

THE ADORABLE TWINS AND THEIR CEO DADDY

Chapter 97 Nana's Pas

"Who are you? What are you doing?" the paparazzi roared in anger.

Corbin turned off the camera in the middle of the shooting and calmly said, "I'm Miss Marlin's lawyer. You have broken the law."

The paparazzi retorted arrogantly, "What do you mean I broke the law? Don't talk nonsense."

Corbin slowly helped Nana up, but when he saw the bruises on her knees and arms, he pulled a long face and said, "Sir, not only was it illegal for you to take photos of her secretly, now I'm also going to press charges against you for assault. Come to the police station with me at once."

Corbin made it sound like he was telling the truth.

Fortunately, he was dressed sharply in a suit which made him look like a lawyer.

"Damn it! What bad luck!"

Corbin's intimidation seemed to have done the trick as the paparazzi mumbled curses and ran away without even taking his camera.

Nana breathed a sigh of relief.

Corbin put the camera in her hand, looking at her with concern and asked, "Did you get hurt badly?"

"It's not so bad. I'll be fine." Nana gave him a perfunctory response as she was busy browsing through the photos in the camera.

The more she looked at them, the more she felt shrouded by anxiety.

The paparazzi must have been following her for several days as he had snapped photos of her in various places.

Nana clenched her fist as she recalled what the paparazzi had asked her earlier on.

It was by a miraculous stroke of luck that she found him today, or else the two babies, Aileen and Adrian, might have been implicated because of her.

Nana couldn't calm down until she had deleted all the photos. Then she looked at Corbin beside her.

"Thank you... For today."

She stared at Corbin with a hint of surprise as she didn't expect him to be so helpful at such a critical moment. After all, he was usually so annoying.

"You're welcome. The twins are adorable. You and your family must be very proud of them. They are too young and innocent to be brought into the public eye." After a pause, Corbin added, "And what if our Silas got mixed up in all of this?"

Nana nodded and said, "You are right. As expected, if it has nothing to do with you, how can you help me?"

Corbin felt that he had been scolded, but there was no evidence.

When he saw the look of embarrassment on Nana's face, he couldn't help saying, "Why didn't you just find a good man instead of choosing to live such a hard life after you quit the entertainment circle?"

Nana asked warily, "Have you been digging up dirt about me?"

After all, it had already been a few years since she quit the entertainment circle.

How did this man know so much about her and what happened to her with Huey?

Corbin didn't realize until now that he had accidentally hit a nerve in Nana.

Although he regretted saying what he had said, he started to gabble nonsense in a calm and composed manner, "I didn't have to do any digging at all. If the paparazzi can recognize you, so can I. I used to be your fan."

"I don't believe it."

Nana looked at him suspiciously and asked, "If you were my fan, why did you argue with me the first time we met? Didn't you recognize me then?"

He called her a strange woman!

Corbin's silence made Nana angrier and she accosted him with an aggressive tone. "Well, why aren't you saying anything? Answer me!"

Corbin's breathing stopped and his heart skipped a beat all of a sudden when she stood closer to him and her beautiful features caught his attention.

The woman was very smart and sharp-witted.

Unfortunately, nothing he could say to her right now would sound plausible because he had told the lie.

Suddenly, Corbin's face twitched as if he had thought of something important.

"Wasn't you trying to catch that dog?"

Nana's eyes widened at his words.

Damn it! She had completely forgotten about the puppy!

She turned around and ran back without even looking at Corbin.

However, there was no sign of the puppy in front of the kindergarten.

"Oh my God! How could I have been so thoughtless?"

Nana held her head with both hands in despair and pulled her soft curly hair.

Corbin followed her and as he looked around, he asked, "Haven't you found it?"

His voice seemed to have triggered Nana because she erupted like a volcano almost immediately. "This is all your fault! If you hadn't pestered me, I wouldn't have lost track of Bowling!"

Bowling was nowhere to be found! How was she going explain this to Eliana?
