Nancy's face turned pale. She returned the phone to Gerald.

Next to her, Earle was lying unconscious on the bed.

Maurice was naturally startled when the receptionist informed about it to him.

Hearing this, Maurice looked down at the lipstick stain on his collar. He didn't find anything wrong.

It would be ideal if they could reach an agreement peacefully. But if they couldn't, he would use force so Jonathan would hand over the antidote.

Jonathan looked at her anxiously, not daring to touch her again.

"Jonathan, you make me sick! Don't pretend to be a good person. I'm in so much pain now. Isn't that what you want to see?"

She hadn't expected to run into Harriet in this place.

"How come she appeared everywhere I went?" Lucia murmured.

Eliana's smile vanished almost instantly.

"Long time no see, Eliana." Harriet didn't seem to notice the disgust in Lucia's and Eliana's eyes. She approached them with a strange tone and asked, "Have you been very proud recently?"

"Harriet, I don't think we have anything to talk about," Eliana said, unable to ignore her presence.

Lucia rolled her eyes and commented, "Let's go, Eliana. Seeing such a kind of person makes me sick!"

Corbin gave a little cough and winked at her, as if saying, "Don't you have discerning eyes? Can't you see that these two are having a good time?"

Lucia immediately understood. She wiped the tears from her eyes because of laughing and intended to exit decisively.

"Eliana... I suddenly remember that I still have something to do at the company. I'll leave first. Let's meet again next time."

After saying this, Lucia left quietly. There was no third wheel anymore.

They were absorbed in their kissing, wishing that time would stop at this precise moment.

The elevator door opened the next moment.

The scene unfolded to a large number of employees standing outside the elevator. They were taken aback.

No one dared to enter the elevator because one of the two passengers was the company's CEO.
