Chapter 431 – 440

Chapter 431 Dalton's Confession

Cameron gasped dramatically, "Oh my! Dalton, are you really colluding with this criminal?"

1/4

Recalling Meryl's earlier claims that Dalton was in cahoots with the attacker to harm Chandler, Cameron's eyes widened in disbelief.

"Are you out of your mind, Dalton? You're Dylan's eldest grandson! You should be setting an example for the younger generation, not stooping to this!"

Cameron's disappointment was palpable. While her tone lacked sincerity, she put on a convincing performance.

Her relationship with Charlotte had always been strained, partly because Charlotte and her family looked down on Cameron's husband for being a bastard.

The animosity between them dated back over twenty years.

When Cameron was about to marry into the Aniston family, Charlotte's family was busy mourning the death of a relative.

Due to the significance of the funeral, most guests attended that instead of her wedding, leaving Cameron with hardly anyone at her ceremony.

At that time, Morton's mother had passed away. Cameron and Dylan's marriage was a business arrangement, and they the Aniston family but was solely about Morton and his family.

Cameron had set her wedding date long in advance, yet on the big day, very few guests showed up.

For many, marriage was a once-in-a-lifetime event, and this made Cameron uncomfortable. After that, she harbored resentment towards Charlotte.

Now, Cameron couldn't help but revel in Charlotte's embarrassment.

Her words seemed to lament Dalton's failure to set a good example, but in reality, they confirmed his ties to the criminal.

Charlotte shot Cameron a fierce glare, knowing that this wasn't the moment to engage with her.

Chandler tossed the photo at Dalton. "Here's the evidence. What do you have to say for yourself, Dalton?"

Chandler had been wanting to confront Dalton for a while.

After Dalton had kidnapped Meryl for over half a month, Chandler had no intention of letting him off easy.

However, if he was going to deal with Dalton, he needed a legitimate reason.

Chandler figured that reason couldn't be based on Dalton's kidnapping of Meryl. After all, that would be a disgraceful affair that could tarnish Meryl's reputation.

So, he decided to take all the blame upon himself. This way, if Chapter 431 Dalton's Confession not Meryl.

Dalton and Chandler locked eyes

Dalton could see the flicker of darkness in Chandler's gaze.

In fact, he had been used by Zane and hadn't intended to actually put Chandler in danger.

Though he loathed Chandler for taking the woman he loved, his hatred wasn't enough to want to kill him.

Yet, at this moment, facing Chandler's accusations, Dalton found himself at a loss for words. After all, he had little to defend himself with.

As a man, Dalton had his own pride. He had no desire to plead with Chandler.

After all, they were rivals in love.

After a long pause, Dalton muttered, "I have nothing to say. Do as you wish."

Implied in his words was his acceptance of the situation.

"Dalton, what nonsense are you spouting?"

Charlotte interjected immediately, "Those are just a few pictures. They don't prove anything. You were used by Zane, weren't you?"

Being Dalton's mother, Charlotte understood him well.

would harbor any ill intent towards Chandler.

"You were manipulated by Zane. You feel guilty, so you're trying to shield Meryl from harm! This has nothing to do with you! How could you conspire with Zane to harm Chandler?"

Chandler chuckled coldly. "So now it's about him protecting Meryl and getting hurt, instead of Meryl causing your son's injury?"

Chapter 432 Two Choices

At Chandler's words, a flicker of embarrassment crossed Charlotte's face.

Morton was furious. He understood just how difficult Chandler could be. If it weren't for that, he wouldn't have stayed abroad for so long.

"Chandler, what do you want? Why drag my son into our family issues?"

"Morton, what do you mean? We're family, so where are these grievances coming from? I should be glad you're back home."

Morton frowned, hearing the warning hidden beneath Chandler's supposed cheer.

"Besides, this has nothing to do with our relationship. Your son did something wrong; how does that connect to our issues?"

"Stop taking all the blame upon yourself. You're spoiling Dalton. He's not a child anymore, yet he's accomplished nothing. Morton, Charlotte, doesn't this indicate a failure in your parenting?"

Dalton found himself at a loss for words.

The expressions on Morton and Charlotte's faces darkened significantly.

Every word Chandler spoke felt like a direct hit to their

Chapter 432 Two Choices

They realized that Chandler was seeking revenge for Meryl.

After Meryl had been bullied by them, Chandler was determined to restore her dignity.

Chandler had always been one to settle scores.

