

Read Novel Life After Prison Chapter 1991

Life After Prison Chapter 1991-After Myles arrived, he glanced at the sparsely gathered Seventh Mountain disciples and paid no more attention to them, because he sensed that the genius who gave birth to a new swordwill was not among them. He was about to step inside the Sword Tomb when he suddenly felt a familiar aura coming from the inside, causing his eyebrows to shoot up from shock.

He paused in his tracks and thought skeptically, 'This... this aura feels really familiar! Could it be that I've met the person who gave birth to a new swordwill before?' Myles recalled that he had a young genius swordsman named Radyn under his command. He thought Radyn a promising candidate who had a chance of giving birth to a new swordwill, but he quickly shook his head. The aura coming from the Sword Tomb was completely different from Radyn's. Based on this alone, he concurred that the person who gave birth to Sword Will was definitely not Radyn!

"But who could it be if it's not Radyn? Which other disciple in the entire Seventh Mountain could give birth to a new swordwill? wondered Myles quizzically.

Suddenly, his eyes lit up as another thought crossed his mind. 'Could it be that the person who gave birth to a new swordwill isn't from Seventh Mountain?' Myles was about to rush inside of Sword Tomb to take a look when Severin, who had suppressed his swordwill and aura, walked out of the exit.

After coming out, Severin saw Myles standing motionless at the entrance. He then smiled and cupped his hands towards him and said, "Greetings Mister Myles." Myles looked surprised to see Severin there. He did not expect to meet the sixth core disciple in Sword Tomb. He thought Severin was a promising young man.

In fact, he would have wanted him as his disciple if he had not been a core disciple.

When Severin broke through the seventh floor of Alchemy Tower, causing the tower to emit strange visions, Myles personally arrived at the sky above the square and gave Severin a gift as a token of friendship.

Myles smiled back and nodded to Severin before saying, "I didn't expect that you would also be in Sword Tomb." Severin nodded in response to Myles. After all, the other party was the peak master of Seventh Mountain, a powerful man at level nine paragon. Even though Severin was the sixth core disciple, that did not mean he could act all arrogant.

"I came to Swo Sword Tomb half a month ago to cultivate Sky–Soil Heptagold Sword Energy," explained Severin with a smile.

+15 BONUS Not only did he level up his Sky Soil Heptagold Sword Energy to Small Success, but he also absorbed and devoured the lingering swordwills, causing his swordwill to evolve into chaotic swordwill. Even till then he was still savoring the happiness of his achievements.

Myles nodded lightly. He was not really listening to what Severin was saying because his mind had already drifted to the mysterious genius swordsman in Sword Tomb.

Seeing Myles looking a little distracted, Severin immediately said, "Mister Myles, I still have something to take care of so I'll return to Pearl Light Isle first.

Goodbye.

He strode towards the outside of Sword Tomb as soon as he had finished speaking. Meanwhile, Myles strode into Sword Tomb. The moment he looked up, he saw Severin's name at the top of the black stone monument. This combined with the other disciples' exclamations and discussion caused him to be stunned on the spot.

"Wow, Severin is indeed a role model for us disciples. He has awakened his swordwill and ranked first in the Top Swordsman ranking just half a month after entering Sword Tomb."

Click to rate this post!
[Total: 0 Average: 0]

Life After Prison Chapter 1992-"I know right! He's super awesome!" Myles felt like his head was spinning after hearing what those disciples were talking about. He never expected that the person who awakened a new swordwill would be Severin. In Myles' impression, Severin was a genius alchemist who broke through the seventh floor of Alchemy Tower some time ago, so it was surprising to find out he was also a genius in swordsmanship!

A cultivator would be considered a genius if he had top talent in a certain area.

Take Celeste for example, who became the fifth core disciple due to her genius talent in alchemy, or Raymond, who became the fourth core disciple because he could rely on his Element Constitution to speed up his training.

Looking back at the nearly one year since Severin became a disciple, he not only displayed the mysterious and incomparable Chactic Constitution, but was also designated as the unprecedented sixth core disciple of the Grandiuno Sect by the sect leader Oskar Burton, and later even surpassed Celeste in alchemy by passing the seventh floor of Alchemy Tower!

Severin's talent in alchemy caused the Alchemy Tower to shake and in turn caused a sensation in the entire Grandiuno Sect. Thus, it was not an exaggeration to say Severin was a veritable genius, worthy of the status of the sixth core disciple.

