don't want her to make any stupid assumptions." That didn't sound right. Lori stood up, facing him with her arms on her waist. "What assumptions?! You'd just tell her that I'm Emilia's nanny." "I know, I know. But it's not as easy as it sounds..." "It sounds very easy Gabriel..." Lori gave him a pointed look. "What are you going to do when you need to feed her? I don't think I packed a vacuum flask." She should have. She should have really packed one but Sylvia had convinced her it wasn't necessary and she truly didn't think it was anyways. Gabriel shrugged.

"We'll be gone for only a few hours. I doubt she'd need to feed..." "But what if she does?!" Lori persisted and Gabriel shrugged. "Okay. I'll go buy a vacuum flask." Lori sighed. It just didn't make sense for her nor to go. "Lori. Please try and understand. Besides, we'd be gone for a few hours and back very soon. I actually don't plan to stay that long." Lori nodded. "Okay. I'll pack a bag for you." "Thank you." Gabriel said. "In the meantime. You should get some rest, I know you still need to sleep. Well, that bit was true anyways, she did need to sleep.

But she didn't understand why she couldn't come along. Gabriel left the hotel an hour later, even why he was leaving, Lori had fussed over the baby all through while she saw them off to the car. She kept checking if the baby was warm enough and reminding him of how to change the baby's diaper since there was going to be no makeshift diaper table. He found it cute that she was being so fussy over Emilia, almost like she was her mum. She also seem to be really agitated that he was leaving without her.

He wished there was a better way to allay her fears, but the topics he wanted to discuss to Mrs Garcia were private. The woman would also probably find it weird that he had a human nanny too. There were too many questions that would be left unanswered and look too suspicious. It was better he went without her. It wasn't his first time going out with the baby, but he didn't go out with the baby very often, so the diaper bag that Lori had given him to carry was heavy. He wondered if it was because she had packed unnecessary things.

They were lucky the hotel had given them a vacuum flask they could borrow, so that settled the idea of what Emilia would eat if she was hungry. Emilia seemed to be content to sleep after causing so much trouble the night before. Gabriel didn't have any problem with that. Shortly after they arrived at a small grey house at the end of a street. It was a old dilapidated house and somehow, Gabriel couldn't imagine Suzie ever living there. Suzie with all her high handedness.

The escort he had hired, who was a distant friend of Draco and a member of another pack that was allied with them was called Luco. Gabriel didn't know what the name meant but he assumed it was a nickname. Luco went to the house to knock first, see if anyone was home before Gabriel brought Emilia out of the car. The woman said and Gabriel nodded. "But that's not really why I'm here.

Is there any hutu of that in your family?" "Her doctor told us to look into Suzie's medical history Mrs Garcia looked at the photos of Suzte again and shook her head. "Now, I remember when I had Suzie. She was a perfect healthy baby "She didn't experience a single growth spurt."

Chapter 28 Chapter 28 "What?!" Gabriel asked and Mrs Garcia nodded, It's actually perfectly normal for pups in our pack. We just don't experience growth spurts. It's weird that Emilia is experiencing that. What about you? Did you experience growth spurts?!" "I did." Gabriel said, now totally confused, and slightly angry that he might have come all the way to Canada for nothing. Nothing at all. "Although it wasn't as early. My parents said I had one when I was six months old." Mrs Garcia nodded. "I'll admit it is strange she is having one so early." Gabriel sighed.

"Is there anything else about Suzie's medical history that I should know?" He asked and the woman shrugged. 險 "Not that many. We are prone to difficult births in our families. If Suzie had given birth in the traditional family way, she might still be alive. But that's besides that. I assume you will have to deal with the asthma..." "She'll grow out of it after her first shift." Mrs Garcia said and Gabriel shook his head. "No. Emilia doesn't have asthma." "She should." Mrs Garcia said and Gabriel shook his head again.

"I'm telling you, she doesn't have asthma," "All kids in the Garcia line are born with asthma." "Maybe it hasn't come up yet, it'll probably come up when she's older but you should be seeing the signs already." "Well, I'm speaking to you that as a matter of fact, Emilia doesn't have asthma." Gabriel insisted, mildly getting angry of what the woman was insinuating. "Maybe she won't have any because of me." Gabriel added and Mrs Garcia didn't look convinced. "I don't think so. We all had it. Every baby had it. Every one of them!