Meryl sat in the hallway, having just finished a cupcake. She couldn't help but smile at what she heard.

It warmed her to know that Chandler cared about her.

In the hospital room, Chandler's cold gaze swept across Dalton's face.

"I'm giving you two options. Once you recover, you can leave for abroad like your father and never return. If you want to stay in this country, the Aniston family will expel you. In other words, you will no longer be part of the Aniston family."

After he finished speaking, the room fell into a heavy silence.

Morton's face darkened, his voice rising several octaves. "Chandler! You want to disown my son? I refuse to agree!"

Chandler regarded Morton calmly. "If you don't want him expelled, then he can choose the first option."

Yet the first option didn't differ much from being cast out.

Living abroad forever would mean missing out on the resources of the Aniston family. While he would still be associated with the family, such a hollow title held no real value.

Chapter 432 Two Choices.

“Dad, say something! Are you going to let Chandler do this?” Morton was in a complete panic.

Dylan was taken aback by Chandler’s decision.

His instinct told him that Chandler’s reasoning ran deeper than it appeared.

Dalton was Dylan’s favorite grandson, and he had watched him grow up, so their bond was extraordinary.

Dylan turned to Chandler. “Chandler, is this punishment too harsh?”

“Harsh? Dad, have you forgotten our family rules?”

Lydia, who had been silent until now, finally reacted.

Both choices were a dead end for Dalton, but she and Dalton were intertwined.

“Chandler, I’m carrying the next generation of the Aniston family. If Dalton is expelled, what will happen to my child?”

Charlotte nodded in agreement. “Exactly. Lydia is pregnant with the family’s bloodline. That child is Dylan’s great-grandson. Chandler, don’t be so heartless.”

“Heartless? Fine, I’ll make an exception. That child can be considered part of the family, but Dalton cannot.”

Chandler’s tone was resolute as his gaze locked onto Dalton. “You have two paths. Go abroad or be expelled from the Aniston family. Choose one.”

Chapter 433 Procrastination

Dalton lay dejectedly on the hospital bed.

He understood that Chandler’s decision was a warning. After all, without the support of the Aniston family, he was nothing.

He realized that Chandler was taking revenge for the half-month he had kidnapped Meryl, wanting him to pay the price.

“Chandler, you’re kicking me out of the family business and out of the family. With such ruthlessness, do you think Meryl will be scared of you?”

Chandler was the head of the Aniston family, and in that family, the head held absolute authority. Even Dylan couldn’t stop his decisions.

Moreover, colluding with outsiders to harm family members was undeniably Dalton’s fault.

As long as Chandler insisted on making Dalton choose between going abroad and being expelled from the family, Dalton had no choice but to comply; no one could plead for him.

But Meryl was different.

Dalton believed that Chandler genuinely cared about Meryl, so he wouldn’t disregard his image in her eyes.

Chandler thought that expelling his own nephew seemed excessively cruel.

Chapter 433 Procrastination

Before he could speak, Meryl walked in from outside.

“Chandler is the head, so it’s his duty to deal with family members who make mistakes. Only by handling this fairly can the Aniston family maintain order, right?”

As she spoke, Meryl gently took Chandler’s hand. This was clearly her way of publicly aligning herself with him.

“You all wouldn’t understand the difficulties Chandler faces as head of the family. He certainly wants harmony among us.

“But when someone makes a mistake, they must accept punishment. How can you blame Chandler for being cold-hearted when you don’t hold the wrongdoer accountable? Doesn’t that seem unreasonable?”

Once she finished, everyone in the room fell silent. Meryl’s words left no room for anyone to plead for Dalton.

Dalton moved his lips. Seeing Meryl and Chandler holding hands made his eyes water.

He hadn't expected that not only Chandler but even Meryl wanted him to face such horrible consequences.

He realized she truly didn't care about him and was eager to distance herself.

Dalton felt a sharp pain in his heart.

They had spent half a month together, and he had prepared every meal for her.

Chapter 433 Procrastination sickness.

Dalton had thought Meryl would be touched and give him a chance to start anew. He never imagined that she was merely playing a part.

He recognized that her earlier kindness had only been a facade to lower his defenses.

Suddenly, Dalton felt ridiculous.

His emotions were a jumbled mess, and he felt hopeless about life.

Morton said, "Once Dalton recovers, I'll arrange for him to go abroad! Chandler, are you satisfied now?"