Therefore, it was understandable for Myles to be shocked when someone told him that the person who awakened a new swordwill was Severin. After recovering from the shock, Myles' face changed from one shade of color to another. After a few breaths, he exclaimed, "This kid is simply a monster!" Just when Myles was feeling awed in his heart about Severin's monstrous qualifications, he realized at that moment that he had just met Severin outside Sword Tomb. He immediately turned around and flew away without hesitation. In the blink of an eye, he caught up with Severin outside the Sword Tomb.

Severin, wait!" Severin—who was about to fly back to Pearl Light Isle—turned around when he heard Myles' anxious voice. After seeing the excitement and joy on Myles' face, Severin scratched his head and asked, "What's the matter, Mister Myles?" Myles walked up to him, exhaled heavily, and said, "Why did you hide your achievement from me? I didn't expect that the disciple who just awakened swordwill would be you!" Severin nodded, and then explained, "Mister Myles, I wasn't trying to hide it from you. In fact, thanks to the suggestion you gave me last time, I was able to cultivate the Sky-Soll Heptagold Sword Energy to Small Success and awakened my swordwill in Sword Tomb." 1/2 +15 BONUS There was a look of overwhelming joy in Myles' eyes after hearing Severin admitting to the fact that he had awakened his swordwill. He took a big step forward and grabbed Severin's wrist, saying, “Severin, what do you think of Seventh Mountain?” “The scenery there is beautiful and the spiritual energy pleasant, replied Severin with some confusion.

Only then did Myles tell him what he had in mind, “I would like you to come work as a sword instructor at Seventh Mountain!” Myles took a deep breath, as if he had made an important decision in his heart.

He looked at Severin seriously and said. “The salary is fifty thousand spiritual stones, one seventh– grade alchemical pill, and five rays of sky–soil energy per month.”

Click to rate this post!
[Total: 0 Average: 0]

Life After Prison Chapter 1993-Myles was not just making empty promises as he actually came to that decision after some careful consideration. It gave him a great shock to learn that the person who awakened the swordwill was Severin because a cultivator was considered a genius in the entire Southsky as long as he or she possessed top talent in one area of cultivation.

However, not only did Severin possess Chaos Divine Constitution, but he was swordwill, which put him on the top of every sword cultivator there!

Perhaps in the past, Myles would have tried–just like the sixth peak master Daniella Phix did–to ask Severin to be his disciple. However, shocked by the various top–notch qualifications Severin possessed, Myles knew that he had nothing to offer or teach Severin.

After all, Severin was a core disciple, his status might not be as high as a peak master, but he was definitely more powerful than the elders of the sect. It would be akin to a mortal trying to make a dragon into his pet.

Therefore, Myles took another route by asking Severin to become Seventh Mountain’s sword instructor. After all, even he–a level nine paragon with an awakened heptagold swordwill–found Severin’s chaotic swordwill terrifying.

With such an understanding of swordsmanship, Severin was definitely fully qualified for the position of sword instructor! Moreover, it was another roundabout way of tying Severin to Seventh Mountain As long as Severin served as their sword instructor at Seventh Mountain for one day, no matter how high. Severin reached in the future, Seventh Mountain would also benefit from his fame. With that thought in mind, Myles spoke again, "Severin, I never expected that you would have such high attainments in swordsmanship." Faced with Myles' praise, Severin waved his hand calmly and said with a smile, "You're too kind, Mister Myles. My achievements aren't worth mentioning at all." Myles' words became stuck in his throat after seeing how calm Severin was. Did he really just downplay his achievement of ranking first in the Top Swordsman ranking? Myles would probably laugh out loud in his dreams if one disciple of Seventh Mountain could awaken his swordwill and enter the Top Swordsman ranking.

The surrounding Seventh Mountain, however, disciples felt that Severin deserved a beating after seeing his reaction.

"Spoken like a true genius. The world of genius is not something we can understand." 1/2 +15 BONUS "The strength of his swordwill has even alarmed the peak master, and yet he said it's nothing?" "If this isn't worth mentioning, then what is?" "Bah! His words just make me want to hit him! It took me ten years training in Sword Tomb before I could comprehend sword heart, and I haven't even gotten close to comprehending swordwill! And yet, it only took Severin half a month for him to awaken his swordwill!" Severin was speechless when he saw the surrounding disciples gnashing their teeth. However, he also knew how what he had just said could seem a little pretentious in the eyes of the other disciples.