Even the ones that married other members of stronger packs." "It probably hasn't really shown up yet." Mrs Garcia waved it away. She was convinced that she was right. Gabriel watched her closely. He had come here for answers and gotten even more confused. The woman couldn't seem to give him any important or discerning information. How the hell was he supposed to find out why Emilia was having growth spurts now? 1/4 Chapter 28 What the hell was he supposed to do? "Can I, can I hold her?" Mrs Garcia asked quietly and Gabriel nodded.

He let the woman hold her granddaughter and he sat there deep in thoughts. If he had know that this was the quality of information he would be getting he wouldn't have made such a stupid promise to Sabine in the first place. There was nothing here for him in Canada. Nothing at all, his visit had been fruitless. It was a waste of time and energy. At least Emilia got to meet her grandmother, but at what cost? Suzie had stayed away for a reason and he wished he knew that reason before ever coming to visit her. "Oh she's so precious!" The woman cooed as she rocked Emilia in her arms.

I'm sure it mustn't be easy. Raising her all alone." Gabriel sighed. "It hasn't. He admitted and the woman sighed. It was a lie, with Lori's help it had certainly been very easy, he just chose not to admit that. "I could help. I didn't have much of a relationship with my daughter, I wouldn't want that to happen with my granddaughter." "Whenever you're in America, you're free to drop by and see her." Gabriel said and the woman nodded. She still looked a bit unconvinced. "How long will you stay in Canada?" Gabriel shrugged.

"I'd probably leave today or tomorrow." "So soon?!" The woman gasped and Gabriel nodded, I'm a very busy man." "Oh I'd like to see her one last time before you leave. Please." The woman pleaded and Gabriel sat still, deep in thoughts, still pissed at himself. "Where are you staying? I can come visit before you leave." She persisted and Gabriel wondered if it was a good idea. No it wasn't, but he felt bad denying her that pleasure. "We're staying at Wyndham." "Oh! Oh okay! Would you mind me coming by tomorrow? Before you leave?" She asked and Gabriel nodded. "No problem.

Luco would come pick you up." He said and the woman nodded eagerly. "Thank you. Thank you very much." 2/4 Chapter 28 "I'm afraid we have to leave now Mrs Garcia. Thank you for your time." He said as he stretched out his hand for Emilia. The woman reluctantly gave the baby back to her father and Gabriel felt relieved with her in his arms. "Oh it's no problem. It's a pleasure! I'm glad Suzie had the good sense to get knocked up by The alpha of one of the most revered pack in the continent." "It's the one good thing she did right." The woman murmured.

Gabriel made no comment as he walked out of the house with Emilia back in her baby carrier. He was glad it was over really. "Mrs Garcia, I'd be glad if you could take a look at your family's medical records for me to reconfirm everything you've said. I'd really appreciate it." He said and she nodded. "I will. I'll have another look." Gabriel fished out his business card. "This is my card. It has my number. You can call me when you finally find something or tell me tomorrow before I leave." The woman nodded. "Okay. Okay." He also reached out into his coat for a sealed envelope.

The woman was living in a house that was falling apart, she probably needed some help with money. He had some money changed to Canadian dollars when he arrived. "Here. Thank you for your time." She took the envelope and opened it, her eyes widened. "Oh thank you! Thank you so much Mr Gabriel!" "Is it okay if I call you Gabriel? I feel as though you're my son in law already?!" She asked as she practically started jumping. Son in law?! Oh no. No possible way she could think of him that way. "You can call me Gabriel.

But please, don't think of me as your son in law, Suzie and I were never married." The woman cackled. The money seemed to have loosened her up. "Oh I know! I know!" "Mrs Garcia I'd appreciate your discretion with this. Not many people know about my daughter. Or her mother." He said and she nodded. "Trust me! My lips are sealed." She assured him. "Thank you." While he walked back to the car with Luco in front, a thought popped in his head. "Mrs Garcia, do you know a woman named Sabine Reinhardt, she is the alpha of Sceptre Kun." The woman shrugged. "No, I don't know her." Gabriel sighed.

How then did Sabine know her? He at least needed to find that out. 3/4 "But, her pack, I know someone who's in her pack." "Who?" "I don't think you'll know her but she and Suzie used to be friends. Her name is Vara. She was the one who told me of Suzie's death." Vara. So it was Vara who knew about Suzie. "Thank you again, for your time." Gabriel said as he entered the car with Emilia. Well, he was glad he was done with all that. The hotel had a hot tub! Lori had no idea. She had slept a little more when Gabriel and Emilia left, but she was too restless so she had breakfast.

