Chapter 541 – 550

Chapter 541 A Car Accident

Meryl had breakfast alone at home. Just as she finished cleaning up, her phone rang.

It was Yancey.

“Something’s happened to Anne!” he said, his voice hurried.

Meryl’s heart raced. “What’s wrong?”

“It’s complicated. Just get to the hospital now! She might be going into labor!” Yancey urged, panic evident in his tone.

In the background, Meryl could faintly hear Dante calling for an ambulance.

Meryl’s heart sank. She realized Anne had gone to meet Dante.

How serious could it be for them to call an ambulance?

She quickly slipped on her shoes and grabbed the hospital bag. Yancey had packed earlier.

When Meryl arrived at the hospital, Anne was already in the delivery room.

Yancey’s white T-shirt was smeared with blood, sending a jolt of fear through Meryl.

Chapter 541. A Car Accident

She had a bad feeling. Why was there so much blood? Panic began to set in.

Dante was there, too, his hands stained with blood. He stood with his head down, looking remorseful.

2/3

Meryl realized that whatever had happened was tied to Dante.

“When I got there, Anne was already on the ground, covered in blood,” Yancey said, his voice shaky.

His eyes were red, and the usually gentle man glared at Dante with hostility. "Ask him. I want to know too."

Meryl turned to Dante, her eyes searching his. "What happened?"

Dante looked frustrated, struggling to explain.

This morning, he and Anne had met at a café. Their conversation started off with Chandler and Rachel, but then Anne brought up Lola.

"Is Rachel just like Lola, throwing herself at men?" Anne had asked.

Given how Lola had destroyed her own marriage, it was natural for Anne to think of Rachel in the same light.

The conversation had taken a turn.

Then, Dante retorted, "What about you, Anne? You slept with another man and got pregnant. While we were married, you had

Chapter 541. A Car Accident

3/3

Since Anne was over eight months pregnant, her belly was pronounced. It was summer, and her clothes couldn't conceal it.

Dante felt upset and couldn't help but speak harshly.

To this day, he still couldn't bring himself to accept that Anne had slept with another man.

It was a humiliation for Dante that Anne came to see him with pregnancy.

Unexpectedly, Anne, annoyed, splashed the water on Dante's face.

She snapped, "You stomped on my heart first! Even if I slept with someone else and got pregnant, you have to accept it!"

With that, she stormed out, bag in hand.

Dante asked Anne to meet up for his own selfish reasons.

He wanted to see her but couldn't come up with a good excuse. He didn't expect them to have a fight.

Dante went after her, as he still loved Anne.

But just a few steps out of the cafe, she was hit by a car.

Seeing her lying on the ground covered in blood, Dante froze, and his mind went blank.

Chapter 542 Who's the Driver

Yancey arrived just then.

1/3

He pushed Dante aside and cradled Anne in his arms, desperate to help.

Meryl looked at Dante, her voice shaky as she demanded, "Dante, tell me!"

Dante replied, "She had a car accident."

Meryl felt faint, her vision blurring.

Just then, a hand wrapped around her waist, steadying her.

She turned instinctively to find Chandler.

What was he doing here?

Chandler had serious dark circles under his eyes, and it was obvious that he did not get enough rest last night.

But Meryl didn't have time to think about these things. She withdrew her gaze from Chandler and asked Dante, "Why did this happen? Did you argue with her?"

Dante was silent, guilt washing over him.

Seeing his silence, Meryl grabbed him by the collar, her eyes blazing with fury. "Dante, if anything happens to Anne or the baby, I swear I'll make you pay! I don't care how powerful your Dante looked despondent. "I'll apologize to her myself," he said quietly.

The woman he loved lay inside, and he felt heartbroken, too,

He loved her so much, yet now, they ended up turning, spinning each other.

Everything that had happened with Lola was a misunderstanding, and he was also a victim, having been deceived by Lola for so long,

However, a mere misunderstanding caused them to fall out, and they couldn't even have coffee together in peace.

