Cory looked very aggressive. However, Maurice just sat down in front of him casually in an imposing manner.

"Hand over all my power to..." Maurice's voice trailed off and stared at Cory mockingly. "To whom? To Gerald?" he asked coldly.

Cory pushed the gold-rimmed glasses on the bridge of his nose and said arrogantly, "Mr. Moran, you don't need to worry about that. Your grandfather has his own arrangements. You just need to follow his orders."

At this moment, Corbin chimed in, "How dare you talk to Mr. Moran like that!"

He was so angry that he wanted to step forward. But Maurice stretched out his hand to stop him.

"Just leave the documents and go. I'll let you know later."

Nicole approached Wyatt and asked softly, "Wyatt, is something wrong? Did you encounter any difficulties in making the new dishes?"

Nicole approached Wyatt and asked softly, "Wyatt, is something wrong? Did you encounter any difficulties in making the new dishes?"

Wyatt pondered for a moment. Then he finally said, "It's not a big deal. Maurice called me just now, asking me a favor..."

He stopped for a moment. Obviously, he wanted to say something but stopped at a second thought.

Nicole was a little confused. She asked, "What favor did he ask from you? Why do you look so worried?"

Wyatt glanced at Nicole anxiously. "I might need to go back to see my mother. I need her help."

Eventually, Wyatt gathered enough courage to walk into the Todd family's house.

Eventually, Wyatt gathered enough courage to walk into the Todd family's house.

"Mr. Todd, you're finally back!"

The moment the elderly butler saw Wyatt, his eyes lit up and welled up with tears, and he immediately approached the latter.

Feeling a little embarrassed, Wyatt answered, "Erick, do you know where my mother is?"

The butler, Erick Vance, wiped his tears away and said, "She's upstairs, Mr. Todd! You should go and see her. It saddens me to say this, but her health is dwindling."

Wyatt's heart sank, but he still thought that this might be another trick.

Once he was upstairs, he knocked on the door of Dora's room. "Mom, it's me."

Moments later, he heard a voice from inside say, "Come in."

Wyatt walked in, visibly uneasy.

Dora fell to the floor. She lowered her head and called out hoarsely, "Wyatt..."

Dora fell to the floor. She lowered her head and called out hoarsely, "Wyatt..."

Then someone suddenly draped a big coat on her shoulders.

Dora stopped crying, raised her head, and looked back.

It was Wyatt. He came back.

At this moment, he was standing behind Dora. "Mom, don't cry now."

"What are you doing here? Didn't you leave?" Dora turned around and wanted to get up obstinately.

Wyatt heaved a deep sigh. He squatted down and helped her back to the wheelchair.

Chapter 695 His Grandmother's Voice

Nicole and Wyatt were stunned.

Nicole and Wyatt were stunned.

It was Nicole's first time seeing a hint of compromise in Dora's eyes, and she knew that it was time to prove herself.

So she said firmly, "Yes, I can."

"You young people are always so hot-headed and hasty. It's not easy to fulfil a lifelong promise, you know?"

Dora's tone was sarcastic as always, but it did not seem like she was trying to get tit for tat.

In fact, she had already accepted what Nicole said.

"Mom, are you saying..."

Realizing what she meant, Wyatt looked at Dora in surprise.

When Maurice and Corbin left, it was only then that Sean let go of the struggling Nancy.

When Maurice and Corbin left, it was only then that Sean let go of the struggling Nancy.

"Mrs. Moran, I'm sorry. I never want to offend you," Sean said sincerely. "But your son ordered me not to let you call for help, let alone ask Maurice to come over."

Nancy helplessly looked in the direction where Maurice had left. The hope in her heart was extinguished. She was so angry that she picked up the umbrella beside her and hit Sean fiercely.

Sean was concerned about Nancy's health, so he didn't fight back. In the end, he could only hide miserably after being hit several times.

Nancy only stopped when she felt tired. She put down the umbrella, panting.

"You're a man. Are you not ashamed of yourself for bullying an old woman?"

In the Moonlight restaurant, Nicole was stunned when she saw the couple who were to get married soon.

In the Moonlight restaurant, Nicole was stunned when she saw the couple who were to get married soon.

"Shouldn't you be preparing for the wedding? What are you doing here?" she asked.

Eliana grabbed Nicole's hand all of a sudden and said, "Can you be the officiator of our wedding?"

"Me?!" Nicole pointed to herself in shock. "You really want me to be the officiator?"

Maurice nodded affirmatively and said, "Yes, you are the perfect person for the job!"

"Mr. Moran, we have a problem. I just found out that Gerald's residence abroad is empty. He is nowhere to be found."

"Mr. Moran, we have a problem. I just found out that Gerald's residence abroad is empty. He is nowhere to be found."

Maurice frowned at the message from Corbin.

Gerald was not at the place Earle had arranged for him. Where could he have gone?

Maurice's hand tightened, holding his phone as he mulled over this predicament.

Soon enough, Eliana had picked up on his unusual mood.

He must be looking for help.

Eliana approached him and asked, "What's wrong? Why are you holding your phone?"

"Nothing."

Maurice quickly snapped out of his brooding and hid his phone behind him.

"No, something's up. Let me see!"

Maurice took Silas with him and quickly found the video of Silas' parents' wedding.

Maurice took Silas with him and quickly found the video of Silas' parents' wedding.

As the video started playing, memories began to surface from the recesses of his mind. When his sister came into view, at first he felt excited and then incredibly sad.

Rosina appeared in the video, looking happy and beautiful in a gorgeous white wedding dress and a crown.

Her face was similar to Maurice's, but where he had handsome and chiseled features, Rosina was softer.

With her large round eyes and cherub cheeks, she resembled a doll.

Chapter 700 The White Family Came For Eliana

The phone continued to ring and Maurice's words came back to Eliana.

The phone continued to ring and Maurice's words came back to Eliana.

Jonathan had asked Maurice to apologize to Eliana on his behalf.

At last Eliana answered the phone.

"Eliana," Jonathan replied hesitantly in a soft, husky voice, "I didn't expect you to answer my call."

After a moment of silence, Eliana answered, "What do you want?"

"Don't worry. I just wanted to say goodbye to you. I'm going abroad soon. You don't need to worry about me coming to your wedding and causing trouble,"

Jonathan explained, making fun of himself.

"Oh... All right then."

Eliana had mixed feelings. She knew that Jonathan had saved her for another reason and then lied to her.