Choosing to go abroad was a rational decision compared to being disowned by the Aniston family.

Lydia sobbed, "But I'm pregnant. What will I do if Dalton goes abroad?"

"Chandler, could you show some mercy and let Dalton go after I give birth? I'm begging you."

Tears streamed down Lydia's face as she spoke. She cried so hard that it seemed she would continue as long as Chandler didn't agree.

Charlotte thought for a moment. She figured that by the time Lydia gave birth, six months would have passed. Maybe then, Dalton's departure would become a moot point.

Chapter 433 Procrastination

"Charlotte, if Dalton really leaves me, I'll cry every day!"

Only Lydia's cries echoed in the room. Dylan, irritated by the noise, said, "Then let it be until the baby is born!"

Chandler's expression darkened, clearly unwilling to agree.

He could tell that everyone was stalling for time.

But Dylan was insistent. "This matter is settled!"

corner,

Meryl gently tugged at Chandler's sleeve, reminding him to give others a chance. After all, if they pushed everyone into a anything could happen.

Chandler chose not to push back any further.

He understood that no matter how much they stalled, Dalton would ultimately be sent abroad. If he made any further moves during this time, it would only hasten Dalton's departure.

Chandler glanced at Dalton and his parents, his tone laced with warning.

"Morton, Charlotte, you'd better keep an eye on Dalton. If he acts up again, it might be more than just going abroad. I think you're aware of what I've been doing for over a decade."

Chandler's meaning was clear.

Back in the police academy, he had to complete various tasks every day. He excelled at catching the bad guys.

Most of the criminals he dealt with ended up in custody, and the police station was filled with his comrades and acquaintances.

Chapter 434 Lydia Knew the Truth

His words effectively conveyed that if Dalton crossed the line again, he would see to it that he ended up in a police cell with no room for leniency.

Others might not grasp what Chandler meant, but Morton and Charlotte understood completely

He was warning them to keep Dalton in check and to abandon any inappropriate thoughts about Meryl.

Morton opened his mouth but ultimately said nothing.

Once they left, only Morton's family remained in the hospital room.

After Charlotte closed the door, she asked bluntly, "Dalton, did you really kidnap Meryl?"

Dalton pressed his lips together in silence. Seeing his reaction, Charlotte quickly realized the truth.

"What were you thinking? Why would you provoke Chandler?"

"Your dad has suffered so much this past year because he tried to sabotage Chandler in the company. Why would you want to make him your rival? Do you think he'll let you off easy?"

Dalton didn't want to argue with Charlotte. He felt it was pointless.

Morton then said, "Dalton, you need to use these six months wisely to develop your career here. Once your company stabilizes, no one will be able to force you out!"

Chapter 434 Lydia Knew the Truth Lydia was oblivious to everything.

Hearing that Dalton had kidnapped Meryl and had spent the past half month in a villa with her made her furious!

As soon as Morton and Charlotte left, Lydia immediately confronted him. "Dalton, do you even care about me? What have you and Meryl been doing in the villa? Did you sleep together?"

She thought to herself, "No wonder Chandler was so furious he wanted to kick him out of the Aniston family. What Dalton did was truly outrageous!"

The thought of her man fooling around with another woman while she was pregnant made Lydia feel ridiculous for having pleaded for Dalton.

Everyone seemed to know about it except her!

o

"Dalton, I've done so much for you. How could you treat me like this?"

Only then did Dalton show some reaction.

He turned his head, looking at her with mockery. "How have I treated you?"

"How could you be with Meryl? You, you two..."

Before she could finish, tears streamed down Lydia's face.

Suddenly, she remembered when Dalton had come to her, pressuring her to sign the divorce papers, and it dawned on her what had happened.

Chapter 434 Lydia Knew the Truth

She thought, "If I had signed back then, would Dalton have copped with Meryl by now?"

Chapter 435 The Pathetic Dalton

"Nothing happened between Meryl and me. But you? You were with another man behind my back, acting all pure in front of me. Lydia, what right do you have to question me now?"

Lydia bit her lip. "I'm your wife! I'm pregnant with your child, and I just begged Chandler on behalf of this baby!"

"When did I ask you to beg for me? Don't think you can tie us together just because of the child. I'll tell you, that's impossible!"

No sooner had he finished speaking than four or five bodyguards entered the room.

"Now that my mom isn't here, Lydia, I'm taking you to terminate the pregnancy."

