

A. Nocturne's 181

Chapter 181 Bullying was not Okay

With her plans for Coral now set in motion, she e-mailed the rough plan of the areas that she wanted her training in across to Eva and placed her phone on the bed at her side.

Now all she had to do was get hold of Coral and let her know she would be going with Eva tomorrow. Ann made her way out of their suite after letting Adam know where she was going and headed down towards the Omega quarters, in the hopes that she would find her there.

It wasn't long before she found some of the omega's milling about in the hallway, and as soon as they saw her, they stood and bowed their heads respectfully.

"I'm looking for Coral. Have any of you seen her?"

The girls exchanged a look and pointed down the hallway.

"Last bedroom on the right your highness." They answered in unison, keeping their eyes firmly fixed on the floor.

Ann frowned and nodded her thanks as she mad

Chapter 182 It Needs Stopping

"Erm... that is... you know, I was going to lend her a book!" She stammered hastily as she shot a quick glare down at Coral who had scabbled to collect everything that had scattered and was now picking herself up off the floor. "Ah... a book." Ann chuckled as she stopped only centimeters away from the omega. "And what book would that be?"

"Erm... well..."

“You are aware that lying to me is not advisable?” Ann interrupted calmly. “Y-y-yes Alpha Queen,” The senior omega stuttered, trembling slightly under the weight of Ann, and Maeve’s gaze.

“You are also aware that I can tell when someone is lying to me... yes?” Ann almost purred as the senior omega began to tremble a little more violently.

“Y-y-yes Alpha Queen...”

“You are also aware that you, “Ann began as she inhaled deeply on either side of the omega’s face before pulling her lip back in disgust, “you reek of bullshit. There

Chapter 183 Elder Linus

Ann stared at the women who stood silently in front other, herself utterly lost for words. They had actively sought help from her father and Narcissa and instead of helping them, they had gone straight to the accused and let him know about the Omega’s allegations?! This was insane!

“How long has this been going on?” Ann asked quietly.

“For around five years now, your highness.”

“It stops now.” Adam growled, “Give me his name and the girls involved.”

The Omega’s looked at each other cautiously, but it was Coral who lifted her head and spoke. “Elder Linus, your highness. I don’t know about all the girls involved, but these two should be able to give you the details,” she answered shakily.

Ann nodded and approached her slowly.

“Thank you. I promise that it will be dealt with as soon as we have finished here. Ladies, if you could give Adam a list of all the girls invol

Chapter 184 You Will Regret

With the Omega’s settled comfortably in their rooms, Ann left two guards outside each of their doors with strict instructions not to let anyone in or out other than herself or Adam.

They made their way to the entrance hall in a grim silence. The horror that these girls had been subjected to over such a long period of time would take years to fix. She couldn’t believe that her father could have been so impassive about it all.

It was just yet another crime to add to Narcissa’s long list of transgression’s and when it came to the time for her to answer for her crimes again, Ann would not grant her the mercy of a quick death, she intended to make her suffer as much as her people had suffered under her rule.

The Elders turned to greet Ann with deep bows and Ann used this time to search out Bartholomew, who had positioned himself at one of the exits to the entrance hall with a small r

Chapter 185 A New Era

Ann smiled tightly as Alpha Felix surveyed the chaotic scene behind her with interest. He was a good-looking man, with stern yet handsome features and powerfully built. His Luna stood next to him, a welcoming and friendly face surrounded by a ma*s*s of black, messy curls that gave her a slightly wild look as she eyed the furor warily.

“My apologies, I had hoped to have this resolved before you arrived.” Ann offered with a small smile. Felix chuckled and waved his hand dismissively.

“You run your kingdom as you see fit, my Queen. Justice cannot wait for such a heinous crime in my opinion. You have acted as befits the royal line, there is o need for apologies.” He said before crossing his arm across his chest and bowing respectfully, his wife and the men behind him following his example.