She found the hot tub and then decided to go for a dip in it. She stripped down to her black bra and panties, slowly examining herself in the mirror. Her C-section scar ran across her lower belly, the scar was no longer red, it's color was starting to fade. She had not really cared much about how her body had changed after pregnancy, she didn't really like to think about it. But looking at herself in the mirror she could see the changes. Her breasts were fuller, fuller than they had ever been, she now had stretch marks on her belly, they were faint, but they were there.

She had never had to deal with those before, Lori was always thin, but now she had them. The nurse had mentioned something about it all fading after but she wasn't so sure they would. Even if they didn't, she didn't think she'd really care. She thought as she got into the hot tub. The water was also hot, deliciously hot. She settled in the tub and closed her eyes. Oh she could really soak in it for hours! She was barely in it for five minutes when she heard the door to the suite click open. "Lori? We're back!" Gabriel called out and she froze.

Chapter 29 Chapter 29 "I'm in the hot tub!!!" Lori called out quickly, embarrassed as she swiftly jumped out of the tub and wrapped the first towel she could see around herself. Luckily, her clothes were still with her so she put them back on, despite the fact that she was still wet. She quickly tried to dry as much water off her skin as she could. She ran out of the bathroom, Gabriel and Emilia were back. "How was it?" She asked as he sat down on the sofa, he set the baby carrier next to him while he pulled off his shoes.

Lori couldn't help but notice that he looked like wasn't in a good mood. "Good. Emilia slept all through, then she woke up when we got to the hotel." He said and Lori went to peep at the baby in the baby carrier. Emilia was sucking on a pacifier. "Is everything okay?" She asked as she saw that he looked a bit off, he was reclined on the sofa while he ran his hand through his hair and sighed. Gabriel nodded. "Yes. Just not what I was expecting..." He answered. He looked up at her and saw that her hair was wet. "What happened? Did I interrupt you?" He asked and she shrugged. "No not really.

I was just trying out the hot tub." "Oh. Well, don't let me stop you then.." He murmured and she shook her head. Oh she couldn't go back in there now with the knowledge that he was in the room, that would be weird. At least for her. "Oh no. Don't worry about that. Maybe another time." She said as she picked the baby up. She knew they had only been gone for a long time but she missed her so much already. She smothered the baby with kisses and turned to Gabriel. "Did you find anything?" Gabriel shrugged. "Nothing worth finding."

Luckily, Emilia doesn't have anything in her medical history that is particularly concerning." Lori nodded. That was good then. "That's good." "Right?" She asked and Gabriel nodded. "It is. Besides Emilia got to meet her grandmother." "Okay. How was she?" 2 1/4 Lori asked and Gabriel shrugged. "She seemed okay. But she also told me she and Suzie had not talked in years." "Anyways, we're leaving tomorrow." Yes! Finally. She couldn't wait to be back home. Home. Even though it wasn't really her home she was already so fond of the place.

She knew that she shouldn't, she was a nanny and she was replaceable but she had still grown attached to it. She couldn't help it. "Okay. I'll pack tonight." She replied. He was supposed to have left Colorado. Ordinarily, he shouldn't have spent an extra day, but someone tipped him off about Jared's location and he had no choice but to check it out. He knocked at least three times at Jared's motel room door before Jared came to open it. When the door opened and Jared saw his face he stepped back a little. "Asher..." He said and Asher pushed him out of his way as he entered the room.

"This place looks like a dump. He said as he took a look at the messy sheets on the bed and the coffee table that was filled with takeout boxes. 'Well..' "Well what?! How have you been Jared?" Jared shrugged. "Been good. How's business?" Asher nodded. He brought out a cigarette pack from his pocket and offered Jared one, Jared took it with shaky hands. He was still wondering about how Asher managed to find him. Or why he even found him in the first place, he knew it would have something to do with Lori. "Business is good. Got new contacts here."

I think I might come here more often." He said and Jared nodded. Jared's eyes darted all around the room, he left his gun in the bedside drawer. He should have kept it closer to him. He wondered if Asher had somehow found Lori and found out that he was the one who pushed her down the stairs. Did he know that yet? Was he here to kill him? He couldn't read his face well enough to tell. "Well, I'm sure you already know why I'm here... I don't intend to stay long.." He said and Jared nodded. "Of course, You're here about Lori right?" "Yes."