Lydia was horrified. She never expected Dalton to be so ruthless.

As she saw the bodyguards closing in, she instinctively stepped back.

"What do you want? I won't agree! I won't have an abortion! You can't force me!"

"Dalton, without this child, how can you stay in this country? If you leave, how will you continue your relationship with Meryl?"

Driven to desperation, Lydia spoke without thinking.

Her words were harsh. Furious, Dalton threw a cup from the

The cup hit Lydia's abdomen, causing her to pale and crouch on the floor, clutching her stomach, beads of cold sweat forming on her forehead,

Being treated this way by the man she loved was unbearable for Lydia.

Her eyes turned red as her shoulders trembled with emotion.

"Meryl is your dream girl, and I can't even mention her without you protecting her? I'm your wife!"

"You want a divorce? Do you want to get rid of me? I'll tell you, Dalton, that will never happen! I know Meryl. As long as I'm here, she will never reconcile with you!"

"I want you to feel the pain I'm feeling right now. Dalton, you can only love me!"

Her words infuriated Dalton. If he weren't feeling so unwell, he would have jumped out of bed.

Seeing the murderous look in his eyes, Lydia suddenly cried out, "Help! Someone's going to kill me!"

The commotion quickly drew attention from those nearby.

Morton and Charlotte, who hadn't gone far, returned immediately.

After understanding the situation, they rushed Lydia to the

as it directly affected Dalton's future.

Returning to the hospital room, she sternly warned Dalton, "Dalton, don't even think about harming the child. As long as I'm alive, I won't let you hurt the baby.

"Are you stupid? You finally have a way to stay in this country. with this child. If Lydia's baby dies, what will you do? You really want to go abroad and never come back?"

Dalton stared blankly at the ceiling, looking utterly defeated, like a lost puppet.

He seemed indifferent to it all.

Morton couldn't help but scold him. "You're such a disappointment, letting a woman bring you down like this. How could I have a son like you!"

"Enough, he's injured. Just let it go," Charlotte replied, also feeling that Dalton was being unreasonable.

She thought to herself, "Even though marrying Lydia went against Dalton's wishes, it's truly pathetic that he's lost hope for the future because of a woman he can never be with again.

Meryl has caused so much harm!"

Chandler drove Meryl home, and as soon as they stepped inside, Meryl turned and hugged Chandler tightly.

"What's wrong? Did my being late earlier upset you?"

Chapter 436 A Family's Love

Meryl nuzzled against Chandler's chest. "No, I feel sorry for you."

Chandler raised an eyebrow. "Feel sorry for me?"

"Yeah, your dad clearly knows that Dalton is colluding with Zane to harm you, yet he stood by Dalton's side, trying to downplay the situation."

Meryl had once thought highly of Dylan, but after this incident, she felt disappointed.

It seemed that, aside from her, no one in this family truly cared about Chandler. He appeared to be someone they could easily sacrifice.

Chandler gently ruffled Meryl's hair. "I've long since gotten used to it. Not everyone gets the love of their family."

Meryl looked up, her eyes sparkling. "I will love you well. I'm your family."

This brought a smile to Chandler's face. "Oh? Is that so?"

A strong hand wrapped around his waist. Chandler lowered his head and softly kissed Meryl's lips.

Meryl was momentarily taken aback, the soft touch causing her cheeks to flush.

Chapter 436 A Family's Love

The kiss was—passionate, leaving Meryl feeling weak all over. She leaned into Chandler's embrace, surrendering completely to him.

Chandler kept his eyes open, watching Meryl's emotional reaction.

At that moment, holding the woman in front of him tightly, Chandler felt the reality of her return to his life.

He had been in agony for the past half a month.

To avoid raising suspicions, he had to pretend everything was normal.

Since Meryl was in Dalton's grasp, he worried that the more he searched for her, the more he would provoke Dalton. That would only make things worse for Meryl.

Several times, Chandler had even considered capturing Dalton's parents and using them as leverage for a trade.

But reason told him that such actions would only worsen Meryl's situation.

As the kiss ended, Chandler still craved more. He leaned down, placing another heated kiss on Meryl's collarbone.

Meryl shivered.

He supported her from behind, kissing her as he made his way toward the upstairs room.

Meryl felt a sense of security from Chandler's possessiveness.

Chapter 436 A Family's Love

After a month of fear, she finally returned home yesterday. Last night, Chandler hadn't reassured her; he had simply held her as they slept.

