134 Shock! Danshu Iron Certificate! Death Exemption Medallion! (1)

Before Long, under the combined efforts of Luo Feng and Qin Rubing, they had managed to open up the final box.

With a creak, the contents of the box was revealed.

The items inside were all books.

It was a full box.

There was no gap at all.

Most of the books were slightly yellowed.

They were indeed antique books from hundreds of years ago.

“Oh my God, it’s just some ancient books! Host, hurry up and look for a book that teaches the 18 Dragon Subduing Palms!”

“Hahaha! Where’s the Sunflower Manual?”

“Ancient books aren’t really worth much unless they’re the only copy!”

“It would be great if I could get a copy of Hua Tuo’s Green Salve Anthology!”

Luo Feng picked up a random book.

[Ding! Ancient book, age: Ming dynasty. Value: 110 thousand]

Huh...

Are ancient books this worthless?

Does that mean that all these books are only worth around a few million yuan?

“The Art of War by Sun Tzu”, “The Six Secret Teachings,” “The Three Strategies,” “The Wu Zi Art of War,” “The Art of War by Sun Bin,” “The Sima Way,” “The Wei Liaozi,” “Li Wei Gong’s Question and Answer”

He looked through several books in a row.

Are they all military books?

“Host, why are they all military books?”

“Could the owner of this tomb be a general?”

“Hurry up and open the coffin. Let’s see if it gives more information on who the owner of the tomb is!”

“This tomb has likely been gone through before. Otherwise, how would you explain the lack of a tombstone?”

Seeing the chest full of books, Luo Feng decided that it was not worth his time for now.

After all, if he were to go through each and every single book, it would waste a lot of time.

[Ding! A coffin from the Ming dynasty!]

[Gold Nanmu1!]

[Worth 1.88 million!]

Hmm, there's only 1 yellow dot on the coffin?

This means that whatever's contained within costs 1 to 10 million yuan?

It's likely referring to the coffin itself, right?

So, does that mean that there's nothing valuable in the coffin?

Thinking of this...

The situation struck Luo Feng as rather odd.

As the tomb owner, shouldn't he be keeping the most valuable items with him?

How could there be nothing good within the coffin?

It was rather strange.

However, since there was nothing good in it, Luo Feng did not bother to open it up.

Brothers, I won't open the coffin. The archeologists from the government are coming. and if we don't leave any scraps for them to pick up, I bet they'll probably throw a fit!"

"I'll be generous just this once!"

Luo Feng flashed his audience a wide grin, a grin that always made his viewers' imagination run wild.

It felt as if Old Luo was scamming them again.

"Damn, why not open the coffin? We've come all the way here, what's the point if we don't open it?"

"I really can't sleep if you don't open the coffin today!"

"Go f*ck yourself y'all. Why open it this late at night? Are you trying to cost me my sleep!?"

"There aren't much items in this tomb, so I'm just trying to fool around!"

"I'm very curious about who the owner of the tomb is!"

"I've roughly calculated Old Luo's harvest today! It's estimated to be around 700 to 800 million!"

"I doubt it, to me, he made 500 million tops today!"

"The prices of the items Luo Feng found haven't been appraised yet, so I'm just roughly estimating!"

At this moment, the government's official experts who had seen how wise Luo Feng was and had actually left the coffin for them to open felt nothing but gratitude towards the young streamer.

"That's great! That's great!"

"He left us the most valuable coffin!"

"You know, the things inside the coffins are usually the most precious!"

...

"That's right, we'll be able to broaden our horizons once we open it!"

Of course.

They were well aware that even if they made it to the scene, none of the treasures there would belong to them. They would only be there to push the advancement of archaeology.

Even if they helped Luo Feng out with the archaeology, the items would still belong to Luo Feng.

Nevertheless, they would at least have the chance of uncovering these items firsthand, which would be a much more novel experience than watching through a livestream.

Luo Feng was making a round of the burial chamber, while he made a plan to extract all the treasures marked by the dots within it.

However, upon reaching a certain spot, he paused.

The ground was paved with flat stone bricks.

Through his naked eyes, it did not seem like anything was out of normal.

However, through the system's sight, Luo Feng could tell that there was a whole new world beneath it.

Luo Feng looked at the spot with great interest. However, instead of rushing to see what it contained, Luo Feng addressed his audience first. "Guys, there's something off with this tomb!"

...

"What's wrong, Luo Feng? What did you find?" Qin Rubing immediately asked.

"What's wrong? Is there an evil spirit?"

"Is there a mummy? Are you possessed by the devil?!"

Luo Feng answered, "Little Qin, take a look around you. Based off the scale and structure of this tomb, you can tell that it does not belong to any ordinary merchant. It likely belongs to a government official, one who has a high position! After all, it's impossible for an ordinary person to lay hands on Emperor Chenghua's colorful chicken cup, and even more so for them to obtain a Reading in the Village painting!"

Luo Feng continued, "And those three stone pillars are also very strange. They feel like a tribute. The items placed on them should be of equal status to the tomb owner's status, and while there isn't an issue with the Tomb-sealing brick as well as the cricket jar; the porcelain jar filled with gold bricks felt rather odd! Plus, he already has a chest full of gold and silver, so why bother putting in more gold bars into the porcelain jar?"

"Moreover, it is inconsistent to have a box of gold, silver, and jewelry as burial goods, but to place a cricket jar on the stone pillar!"

"Furthermore, there was a chicken cup and a precious painting in one of the boxes. It is obvious that the owner of the tomb attached great importance to the two items"!

"All of this indicates that there are a lot of treasures in this tomb chamber! However, this tomb is missing something very important, which is the evidence of the owner's identity!"

"With the tomb owner's wealth, his status in life must have been high! But it is unreasonable that there is no tombstone here!"