At the same time, Myles finished complaining in his heart. He looked at Severin, stroked the beard on his chin, and said, "Severin, what you've done is no small achievement indeed. From the time I've established Seventh Mountain, only a few hundred people have been able to reach the Top Swordsman ranking. Most of the broken swords in the Sword Tomb were brought back from the battlefield by the ancestors of the past generations." After a pause, he grinned bitterly and said, "The fact that you can awaken swordwill proves that you have outstanding talent in swordsmanship and are fully capable of teaching my disciples." It was not that Myles was trying to flatter Severin, but....

Click to rate this post!
[Total: 0 Average: 0]

Life After Prison Chapter 1994-Myles was training in seclusion when Severin's swordwill cut through the fog in the Sword Tomb and rose into the sky. He himself was already a level nine paragon, and he had also awakened the heptagold swordwill, which had the sharpest attributes. He could count on one hand the opponent that could win against him in the same realm!

Even so, when he felt Severin's chaotic swordwill, the heptagold swordwill in his body actually made a surrendering gesture, which surprised him. At his strength, even sword cultivators in the royal paragon realm would not be able to suppress his swordwill, let alone cultivators in the same realm, and yet a supreme saint like Severin was able to do it!

Therefore, Myles immediately concluded that the swordwill Severin had awakened must be extremely powerful, giving rise to the decision wanting to hire him as a sword instructor.

"How about it? I'm willing to pay more if it's not enough!" said Myles quickly when Severin remained silent for a long while.

Severin shook his head. To be honest, Severin was quite excited about the salary given by Myles. He did not really care about the spiritual stones since it was impossible for an alchemist like him to lack spiritual stones.

Even the seventh-grade alchemical pill was not very attractive in his opinion.

Although Severin was only a sixth-grade high-rank alchemist and was still far away from being a seventh-grade alchemist, he knew he could easily level up to a seventh-grade alchemist in a short time after harvesting the alchemy Inheritance in Alchemy Tower. He could then easily refine as many seventh-grade elixirs as he wanted.

What really attracted him the most was the sky-soil energy. The sky-soil energy was one of the vital energies of heaven and earth above the Nine Heavens. In other words, it was a veritable precious treasure, and played a valuable role in refining alchemical pills or cultivating.

The Sky-Soil Heptagold Sword Energy Severin was cultivating required a large amount of sky-soil energy to upgrade it to the realm of Great Success. By then, he would be able to strike down a ten thousand mile high mountain with just one blow of his sword!

There were only two ways to obtain sky–soil energy. The first one was to collect it personally from the air above the Nine Heavens, but this method was too dangerous for Severin. The strong wind blowing from the Nine Heavens was enough to cut through the space and annihilate the all four elements of earth, water, wind and fire.

It was not something that a cultivator in the supreme saint realm like him could easily fight against. He needed to at least be in the high level paragon to come away from the harvest safe and sound.

+15 BONUS The other method was to enter the Cave Heaven secret realms. Those Cave Heaven secret realms contained treasures left over from ancient times, so naturally there would be sky–soil energy among them.

Previously, Severin thought that after the sect competition was over, he would go to several secret realms in Southsky to look for sky–soil energy. However, after hearing Myles' proposal, he became a little tempted to take him up on his offer. He would be able to shorten the time it would take him to reach Great Success if he could get some sky–soil energy.

Besides, Myles was pretty good to him. Last time he was at Alchemy Tower plaza, he gave him two balls of heptagold energy as a gift.

After Severin pondered for a moment, he nodded towards Myles who was waiting for his reply and said, I'm not really that talented. In fact, my talent in swordsmanship is limited. Please do give me some advice if you think I'm not doing my job as a sword instructor well."

Click to rate this post!
[Total: 0 Average: 0]

Life After Prison Chapter 1995-When Myles heard that, his eyes suddenly lit up and his face was filled with joy.

To be honest, he had thought Severin would turn him down after seeing he went all silent on him.

After all, Severin himself was a core disciple. Not only did he have extremely high cultivation talent, but he had also broken through to the seventh floor of the swordwill. He was a monster genius cultivator through and through.