But now, he had no reason to let her go.

It was still daytime, and they had the whole day ahead to nurture their feelings.

As soon as they entered the room, Chandler kissed Meryl again. This kiss was markedly different from the earlier gentle ones; it was more intense.

Chandler's shirt buttons were completely undone, exuding the charm of a mature man.

His deep-set eyes rested on Meryl's face, his soft lips grazing her delicate skin.

Such light touches truly made Meryl's heart race.

In an instant, she felt her heart might leap out of her chest, her neck arching back involuntarily.

Chandler clearly wanted to take things further.

His face was close to hers, teasing her soft lips with gentle bites, his breath growing increasingly hurried.

Meryl's dress became disheveled. As she felt Chandler's hands lifting her skirt, preparing for more, she suddenly remembered something important.

Chapter 436 A Family's Love

She realized that Chandler didn't seem to know she was pregnant.

She had experienced severe morning sickness not long ago, unable to keep anything down, but for the past few days, those feelings had subsided.

Sometimes, Meryl even forgot she was pregnant.

She wondered if Chandler would be happy about this child.

Chapter 437 I Am Pregnant

"Chandler, wait!"

Meryl hurriedly stopped Chandler, sensing his impatience.

He asked softly, "Why? What's wrong?"

"I..." Meryl hesitated, biting her lip. She needed to tell him she couldn't engage in anything strenuous right now.

Before she could explain, Chandler kissed her again, his lips lingering on hers with a sense of urgency.

Meryl's face turned crimson. She tried to push him.

away gently, but Chandler only held her tighter. He pressed against her and murmured, "We can talk about it later."

Was he really that impatient? Meryl knew it would be too late to explain afterward. Chandler was young, fit, and full of energy.

After being held captive by Dalton for nearly twenty days, last night Chandler had refrained from intimacy, thinking she needed rest. He had shown restraint, but now his desire was evident.

Feeling his eagerness, Meryl realized things could quickly spiral out of control. She cupped his face, pulling back slightly.

“Chandler, I’m pregnant!”

The room fell silent. Chandler froze, staring at her in shock.

Chapter 437 I Am Pregnant

Meryl met his gaze. “I’m pregnant. I found out the night Dalton took me away, but I never had the chance to tell you.”

She took his hand and placed it on her abdomen. “There’s a baby here, ours.”

Chandler finally absorbed her words, eyes widening. “You’re not joking, are you?” he asked, lowering his head to her belly.

Meryl found his reaction endearing. Chandler, usually so clever, seemed adorably clueless. At just over a month pregnant, there was nothing for him to hear, but his enthusiasm was heartwarming.

Chandler listened intently, and Meryl teased, “Did you hear my stomach growling?”

After a moment, he lifted his head. “I heard it.”

“What?” she asked, puzzled.

“The baby said that we can do this.”

Meryl was taken aback.

Chandler pulled her into his arms, gently running his fingers through her hair and kissing her tenderly. Despite her position on top, she found herself yielding to his desire.

Chandler was affectionate, but not overly gentle.

As he kissed her deeply, Meryl felt her lips tingle. They shared an intimacy that stopped short of intercourse, a playful flirtation. that left her breathless.

Chapter 438 Did He Cook for You?

From the beginning, Meryl had planned to find herself a backer. Now, she was pretty sure that she had fallen in love with Chandler.

The charm of his maturity—was irresistible to her. She liked him to hold her, hug her, and make love with her.

He was everything she desired in a husband.

She asked, “Don’t you have to go to work today?”

“I’ll accompany you at home.” Chandler gently caressed Meryl’s lower abdomen.

“Your stomach is bulging day by day. What are your thoughts at work?”

The work pressure at Galaxy Holdings Group was tremendous. As an assistant to the president’s office, Meryl had to deal with complicated and trivial matters every day, which was very exhausting.

Chandler didn’t want her to suffer during her pregnancy.

She grasped his intention and whispered, "But I'm still in my first trimester. Is it boring to stay at home?"

He said, "Do something you enjoy. I can support you. Take a class for a hobby or have fun everywhere."

Chapter 438 Did He Cook for You?

The news of her pregnancy would only make them more attentive to her.

She'd better not go to work for the time being.

"Are you hungry? I'll make you something to eat." Chandler was in high spirits.

He was not in the least fatigued despite the great deal of energy he had just used.

He put on his pajamas and sat up in bed.