"Can you let me go?" Dante asked.

"I just want to hit you," Meryl replied through gritted teeth.

"Meryl, calm down. You're pregnant," Chandler interjected.

He had brought her a coat and looked at her with worry. "It's done now. Let's just wait for news about Anne."

Just then, a nurse emerged from the delivery room. "The accident has caused complications with the fetus. The midwife has determined that Anne can't deliver naturally. We need to do surgery. Where's the father? He needs to sign."

Dante shot Yancey a resentful glance.

They were divorced, so he couldn't even sign for her.

"I'll sign!" Meryl rushed forward. "How is she?"

"The patient is conscious, but the baby's condition is uncertain," the nurse explained, handing Meryl some documents. Her hands trembled as she picked up the pen.

Chandler wrapped his arms around her shoulders, whispering, "Stay calm. Anne is lucky. I've contacted the best doctor; he'll be doing her surgery."

Meryl took a deep breath, feeling somewhat reassured by Chandler's words.

Chandler was very attentive in this regard and contacted a doctor as soon as he arrived.

"The blood bank is out of type A. Who can donate?" the nurse asked.

Yancey, who had been quiet until now, spoke up. "I can."

"Follow me," the nurse said, ushering him into the operating room and closing the door behind them.

Dante watched enviously, knowing Yancey would be there with Anne during the procedure.

Meanwhile, Meryl was waiting anxiously outside the operating room.

Anne was giving birth in there, and she couldn't help.

"Where's the driver who caused the accident?" she asked, looking at Dante.

Chapter 543 It's Rachel

They had been at the hospital for so long. It was too strange that the driver had not shown up yet.

Dante remained silent, casting a glance at Chandler instead.

Chandler frowned, confused. "What are you looking at me for? I didn't hit her."

Dante replied, "It's Rachel."

The corridor fell silent instantly, with no one speaking for a long moment.

Meryl clenched her fists, fighting to keep her emotions in check.

It was actually Rachel who had hit Anne!

Why would she do that?

Turning to Chandler, Meryl tightened her grip, eager to see how he would react to this revelation.

His response could very well influence her decision about their marriage.

Chandler's brow furrowed deeper as he asked irritably, "Did you see it clearly?"

Dante nodded.

Chapter 543 It's Rachel

2/4

His icy tone made Rachel, on the other end, feel aggrieved.

After the incident, Rachel was at a loss.

It was the weekend, and she had intended to buy a car.

But during her test drive, a pregnant woman suddenly appeared in front of her.

Although Rachel had gotten her driver's license years ago, she had been away for so long that her driving skills were rusty.

In her panic, she had pressed the accelerator instead of the brake, and the car lurched forward, hitting the woman. The fright left her shaken to the core.

The salesman in the passenger seat had been equally startled.

The car Rachel was test-driving was worth a million dollars, and now, with an accident on her hands, the salesman was likely facing termination.

Initially, Rachel had thought about fleeing the scene, but the salesman insisted that a hit-and-run would result in serious consequences, including jail time.

He called the police, and just now, Rachel had finished giving her statement at the station.

When Chandler called, she broke down, crying, "Chandler, I think I'm in trouble. I'm at the police department."

Chandler rubbed his temples in frustration. Hearing Rachel's confirmed Dante's claim; she was indeed the one responsible for the accident.

"Which police department? Text me the address. I'll send someone to take care of it," C handler said before hanging up.

He caught Walter's eye and signaled for him to follow.

Walter, taking the hint, turned around and walked out.

Meanwhile, Meryl sat on a chair outside the operating room, waiting silently.

For the first time, time seemed to crawl by, stretching every second into a painful eternity.

Chandler and Dante were in the stairwell, engaged in a hushed conversation.

Meryl kept checking the time, anxiety gnawing at her.

Over an hour had passed since Anne was wheeled in for her cesarean section, and she should have been out by now.

Meryl's mind raced with worry; what if something was wrong?

Complicated surgeries often took longer than expected.