Why would Myles would not be surprised if Severin was the most powerful out of all six core disciples. someone like him want to work for the lowly Seventh Mountain? Thus, it was understandable for Myles to be ecstatic that Severin was willing to take up the job.

After Myles came back to his senses, he stroked his beard with a smile, shook his sleeves, and said to Severin, "Haha, you're too humble, Severin! Even I'm impressed at the heights you've reached in your swordsmanship, so I'm sure you'll be able to impart valuable teachings to the disciples." Although he did not know what the attribute of Severin's swordwill was, judging from the terrifying momentum that the swordwill had erupted before, Myles was sure that Severin's swordwill must be above his own heptagold swordwill.

"There's no way a cultivator who possesses such a terrifying swordwill be mediocre in his understanding of swordsmanship, thought Myles. He was completely at ease that Severin would be able to do well in his job as a sword instructor.

After Severin heard what Myles said, he did not know whether to laugh or cry, but he did not say anything more. After chatting for a while and reminiscing about old times, Severin said his goodbye, "Mister Myles, I have important matters to handle in Pearl Light Isle, so I take my leave first." Myles nodded in agreement.

The spiritual energy in Severin's body vibrated out. The next moment, he rose into the sky and turned into a stream of light and disappeared from the Seventh Mountain. A moment later, a floating island with a beautiful glowing aura appeared in Severin's sight.

Severin raised his hand and waved, summoning the token from the spatial ring and throwing it forward.

which allowed to pass through the formation and return to the courtyard.

After arriving in the courtyard, Severin noticed that Wuhlricht and the elders who used to especially like to stay in the courtyard to play chess were actually practicing in their respective caves for the first time. Not only that, but Diane and the girls were also still training in seclusion. Severin was really heartened to see everyone hard at training +15 BONUS After he returned to Pearl Light Isle, he went directly to his own training room without disturbing the girls who were in seclusion.

“I should take this opportunity to integrate the understanding of swordsmanship after absorbing so many swordwills in Sword Tomb, thought Severin as he sat down on the Enlightenment Mat.

Although Severin’s cultivation level was only level seven supreme saint, he was confident he could instantly kill a level nine supreme saint if he used Sky–Soil Heptagold Sword Energy, and if he used his chaotic swordwill, even a paragon that had just broken through would be no match for him.

Severin also valued his swordsmanship very much, so after returning to his training room, he immediately began to integrate his understanding of swordsmanship so that he could use 100% of his power when fighting enemies in the future.

After two days of integration, Severin’s swordwill became stronger and stronger.

His whole body was like a sword hidden in the peak and restrained in its sheath, giving others the ultimate sense of oppression.

Once the integration was completed, Severin walked out of the training room feeling refreshed. Suddenly, he sensed a disturbance in the spiritual energy around the island as they all rushed toward the courtyard.

‘Did Diane and the others break through?’ wondered Severin.

Click to rate this post!
[Total: 0 Average: 0]

Life After Prison Chapter 1996-The energy was flowing in the direction of the courtyard where Diane and the girls had been in seclusion. Without another word, Severin immediately extended his divine senses and began to probe into the path where the spiritual energy had disappeared. He soon discovered that a millstone–sized vortex of energy had formed just above where Diane was, and gusts of wind had been produced. In that instant, Severin sensed Diane’s spiritual energy growing stronger, almost as if she was on the verge of making a breakthrough to level four supreme saint.

He thought to himself, ‘We entered the sect just over half a year ago, but it seems that Diane is already on the cusp of a breakthrough to level four supreme saint. Such an achievement is enough to rank her high within the elite disciples' The condensed spiritual energy vortex was absorbed in a flash, but he noticed that Diane's spiritual energy was still stuck at level three supreme saint. Having decided to walk over and position himself in the sky not far from where Diane was, he reached out to grasp the space outside Pearl Light Isle.

At that moment, the spiritual energy of heaven and earth within a several dozen-mile radius around Pearl Light Isle seemed to respond to his command.

It flowed into the island, replenishing what had been drained. The influx allowed Diane to make a breakthrough to level four supreme saint in less than half a day, and her achievement elicited a smile on Severin's face.

Following her breakthrough, Severin allowed her to consolidate her foundation without much interference. Meanwhile, he observed his other wives' progress and saw that even Gilda, Sheila, and Sofia were on the brink of a breakthrough.