“It is a pleasure to be here your grace, regardless of circumstances. Thank you for receiving us.” H

Chapter 186 The Attacks

The atmosphere in the dining hall was almost unbearably tense, but it gave Ann the perfect vantage point to see which Elders were openly displeased by her actions with Linus.

Thankfully the tension didn't seem to impact Alpha Felix or his wife in the slightest They sat to Ann's right, making polite conversation with both herself and Adam as they ate.

“I don't know about you, your highness, but I always find these official functions a little stuffy.” Felix chuckled as he tore into a chicken leg appreciatively.

Ann smiled graciously, still a little on edge. She didn't know what to expect from Felix as she hadn't had any cause to meet with him previously and knew his father by reputation only.

“They can be tiring, yes, especially after such a long journey. Did you encounter any issues on the way here?” She asked politely.

“No. Well, not after we were about 5 miles in past t

Chapter 187 I'm So Lucky to Have You

As soon as the door was shut behind them, Ann erupted as she paced furiously.

“How could they be so irresponsible! These are the lives of our people! The blatant disregard for the safety and wellbeing...” Ann froze mid-sentence and swore internally as her eyes landed on the terrified face of Coral peeking out from the study that her bed had been set up in.

She took a few calming breaths as Adam rubbed her arms gently, and she allowed the soothing effect that his presence had on her to wash over her and calm her raging spirit.

“I’m sorry Coral. Things have been a little difficult today. You didn’t need to see that.” Ann said wearily as she sank onto the edge of her bed.

Coral blinked at her and visibly gulped as she took a tentative step into the bedroom area, clasping her arms around herself protectively.

“It’s okay, your highness. There’s no need to apologize

Chapter 188 Not an Omega Anymore

The morning seemed to roll around quicker than she had anticipated, and Ann didn’t feel like she had slept at all. She must have fallen asleep at some point in the early hours though, listening to the rhythmic soft snoring of Adam as his chest rose and fell predictably under her hand.

When she opened her eyes Adam was nowhere to be seen and Coral was in the process of laying out breakfast on the table by the window.

Ann stretched reluctantly and sat up in bed, blinking the sleep from her eyes and before he could open her mouth to ask anything, Coral spoke.

“Good morning your highness.” She said softly with a little bow, “The Queens Consort said to tell you that he’s gone to call Allen, and not to forget that Eva will be here shortly. He thought it prudent to have breakfast in your chambers so as to save a little time.”

Ann opened her mouth to object and then closed it

Chapter 189 Elder Cornelius

Adam had returned to the room shortly after Eva and Coral left and found himself confronted with his beautiful wife focusing intently on the phone in front of her.

He pushed his hands further into his pocket and readjusted himself as he leaned against the doorframe. She was stunning in every way, even focused so intently on whatever she was doing, he just wanted to pepper her neck with kisses and hear her moan underneath him again. It had taken an incredible amount of self-control not to ravage her last night.

His instincts told him that they both needed the release that being together would bring, but he was also acutely aware that when it came to their intimacy, they were both anything but quiet.

There would be nothing holding them back tonight though.

He allowed himself to indulge a little longer, drinking in the sight of her and storing it away in his mind to recall at

Chapter 190 The Rogue Problem

Gasps of horror could be heard from around the room as they conferred amongst themselves whilst Cornelius stood, isolated and speechless in the face of such a verbal a*s*sault.

It was glaringly obvious that not a single person here had challenged her father and had allowed themselves to become complacent in their duties.

“I am waiting for you to make me understand, Cornelius,” Ann growled, her eyes flashing a dangerous gold as the realization set in amongst the Elders that Ann was looking for someone to blame for this colossal tragedy.

When Cornelius didn't reply, instead looking around himself for support from his colleagues, and finding none, he bowed his head in shame.

Ann stood slowly, approaching Cornelius with fury radiating from her and he knew instantly that his former attitude towards her was entirely misplaced.

The raw strength and power that rolled off h