Just as her anxiety peaked, the operating room door swung open, and Meryl rushed for ward.

Yancey stepped out, his eyes red and puffy as if he had been crying. His face was pale, and Meryl's heart sank.

"How is Anne?" she asked urgently, her gaze darting past him toward the room.

The nurse quietly closed the door behind them.

Chapter 544 Guilt–Tripping

Yancey squalled on the floor, cradling his head in his hands, his face contorted with pain..

Meryl was also saddened.

“Take a seat and rest for a bit. You just had a blood transfusion; you must be feeling weak,” she said, helping Yancey sit down.

Just then, the elevator doors slid open, revealing Walter and Rachel.

Rachel instinctively looked around for Chandler. “Chandler?” she called out.

Meryl’s pent–up anger from the morning finally erupted when she spotted Rachel.

Without hesitation, she lunged forward and slapped Rachel hard across the face.

“If anything happens to Anne, I’ll make sure your life is a living hell!” she fumed.

Meryl rarely displayed such fury, and her body trembled with rage.

The slap sent Rachel’s head spinning.

Her cheek instantly swelled as tears streamed down her face.

Chapter 544 Guilt–Tripping

“Chandler, I didn’t mean for this to happen,” she sobbed. “I was just as shocked. That car was worth a million dollars, and the dealership is demanding I pay for it!”

Yancey shot her a furious glare. “What do you mean? So just because you’re scared, we should let you go?”

It was rare for Yancey to speak so harshly, which underscored just how much Anne’s situation was affecting him.

Rachel clutched Chandler’s sleeve, desperation in her eyes. “Chandler, please help me. I really didn’t mean it.”

As she leaned in to throw herself into his arms, Chandler sidestepped.

He stood in front of Meryl, clearly keeping his distance from Rachel.

He looked at her with complex emotions swirling in his eyes. After all, he had watched Rachel grow up.

“You’re an adult now. If you’ve done something wrong, you need to face the consequences. Rachel, I can’t help you with this. What you need to focus on is how to make things right,” he said firmly.

Rachel’s tears flowed even faster. “What do you mean? Chandler, don’t you care about me anymore?”

In a burst of anger, Meryl grabbed Rachel’s hair.

Rachel wanted Chandler to defend her, to help her escape the situation.

birth prematurely, yet she showed no remorse and was instead trying to get out of it.

If it were a personal issue, Meryl might have managed her emotions better.

But this was about Anne, her best friend, and all Meryl could think about was helping her.

With Anne's parents overseas and her having divorced Dante, Anne had no one around except Meryl and Yancey.

As her best friend, Meryl felt it was her duty to protect Anne at all costs.

"Let me be clear. There will be no reconciliation. We will definitely hold you accountable for this!" Meryl said, and her grip on Rachel's hair was tightening. "First, you need to apologize to Anne and seek her forgiveness. And second, the person you just begged for help is my husband. Who do you think you are to beg him?"

Through red-rimmed eyes, Rachel protested, "Chandler and I grew up together. My brother died to save him..."

Meryl cut her off. "Don't bring that up! Your brother sacrificed himself for Chandler. He owes your brother a debt, not you.

"You're just manipulating your brother's favor to guilt-trip Chandler. Rachel, you're exploiting his kindness to serve your own selfish needs!

"I'm sure your brother meant a lot to you, right? If he knew you were embarrassing his best friend and destroying his family,

Chapter 545 A Special Bond

Rachel had never seen Meryl so furious before.

Hsessions correct

Her eyes were bloodshot, blazing with fury.

However, every word Meryl had said struck home, leaving her no room for rebuttal.

Even Meryl's few remarks laid bare the nature of Rachel's relationship with Chandler.

Rachel knew if she dragged Chandler into this mess again, she would be exploiting her own brother to tear apart Chandler's family.

Rachel bit her lip tightly, rendered speechless.

In Rachel's mind, Meryl had always appeared calm and seemed an easy target.

She never expected Meryl to have such a stubborn side that could leave her at a loss for words.

