Chapter 551 Her Past

Walter shook his phone. "It's not a big deal, but I have a sense of propriety. What if my girlfriend misunderstands me after finding out that I treated a girl to cat toast?"

His romance with his girlfriend began over toast.

It was fate. That day, Walter had finished his work and had not had dinner, so he just went to a roadside shop where toast was sold to get something to fill his stomach.

To his surprise, he bumped into the college belle.

Since they were alumni, it was natural for them to exchange contact information. Walter had spent the past two months working hard to make her his girlfriend.

He certainly didn't want to treat other women to toast because it was a sign of their love.

Rachel had no idea of it.

She had already suffered a lot of grievances in the hospital today, and she didn't expect that Walter would haggle with her over a mere twenty dollars.

He was so stingy!

Unwilling to argue with him anymore, Rachel transferred the money to him and left in anger.

she walked to an empty corner and kicked the stones under her feet.

Why did things come to this?

Chandler made it clear that he would no longer take care of her. At the thought of this, Rachel couldn't help crying.

As the breeze touched her face, she recalled her past.

In her teens, an age when she should have been carefree, Rachel lost all her relatives overnight except for Andy.

After the decline of the Morgan family, she had no close relatives and could only go with him to seek help from distant relatives.

But they were poor, and she went from being a well-to-do young lady to a pitiful scrounger.

Since her relatives didn't keep idle people, Rachel and Andy had no choice but to do farm work.

He felt sorry for her and didn't want her to suffer, so he almost handled everything by himself.

He was only fourteen years old at that time. They used to go to an aristocratic school. His hands for playing the piano were covered with wounds of various sizes in just a few months.

More than half a year passed like this. One day, Andy went out with Chandler but never came back.

Rachel learned from the villagers that Andy had been kidnapped and held hostage by criminals lurking nearby.

During those days, she was extremely scared. Worried that he might be killed, she wept all day and lost her appetite,

The police told her that the kidnappers were ruthless drug lords and used every possible means to torture hostages.

Every time a piece of news arrived, Rachel felt increasingly devastated.

She prayed in tears day after day, but God didn't bless Andy.

Finally, the bad news came. He died. The drug lords were good at testing human nature. They said only one of Andy and Chandler could survive, and he gave the chance to Chandler.

Rachel's last glimpse of hope was shattered when she saw that Chandler was the only one getting out of the military police car.

Those drug lords had no humanity at all, and Andy's body was never found.

Rachel collapsed. She even had nowhere to go to pay tribute to him.

The grave at the top of the hill contained, in fact, nothing but a single garment of his. They took him away. The DNA left at the scene was all his blood, but his body was missing.

Since then, Rachel had been depressed for a long time, crying (every day and giving up on herself, until Chandler appeared.

Finding True Love After

Chapter 553 Empty Promises

Rachel suddenly thought of what had happened at the auction that day, and her heart raced.

How did this demon come here?

Rachel instinctively turned around and tried to run away, but the alley was one-way and had only one exit, which was blocked by the Rolls-Royce.

She could only pass by Felix to leave.

Rachel walked over resignedly, and the car door opened automatically.

Felix immediately noticed the slap mark on her face, which had not yet completely disappeared.

“Who slapped you?”

Rachel was stunned that Felix still cared about her.

But upon reflection, she was his fiancée, after all, and he even gave her the bracelet.

Was hitting her the same as hitting Felix in the face?

“Meryl.”

Felix’s eyes deepened. “Oh? Really?”

surprise, “I didn’t expect her to be so matag,”

Tears welled up in Rachel’s eyes, and she didn’t know what Feire meant.

However, she was not in the mood to figure out his thoughts now. “If there is nothing else, I will leave now.”

Felix's voice was cold. "Did I allow you to leave? Turn around."

Startled, Rachel stopped subconsciously.

She pivoted, and Felix stared at the red mark on her cheek, one hand supporting his head.

"Her hands are small and cute."

Rachel was speechless.

Was this pervert praising the slap mark on her face as pretty?

Why did he have such a unique way of complimenting people?

Felix was indeed weird.

Although Rachel believed she was quite stunning, any woman would feel uncomfortable being gazed at closely by a man like this.

Despite her desire to cancel her engagement with Felix, she felt that he was quite affectionate!

Learning that she had been bullied, he came to comfort her and even praised the slap mark on her face as pretty in order to

As strange as it was, it made perfect sense for Felix to do what he did.

Rachel assumed he might help her in some way.

She avoided his blunt gaze and asked softly, "Have you seen enough? Your fiancée was bullied. Are you just going to sit by and watch?"

He raised his eyebrows. "What?"

"I was bullied by Meryl. Help me get revenge if you like me."

Felix looked at her meaningfully. "Like you? Help you get revenge?"

Rachel added, "I do intend to cancel my engagement with but if you can protect me, I am willing to marry you."

you,

She knew very well how to make empty promises, but of course, it was only an expedient.

It was impossible for her to marry Felix, who had nothing but his good looks. She certainly couldn't entrust the rest of her life to a man like him simply because of his handsome face.

He suddenly chuckled and stared at her icily, as if he found it amusing. "How do you want me to help you get revenge?"

Rachel became more certain that Felix wanted to win her favor.

She was concerned about her self-image and did not want him to think she was too vicious and thus spoil his good impression of her.

Chapter 553 Empty Promis Felix sneered playfully, "That's it