What else did you think I was here for?" "Idle chit chat?!" Asher exclaimed as he busted into laughter. Jared's fists hardened. 2/4 "What if I decide to not tell you anything about her? What you gonna do then?" "Oh you're not going to do that. I know you won't." Asher took a turn around the room, it was truly filthy, he wondered just how long Jared had been living in the dump for it to look so messy. *Besides, I hear you've been struggling lately, you've been owing your suppliers money, living in the dump... I might be able to help with that." Asher said as he took a puff of his cigarette.

Jared glared at him. "You were the one who cut me off." "Yes! I did. Because you were acting fucking weird man. You were freaking me out!" "What was I supposed to do?!" He asked and Jared sighed. He collapsed on the bed, his shoulder was slumped and his expression was blank. He would just have to be straightforward with Asher. "Well, if you're looking for Lori, I can't find her either. She hasn't been in her apartment in weeks." Asher nodded. "Okay. The baby, what about the baby?" Jared chuckled. "You're still on that? I thought you didn't want it." "I never said that!" Asher fired back.

Jared continued laughing. "Well, if you must know, she lost the baby." What?! Lori lost his baby? Asher thought as he froze on the spot. As stupid as it sounded, a part of him had been excited, happy even that he was having a child. He had already dreamed of life with his son and Lori. "You sad? Awwn. It's a good thing she did though. That baby would have been so messed up." "Shut up!" Asher demanded as he walked closer to Jared and Jared just laughed. No, actually he wasn't going to shut up.

Asher felt like he could just waltz in people's lives, use them and dump them when he decided they had no use for him anymore but somehow he still managed to go back to them and attempt to do the same shit all over again. He was growing tired of it. "You raped her Asher. Countless times. That baby was not a product of love or anything good. Hell I'm sure even Lori herself didn't want it!" "If you look at it from another point of view, I think God did her a favor." He said. Before he could move out of the way, Asher charged at him and punched him in the face.

Jared fell face palm on the sheets. Ouch, that hurt. He groaned and he raised his head slowly from the sheets and touched his mouth and found out that he was bleeding. Fuck. He was just recovering from the last beating he got at the hands of some junkie who was owing him money and now Asher felt like he could treat him like shit on top all of that?! 3/4 "Don't! Don't ever talk to me like that. Ever." Asher growled and Jared spat out the blood on the dirty rug.

He stayed quiet, he was smart enough to Asher had a bad temper, even worse than his and the things he could do when he was angry, Jared didn't want to even think about it. He paced around the room, his breathing heavy and labored till he finally calmed down and stood in front of Jared again. He took a deep sigh and asked Jared another question. "Now. Do you know where she is?" "I ran into her at a fancy restaurant with some man.. I don't know who he is.." Asher added. Jared shook his head. "I told you already.

She's not even in the apartment she paid for." Chapter Comments Tina Scislow E for a short time Tina Scislow E as he burst into VIEW ALL 8 COMMENTS > 19

Chapter 30 - chapter 30 (English Translation)

Chapter 30 Chapter 30 Gabriel was in a mood the rest of the night. He stayed up on his laptop working on the couch till one am. And when he finally went to bed, he slept on the sofa. Lori wondered if his current mood was because of the visit. Nevertheless his mood bothered her, greatly. She didn't like tiptoeing around people's moods, because she was always too fixated on what she would say or do that could eventually annoy them. The next morning, he was better, helping her with baby and making jokes about how they would go club hopping when they landed.

He was better but he still couldn't shake the feeling that something was wrong with him. They had breakfast in silence and a man named Luco arrived to drive them to the airport. Lori changed into a pair of pants, white shirt and paired with a green sweater she had bought recently while shopping for a coat. Lori held the baby while Luco and a frontman helped with their luggage. Finally, they were leaving, she thought as they all walked inside the elevator. Certainly not the kind of travel experience she was expecting but it was fair, it was really fair.

And at least she had a chance to travel out of the country for once. She should probably start saving towards traveling, she thought as the elevator dinged and they arrived at the hotel lobby. If she saved up at least half or more than what she was making she could probably have enough to travel to at least three countries, or even more! Who knows, it all depended on how long she kept being a nanny. She was still deep in thoughts and didn't know when Gabriel put a hand in front of her. "What?" She asked as he stopped her. "Wait here." He told her as he walked away from her.