She realized she had always underestimated Meryl!

Overwhelmed, Rachel felt the pain as Meryl tugged at her hair, making her scalp throb. She could hardly move.

The force of Meryl's grip compelled Rachel to bow her head, making her appear much smaller next to her.

Chapter 545 A Special Bond

2/4

Rachel was angry, but what could she do? She was the one who had caused the trouble.

Earlier on the way here, Walter had warned Rachel.

He told Rachel that if she couldn't win Anne's forgiveness, she could face legal consequences and even jail time.

In response, Rachel had retorted, "Chandler won't just sit back."

Walter seemed to have anticipated her response.

He scoffed, "But Mr. Aniston is a man of integrity. He won't jeopardize others' interests for you. Besides, you were in the wrong to begin with."

The thought of going to jail terrified Rachel. Weighing her options, she softened her stance.

"I'll apologize!" she declared, breaking free from Meryl's grip and shouting toward the operating room, "I'm sorry!"

Meryl sneered, "What's the point of saying sorry? If apologies solved everything, we wouldn't need the police. When Anne comes out, you'd better apologize to her face-to-face!"

Rachel was stunned. "But I've already apologized."

"You really think tears will make us forgive you?" Meryl shot back.

Rachel bit her lip and looked at Chandler, hoping for support.

Chapter 545 A Special Bond

Chandler didn't spare her a glance

Rachel felt extremely aggrieved. Chandler's indifference today was incredibly disheartening,

They had grown up together, and during her time abroad, he would regularly send her money

Rachel believed she had a special bond with Chandler.

Yet it was clear that when it came to Meryl, Chandler chose her side:

"Chandler, can we have a moment alone?" Rachel asked, feeling uneasy and desperate to reaffirm her importance to him.

However, Chandler gently wrapped his arm around Meryl's shoulders and replied, "I'm sorry, but you've upset Meryl, and I don't want to add to her distress.

His words completely humiliated Rachel, and she felt her cheeks burning.

Just at this moment, the door of the operating room opened.

Dante, appearing lifeless, was brought back to life.

While everyone else was focused on Rachel, Dante's eyes were locked on the door.

He was the first to rush toward the nurse, asking, "Where is she?"

Had a child in her arms, but Anne had yet to come

Chapter 546 Who's the Father

"The patient is still in observation. She won't be out for at least half an hour. She's doing fine, but her lower limbs appear to be partially fractured. She'll need some time to recover," the nurse explained.

Upon hearing this, Dante finally sighed in relief.

His gaze suddenly fell on the baby in the nurse's arms.

It was Anne's child.

"Who's the baby's father? The baby was born a month premature and has aspiration pneumonia. It'll be transferred to the neonatal unit soon. We need the father to sign," the nurse said..

The baby looked so tiny.

As it slept, its eyes were tightly shut, yet it was easy to see that it bore a resemblance to Anne.

When Meryl heard that Anne was fine, she was also relieved.

It was just a fracture, and she would be fine after some rest. Thank goodness!

However, when Meryl saw the child in the nurse's arms, her heart skipped a beat.

Chapter 546 Who's the Father The child looked just like Dante,

Meryl instinctively glanced at Dante. He was looking down at the baby, seemingly oblivious to the resemblance

Meryl felt relieved, but Chandler was starting to piece things together.

214

He frowned and kept glancing back and forth between the baby and Dante.

Dante might not have noticed, but Chandler could see away that the child was Dante's.

right

He remembered that Anne had claimed to have had an abortion and Dante had insisted that Anne was pregnant with Yancey's child.

Now, he realized Anne had lied.

The nurse was asking the baby's father to sign, and Meryl started to worry about Dante finding out the truth. She quickly nudged Yancey.

Yancey took the hint and promptly replied, "I'll sign."

He then followed the nurse inside.

Before they left, the nurse shot Dante a curious look and whispered, "Is he the child's uncle? It's just that the baby looks a bit like him."

The nurse spoke in a low tone, but Yancey, standing closest, picked it up, and Meryl heard it too.

