59 The Infested Bio Lab Building

Splat...

Everyone could hear blood splattering.

They turned to look and saw Tang Susu appear in the bushes by the side of the road.

The machete in her hand split open the head of a zombie that was lying in ambush in the grass ahead like a watermelon!

“Growl...” The zombie’s cold eyes froze as it fell to the ground with a thump

Then, the second, the third... and the tenth. The group of people was stunned. The girl who looked the weakest had such extraordinary combat power!

Just who were these people? Why are they so monstrous? How did they dodge so quickly? Can they fly?

And that young man... blew up a zombie’s head with his fist! He didn’t even need a weapon!

Before they could recover from their shocks, the number of zombies had already increased to the point that they could feel the chills in their spines.

However, there was no way to retreat. As they advanced, countless zombies also surrounded them without them knowing!

“We’re finished! We can’t fight our way out!” The people who realized how many zombies were surrounding them were losing hope.

Hopelessness seemed to descend and cloud their hearts. Even their attacks on the zombies were slowing down as if they wanted to stop struggling anymore.

Boom!

However, it was at this moment that they heard a loud explosion, and countless zombies were blasted into one after another. An opening had appeared thanks to the explosion.

“Get away, now!”

After throwing the grenade, Tang Susu then waved at the people behind her who were still hesitating.

Two of them were too slow to act and the zombies latched on to them and dragged them down. Their shrieks shocked everyone out of their hesitation!

Run! Run with all your might!

No one dared to turn back, for fear that they would lose their lives if they were a second slower.

Tang Susu turned around and slashed with the machete in her hand, holding back the zombies from both sides.

Countless gray and cold arms extended toward her as hard as they could. She raised her blade with all her strength and spun in a circle, cutting off more than a dozen sharp claws. She made it look so easy as if she was just harvesting some cabbages.

Suddenly, someone among the newly-joined crew cried out in despair. “Hongping! My Hongping!”

The cry startled Tang Susu. She turned around and saw the fat lady scramble into the sea of zombies, ignoring the threat they proposed.

“Oh my God! What is she doing?” The people who saw what happened were shocked.

Despite being gnawed on and pulled, the woman tried her best to push through them as her eyes fixed on a figure at the back without blinking.

There was a zombie whose face had not rotted fully. He stood at the back of the zombie horde with his head tilted, as if he was wondering why the woman was running toward him.

It was obvious that “he” had just become a zombie and still had some of his consciousness left, but he could no longer understand human emotions.

“Hong ping...” Blood instantly covered the chubby woman as the zombies gnashed and gnawed on her. She was gasping even when she crawled towards him.

“Mom’s here, mom’s here...”

“Don’t look!” A large hand covered Tang Susu’s eyes.

Then, a gentle gust blew past her ears, and in the next second, the tragedy completely disappeared from her eyes.

Her face hardened as she joined the battle again. This time, her attacks became even more ferocious.

With the help of their bombs and armaments, the group cut open a bloody path and they finally arrived at the main entrance of the Bio Lab Building.

However, no one smiled.

The door had already been broken open through brute force, and they could see zombies everywhere inside.

The automated, sound-controlled lights were already lit up on every floor.

That was because there were zombies on every floor.

They roared and flashed past the window. There were so many of them that it was impossible to estimate how many there were. The blood-covered glass explained everything...