"Looks like they're all going to get a breakthrough!" Severin smiled. Since he could not interfere much, he absorbed a substantial amount of spiritual energy from the outside world to replenish the energy within the island.

The next morning, as the sun's golden rays pierced through the white sky of Pearl Light Isle, the vast spiritual energy of heaven and earth transformed into a spiritual vortex that enveloped Gilda's room. Severin knew that her breakthrough was imminent.

As expected, a thunderous boom was heard as the spiritual vortex above Gilda's room dissipated. Her level four supreme saint energy soared into the sky and shrouded Pearl Light Isle, and her breakthrough triggered a domino effect. Sheila and Sofia both achieved breakthroughs later that evening. All of their spiritual energy seemed to resonate within the island, producing gales of wind that would startle everyone present there.

Even disciples on the Fifth Mountain and Sixth Mountain, who were several dozen miles away from Pearl Light Isle, could sense the unusually strong fluctuation of energy.

+15 BONUS "Why is the spiritual energy thinning again?" "I see a level four supreme saint energy from Pearl Light Isle. Someone must have broken through.” “Isn’t Severin already level seven?” “Don’t be fooled, His wives all have spint constitutions.

“It’s pointless to compare ourselves with them. They’re talented AND beautiful
“Severin treats his wives super well. How else would they be able to reach level four supreme saint after barely entering the sect half a year ago?

Click to rate this post!
[Total: 0 Average: 0]

Life After Prison Chapter 1997-Discussions were rife among the disciples of the Fifth and Sixth Mountains after they learned that Severin’s wives had made a breakthrough. Some female disciples were vocal with their jealousy as they glanced longingly in the direction of Pearl Light Isle—they were envious of Diane and the others for being lucky enough to become Severin’s wives.

Ever since Severin gained fame in the Grandiuno Sect by clearing the first six floors in the Alchemy Tower, he had become the object of admiration for many female disciples across the mountains.

In the eyes of those disciples, Severin was the epitome of perfection—he was the sect’s sixth core disciple, a prodigious alchemist, and someone who possessed the Chaos Constitution. Those qualities, coupled with Severin’s handsome appearance, had many female disciples pining secretly for him. Had Severin been single, he might have found himself visited by those admirers all the time.

Many of the female disciples were thus even more jealous after learning that his wives were the ones who had made a breakthrough. According to the standard for elite disciples, those who had talent were mostly able to reach level three supreme saint within the first year of entering the sect. Elite disciples must fulfill a certain qualification to be accorded such status in the Grandiuno Sect—it should either be a spirit constitution or a treasure constitution.

However, making a breakthrough to level four supreme saint was a challenging feat. Shyam of the Fifth Mountain, for instance, earned a place on the sect’s prodigy ranking even though he was only a perfect□stage level five supreme saint. The reason was that most elite disciples spent their lives hovering around levels three and four.

Diane's breakthrough, and indeed the other girls' breakthrough, represented an exceptional achievement.

Part of it was because they had resources aplenty, as Severin was an extraordinarily talented person who was also a sixth-grade alchemist.

The female disciples who admired Severin were envious, while the male disciples had their fair share of jealousy. As a highly-talented alchemist with several beautiful wives, and who was rumored to have awakened sword will at the Seventh Mountain, Severin would always come out tops in the game of life.

The male disciples reflected on their hurdles after remaining stagnant at level two or level three supreme saint despite years of toil. The uncertainty of when they might have a breakthrough fueled their jealousy even more.

Meanwhile, Severin remained oblivious to the restlessness of the disciples on the Fifth and Sixth Mountains. His focus was on protecting his four wives. The strong winds on Pearl Light Isle persisted until the next day, gradually dissipating as the sun descended. When all four women had successfully made a breakthrough, Severin breathed a sigh of relief.

+15 BONUS Over the past two days, he had ensured the women's safety during their breakthroughs by staying by their side and absorbing a significant amount of spiritual energy from the outside world. Diane and the others had lived up to his expectations and achieved successful breakthroughs in the end. Satisfied by their progress, Severin nodded and finally let out a sigh of relief.

Before long, Diane emerged in from of Severin wearing a plain white dress. Her slender, proud figure moved gracefully as she approached him.