Chapter 546 Who's the Father

Yancey grabbed the nurse and hurried away.

As the two left, Meryl kept a close eye on Dante's expression.

3/4

Unexpectedly, Dante turned to Chandler and asked, "How long was the baby premature?"

Meryl panicked, hoping that Chandler hadn't caught it.

Chandler met Dante's gaze. "One month."

Meryl knew there was no hiding it any longer.

As expected, Dante stumbled slightly, his eyes flickering with a whirlwind of emotions.

In an instant, his expression changed drastically.

Dante suddenly grasped Meryl's shoulders, questioning, "Tell me, whose child is Anne's? It's mine, right? She didn't have an abortion, did she?"

Dante was clearly overwhelmed.

He shook Meryl, searching for a confirmation that the child was indeed his.

Meryl found herself torn.

Anne had made it clear she didn't want Dante to know about the baby. She had resolved to raise the child without him.

But no one could have anticipated that the newborn would

Chapter 546 Who's the Father resemble Dante so closely.

4/4

Meryl understood that the truth would come out sooner or later.

The nurse

had mentioned that the baby was a month premature, and if she hadn't brought it up, it might have been easier to keep it hidden.

But since Dante had heard it, he could easily find out that the child was his.

Still, Meryl remained silent.

Chapter 547 Disappointment

1/4

Since this was a matter between Dante and Anne, Meryl felt like an outsider and couldn't say too much. Of course, she couldn't betray Anne's trust either.

Meryl replied, "I don't know."

"How can you not know? You're Anne's best friend! She tells you everything!" Dante's eyes were scarlet. "It's my child, right? Meryl, just nod and tell me!"

Meryl was swayed by him.

Chandler forcefully pulled Dante away, positioning himself protectively in front of Meryl.

"Why are you pushing her, Dante? If we weren't friends, I'd have punched you by now," Chandler said, taking Meryl's hand and holding her in his arms.

He continued, "Meryl is pregnant, and she's understandably emotional because of what's going on between you two. Who are you to question her? If you want answers, ask Anne yourself!"

Chandler looked down at Meryl, worry etched across his face. "Are you okay?"

Meryl shook her head slightly.

"Maybe you should sit down and rest a bit?" Chandler

Chapter 547 Disappointment suggested. –

Meanwhile, Rachel, who had been standing nearby, felt increasingly uncomfortable watching it.

2/4

Suddenly, she cried out in pain, clutching her forehead while her knees wobbled beneath her.

Chandler frowned, casually asking, "What's wrong?"

Rachel's voice was faint. "I didn't eat breakfast; I think I'm just feeling a bit faint."

As she spoke, she was about to lean into Chandler's arms.

તમને કરી છે જો આસિસ

But Chandler shifted aside, a hint of coldness in his gaze as he pulled Walter closer.

Rachel stumbled into Walter's arms instead.

Chandler remained calm. "Then I'll let Walter take you to eat something?"

Walter caught her gently, though his voice held a trace of annoyance. "Mr. Aniston, Ms. Morgan had breakfast. On the way to pick her up from the police station, she ate some toast. I was going to bring it back for my girlfriend after finishing my work."

The implication was clear: Walter was upset that Rachel had eaten the toast he had intended for his girlfriend.

Rachel shot Walter a glare.

Chapter 547 Disappointment Chandler's face immediately darkened.

He realized Rachel had been lying to him.

3/4

Looking at her with disappointment, he asked, "Rachel, why the act?"

It was the first time Rachel had seen that look from Chandler, and she quickly explained, "Chandler, don't listen to Walter. I didn't eat his food!"

Walter couldn't believe her shamelessness.

She had eaten the toast he bought for his girlfriend and lied about it.

He retorted, “Ms. Morgan, if you didn’t eat it, then did my toast get eaten by a pig?”

Rachel’s nose turned red, “Hey, language!”

“Since you say you didn’t eat, why are you so anxious?” Walter pressed.