Lori looked ahead and saw him walking towards a woman sitting at the lobby. Who was that?! Was that Emilia's grandmother?! "Mrs Garcia. What are you doing here?" He asked and the woman shrugged, her eyes traveling to the other end of the room where there was a young woman holding her granddaughter. She bowed slightly. "You said you were leaving today and I decided to come say hello before you left." "Besides, you said you would send the car to pick me up... I waited for a while but it never come..." She trailed off as she spotted Luco next to the woman. Standing rigid. Gabriel bristled.

It was true. After hearing that Vara was connected to the woman he thought it was a bad idea for him to see Mrs Garcia again. He was hoping to give her a call after they landed to apologize for her not being able to say goodbye to her granddaughter but she beat him to it. "It slipped my mind. I'm sure Luco also forgot." Gabriel lied smoothly and the woman nodded. She clutched her purse close to her, every now and then her eyes would dart to the side where Lori was standing with the baby.

"I also tried the number that was on your business card but nobody picked up!" 1/4
Chapter 30 That was because he gave her his work phone and he had told his secretary to only forward important calls from known contacts. Im sorry about that Mrs Garcia." "Are you here because you found something about Suzie's medical history?" "Did you manage to find anything about her?" Mrs Garcia shook her head. "No, I even looked into her father's medical history but I couldn't find anything of the sort." Gabriel suddenly remembered the words of the woman.

She had told him that Suzie and her had a fallout with her when she discovered who her father was, he wondered if it was of any importance to ask who exactly the man was. Maybe it could help him. You mentioned something about Suzie being angry about who her father was. Tell me, who was her father?" He asked and Mrs Garcia shrugged. "Oh you don't really want to know do you?" The woman rubbed her face anxiously. "I do. I think it's quite important." Mrs Garcia was silent for a few seconds before sighing. "He was part of our pack, Chester Maynard. And he was also my stepbrother." Gabriel paled.

Ugh. He shouldn't have asked. He really shouldn't have. "You had a child with your step-brother?!" He asked and she shrugged. "I know. It sounds bad. But we were young and we were foolish. And my mother was dead. He was the only one I could confide in." Gabriel sighed. He didn't even feel like pursuing the issue any more. "Who's that woman over there?" Mrs Garcia asked as she looked at Lori again. "My friend." Gabriel answered in a clipped tone. "We're leaving for the airport now." "Oh! Okay! Can I say goodbye to Emilia before you leave?"

It'll only take a minute." The woman said as she made a beeline for Lori and the baby and Gabriel grabbed her arm. "Wait here! I'll bring her to you." He said hastily. The woman looked at him weirdly but didn't say anything. Gabriel walked towards Lori. "Is that? Suzie's mother?" 2/4 Chapter 30 She asked and Gabriel nodded. 'She wants to say goodbye to Emilia before we leave. Wait here.' He instructed as he took the baby from her arms. Lori frowned. Why was he being so weird about everything?! Lori asked as she watched him walk away with Emilia in his arms.

After a while, he came back with the baby and the woman turned around and left the hotel. Gabriel made sure he watched her leave before walking back to Lori. "Are you ready?" He asked and she nodded. "Okay. Let's go home." He asked as he stretched out his hand to her. Lori took his hand in hers and they walked towards the exit together. "What did you find?" Vara asked as she picked up the call on the first ring, putting the call on loud speaker. She was in Sabine's room, where Sabine was lying in bed with a silk robe and a sleeping naked man on her bed. "You were right.

There was a woman with him." "How does she look like? Did you get to see her?" Mrs Garcia shook her head. "No. He kept her far away from me and when I asked him who she was he said she was a friend." "Can you describe this woman?" Vara asked again, Sabine was frowning, getting impatient. "Well.. I don't know. She had dark hair, she was small, very petite, very pretty too. I couldn't make out any facial features since she was so far away.

But I know one thing, Gabriel didn't want me to go near her." "And he didn't bring her with him when he came the first time so you might be right about him hiding her." Vara sighed. "When you called yesterday, you said he was asking about Suzie's medical records..." "Yes! Yes he was. Poor pup is experiencing growth spurts. He seems to be very worried about it." Vara shared a look with Sabine and Sabine nodded. Well, at least they knew why he went to see her in the first place. "Good. Thank you for your help. I'll wire you the money tomorrow morning." "Okay. Okay! I'm happy to help Vara.

Very happy to help. Mrs Garcia beamed as she ended the call. She had never made so much money before in her entire life! Two whole alphas giving her money like it was Christmas! One paying her to keep her mouth shut and the other paying her to talk. At least she could pay some of her bills now and not depend on her useless family. Suzie had at least done something good with her life and for her too.