"I've heard that pregnant women get morning sickness. Is there anything you don't want to eat? I will avoid it."

Meryl shook her head. "I don't have morning sickness anymore."

Chandler was taken aback.

In other words, Meryl's morning sickness was long over.

So, it was the period when she had been locked up by Dalton.

Chandler felt guilty. He squatted in front of Meryl and grabbed her hand.

"I'm sorry that I didn't protect you."

Chandler had mixed feelings about not being by Meryl's side when she needed him most.

She shook her head. "Chandler, it's not your fault."

Chapter 438 Did He Cook for You?

Chandler asked again, "What do you want to eat? I will make it for you now. That must have been a very difficult time for you."

Meryl didn't want him to be overwhelmed by guilt. She said, "Actually, it's not difficult. Dalton cooked different dishes for me."

His face instantly darkened.

"Did he cook for you?"

As Dalton's uncle, Chandler was well aware that Dalton had never done the chores, much less cooked for women, and that he had barely even entered the kitchen. However, he prepared meals for Meryl.

Sensing Chandler's displeasure, Meryl knew that he was jealous again.

She held his face and explained gently, "I only ate what he cooked to survive."

Chandler's voice was slightly icy. "I was still too kind to him. He dared to be attentive to you!"

After a pause, he continued, "Besides cooking for you, has he done anything rude to you?"

He had been avoiding this question. He believed Meryl and was unwilling to put pressure on her or remind her of bad memories.

However, she and Dalton really lived alone in the same house for a long time.

Meryl shook her head. "I spent most of the time shutting myself in my room and only met him at meals."

She certainly knew what Chandler minded, just like any other man.

She said firmly, "During this period, Dalton and I weren't intimate, and I never cheated on you."

Tears welled up in her eyes, and Chandler immediately hugged her into his arms.

"Meryl, it's all my fault. It's not that I don't believe you. It's just..."

"I understand."

She couldn't blame Chandler.

If he and a woman had stayed alone for so long, she wouldn't have felt even more uncomfortable.

He was already very considerate.

Chandler's face was cold, and his chest heaved with fury.

Then, the third photo came.

This time, Meryl and Dalton were in bed.

She seemed to be asleep, her eyes closed in the darkness, and beside her was half the sleeve of his pajamas. As an adult, Chandler considered himself to be emotionally stable. But, at that moment, his only desire was to tear Dalton to pieces!

She picked up the fragments and checked them. It seemed that his phone was irreparably damaged.

Meryl felt somewhat uneasy.

She had never seen Chandler so furious.

Across the distance, she sensed his incredibly frightening aura.

What was wrong with him?

me out of worry that Meryl and I would get back together, so our intimate photos upset you.

"Do you know what happened to us in these twenty days?"

"We met and chatted every day. By the way, we also went to the concert and had a bar becue together. I dated Meryl. Uncle Chandler, you got married in a flash. Have you ever been on a date?" So, Uncle Chandler, I am happier than you.

"Uncle Chandler, even if you kill me, it won't change that. Meryl and I grew up together, and we have wonderful memories."

Chandler's attack was strong. At that moment, Dalton looked very embarrassed, blood s till gushing out of the corner of his mouth.

However, he smiled with delight, ignoring Chandler's increasingly dark face.

He said, "Uncle Chandler, you can't wait to drive me abroad because you think I am a p otential threat, and you are not confident."

Chandler glanced down at him. "Dalton, you overestimated yourself. You grew up together, but so what? She is now my wife and is pregnant with my child, which will always make you a loser."

"Really?" Dalton gazed into his eyes meaningfully. "Uncle Chandler, how do you confirm that she is pregnant with your child? What if it's mine?"

Dalton's words immediately annoyed Chandler.

Chapter 440 What If It's Mine?

Dalton replied bluntly, "I said the baby in Meryl's belly is mine, Uncle Chandler."

In an instant, Chandler once again punched him in the face.

Dalton's nose was initially bleeding, but upon being struck, he experienced further hemorrhaging.

"Nonsense! First of all, I believe that Meryl won't betray me. Second, you are overconfident. Meryl will never reconcile with you!"

Chandler's eyes were bloodshot with rage.

Despite his trust in Meryl, he couldn't stand Dalton's nonsense.

However, Dalton remained calm and said, "Uncle Chandler, if you don't believe me, do a paternity test after Meryl gives birth to the child, and you will know I am not lying."