“I.” Rachel stammered.

At this moment, Chandler felt quite disappointed.

After piecing everything together, he realized Rachel was up to no good.

Since Rachel had appeared, problems had arisen between him and Meryl—misunderstandings that seemed to multiply.

Chapter 547 Disappointment

Chandler could see that, at this rate, Meryl would only grow more distant from him.

4/4

He refused to follow in Dalton’s footsteps and certainly wouldn’t be fooled by a woman.

Chandler sensed that Rachel’s feelings toward him were complicated.

Losing all her relatives at a young age had created a dependency that morphed into a peculiar possessiveness.

This possessiveness made her instinctively hate any women around him—not out of genuine affection.

In just a few minutes, Chandler made a decision.

He took Meryl’s hand and said to Rachel, “Stop trying to pull tricks in front of me from now on. It won’t work.”

“I funded your education and took care of you all these years because Andy entrusted me with that responsibility. But now you’re an adult, and you can support yourself. So it’s best if we keep our distance from here on out.

“I’ll have Walter handle your matters from now on. This is also a matter of respect for my wife!”

Chandler’s words were a clear declaration that he had no romantic feelings for Rachel.

He was well aware that Rachel had been making things difficult for Meryl during this time; otherwise, Meryl wouldn’t have run away from home last night.

After returning home yesterday, Chandler reflected on the situation and concluded that the only solution was to stop having direct contact with Rachel.

Of course, this didn’t mean he would abandon her; he simply decided to let others manage Rachel’s affairs.

Meryl looked at Chandler in surprise; his words were completely unexpected.

She understood that he was trying to reassure her.

Meryl gently squeezed Chandler’s fingertips in response.

When Chandler felt her touch, his expression softened even

Chapter 549 Compensation

1/4

Dante’s sudden appearance scared Anne and Meryl in the ward.

Rachel was completely caught off guard and was forced to kneel on the floor.

She had never suffered such humiliation.

Tears welled up in her eyes. She wanted to stand up, but Dante pressed the back of her head tightly.

Rachel, not as strong as him, lowered her head passively.

She wept bitterly in annoyance.

She was so unlucky today. Everyone targeted her.

If the Morgan family hadn't fallen from grace, how could she have suffered such humiliation?

She had been the apple of her family's eye! Why did these people bully her like this?

Was it because there was no one behind her?

Rachel bit her lip tightly. "Anne, I am to blame for hitting you with my car, but I didn't mean to do it. You appeared so suddenly that I didn't have time to step on the brakes!"

Chapter 549 Compensation

Just now, she gave a statement at the police station.

2/4

According to the police's determination, it was not all Rachel's fault, and Anne was partially responsible.

"I'll compensate you. Don't send me to prison, okay?"

Anne didn't expect that it was Rachel who had bumped into her.

At that time, after arguing with Dante at the café, she pushed open the door angrily and ran out, not noticing that a car was driving over.

Rachel was a careless driver. At the sight of Anne, she tried to brake but stepped on the accelerator instead. Otherwise, Anne's legs would not have been broken.

This was the greatest piece of luck, for neither the baby nor she was seriously injured.

Having just given birth to a baby girl, Anne wanted to do a good deed for her.

However, before speaking, she gazed at Meryl, asking if she needed her to do anything for her.

After all, Rachel's shamelessness made Meryl suffer a lot.

Anne could take the opportunity to punish Rachel.

Meryl shook her head slightly.

Chapter 549 Compensation

3/4

The grudges between her and Rachel would be resolved on their own, and there was no need for Anne to make things difficult for Rachel about such matters.

After all, different matters should be dealt with separately.

Moreover, Chandler just publicly stated that he would not interfere in Rachel's affairs, which reassured Meryl.

Yet, he didn't ignore Rachel. If Meryl made a fuss, he would look down on her.

After all, Anne and Meryl had been best friends for many years, and she quickly understood what Meryl meant.

"Pay the medical expenses for me and my daughter," she said coldly, "and the compensation for my mental damage. Not a penny less."

The sum of money alone was probably enough to give Rachel a headache.

After all, when all was added up, it was not a small amount.

Rachel nodded in agreement.

Anne said, "Well, get up. You don't have to beg for mercy like this."

Rachel remained kneeling on the floor.

Dante then released her.

Chapter 549 Compensation

Rachel stood up with tears in her eyes.

4/4

She turned and walked out without brushing off the dust from her dress.

Chandler, who was waiting in the corridor, had a sharp eye and noticed Rachel's tears and the bruises on her knees at a glance.

He immediately realized that Rachel was embarrassed inside.

"Chandler, I'm fine."

Rachel forced out a smile aggrievedly and said, "As long as Meryl could vent her anger, it didn't matter if I knelt down for a while."

Chandler frowned. "Did Meryl ask you to kneel?"

B

Chapter 550 I'm Not Stingy

Rachel gave an equivocal reply. "Anyway, I did do something wrong, so I should apologize in a humble manner. They only asked me to pay compensation and will not sue me."

Chandler frowned even more deeply. "Tell me, did Meryl ask you to kneel?"

Rachel was stunned, never expecting him to get to the bottom of the matter.

However, with the previous experience, she did not dare to lie this time. "No, it was Dante."

Chandler's face turned cold. "Then why did you put the blame on Meryl?"

Rachel was speechless.

Chandler rubbed his temple, looking impatient. "Walter, send her back."

Walter immediately stepped forward and said, "Ms. Morgan, I will drive you back."

Rachel bit her lip and glanced at Chandler with great reluctance.

He ignored her and stood in the corridor, staring at the ward.

Chapter 550 I'm Not Stingy

2/4

In the ward, Dante gazed at Anne with tears in his eyes.

“Anne, since she is my daughter, why did you tell me that you had an abortion? I’m her father, but you actually tried to hide her existence from me and wanted her to call someone else

Dad.”

Just thinking about it depressed Dante.

At first, he always believed that it was because of his indecision that Anne was disappointed in him and had an abortion. The loss of the baby meant that there was an irreparable crack in their relationship and that they could never get back together.

Therefore, Dante felt heartbroken, blamed himself, and even made every effort to please her for a long time.

To his surprise, the baby wasn’t aborted.

Did it suggest that Anne and Yancey were just acting and had nothing to do with each other?

Was there still hope for them to be together?

Meryl sat quietly on the sofa and began to peel an apple.

Anne noticed it and immediately said, “I want to eat an apple, too.”

“You just gave birth. You can’t eat it.”

Chapter 550 I’m Not Stingy

3/4

Meryl blinked in confusion. “By the way, did you hire servants to take care of you? Should you call them over?”

“I hire two servants.” Anne was about to take out her phone. “I’ll call them over.”

They chatted with each other, completely ignoring Dante.

Walter pulled up at the gate of the orchestra, and Rachel got out of the car.

She was about to leave when he suddenly said, “Ms. Morgan, although you ate the toast I bought for my girlfriend, I’m not stingy. Please transfer the twenty dollars to me. Thank you.”

He rolled down the driver’s window and fixed his eyes on her.

Rachel was speechless.

He even specifically asked her for twenty dollars. Wasn’t he being stingy?

Rachel glared at Walter angrily and said dissatisfiedly, “An ungentlemanly man like you actually has a girlfriend. I hope you break up with your girlfriend as soon as possible!”

He smiled, “When you were sick, I stayed by your side in the hospital to take care of you . I’ve driven you back and forth so many times that you might not even remember, right?”

“Ms. Morgan, how could you be so cruel and curse me to break up with my girlfriend?”

4/4

Rachel retorted, “You are Chandler’s special assistant. It is your job to help him solve his problems. He pays you a salary. You served me and looked after me in the hospital. What’s wrong with that?”

Walter replied, “My job is to help Mr. Aniston solve his problems, but it does not include treating you to toast. You’ve said so much. Are you just trying to shirk your debt?”