Click to rate this post!
[Total: 0 Average: 0]

Life After Prison Chapter 1998-Diane lit up with joy when she spotted Severin. There was a twinkle in her eye as she spoke in a magnetic voice, "Thank you, honey. It was all because of you that we were able to make a breakthrough together." Diane remained aware of everything that was happening outside despite being in seclusion. She knew that Severin's intervention had helped in ensuring that the supply of spiritual energy within the island remained constant. Higher attainment levels demanded more spiritual energy from heaven and earth, which would make it difficult for them to secure a breakthrough if that flow was interrupted. As level four supreme saints, they were considered to fall within the top ranks of elite disciples.

After Diane thanked him on behalf of the girls, Severin stepped forward and pinched her cheeks slightly.

That's my duty as everyone's husband.' Diane rolled her eyes and pursed her lips. "You're such a sweet talker." As they spoke, Gilda exited her seclusion and joined them. Gilda, who was wearing a blue dress and did her hair up in a jade hairpin, patted her chest and said to Severin, "That was a close call earlier. I was on the verge of failing my breakthrough before you replenished the spiritual energy." Sheila and Sofia, wearing a purple dress and beige robe respectively, came out after them and approached Severin elegantly. Their attire resembled lotuses emerging from the recesses of a lake.

Sheila smiled sweetly and said, "Yeah!! agree with Gilda! If our hubby hadn't given us the Crystal Spring Pill and Pristine Spirit Pill, we'd have taken months and months to get a breakthrough!" There seemed to be no end to the girls' conversation, so Severin intervened.

"Thanks for the praise, but I'm just glad you all made a breakthrough." Severin was aware that his wives were lucky to have a Spirit Constitution. With his alchemical skills, it was not difficult for them to help them make a breakthrough in the not-too-distant future. While those breakthroughs were a cause for celebration, a celebratory feast was not brought up because Wuhlricht and the group were still in seclusion.

Even so, Diane prepared a simple lunch using ingredients found on the island.

Everyone's advanced level of attainment meant that mortal food was no longer required, but that did not stop them from feeling nostalgic about wanting to once again enjoy the kind of food they used to have back at the Skyblue Sect.

The food that Diane made fulfilled that need, if only to satiate their cravings.

After lunch, Severin leaned back in a chair and enjoyed the leisurely moment.

All of a sudden, a crisp announcement echoed through Pearl Light Isle. "I, Emery Green, am here to fulfill my end of the bet!" Severin stood up in surprise after hearing the announcement. "Emery?" 1/7 +15 BONUS It had been several months since their challenge, and Severin had almost forgotten about the bet. He assumed that Emery might try to keep whatever remained of her dignity and refrain from bringing it up again, lest she incur the wrath of Daniella, her mentor and the Sixth Mountain's peak master.

Severin thus chose to ignore the bet that he made, and Emery's unexpected arrival naturally caught Severin by surprise.

Click to rate this post!
[Total: 0 Average: 0]

Life After Prison Chapter 1999-Surprised by what he heard, Severin soared up from his chair and flew out of Pearl Light Isle as soon as he heard Emery's voice echoing outside the island.

As he stepped out of the island's protective formation, Severin's attention was drawn to the sight of a captivating woman. Her graceful figure was clothed in a pure white robe that complemented her peachy face. Like a flower unsullied by the soil that it grows on, she emanated a prominent and serene aura that captivated anyone.

Severin stood suspended in the air upon seeing Emery. He gazed at her and suggested, "Let's call off the bet we made, Emery. It's not something that we ought to be taking too seriously."

Having won the tournament against Emery and obtained the Pristine Spirit Pill and its recipe, Severin faced much animosity from Daniella, who tended to be very protective of her student. To avoid any potential conflicts, Severin decided to forgo Emery's unfulfilled part of the bet.

Emery, however, seemed offended by his suggestion. She clenched her jaw and shot him an angry glare as she pouted, "What are you implying? Do I look like a sore loser to you?" Tears welled up in Emery's eyes, and her expression was a complex mix of sadness. She had considered herself a superior alchemist—even to Celeste—and believed that Celeste's position as fifth core disciple would be hers if not for Celeste's Forest Constitution. Daniella's coddling only fueled her ego even more.

Losing to Severin in the tournament was too big a blow to Emery, and she had struggled to accept the outcome. Priding herself as the second prodigy among the sect's alchemists, Emery's arrogance grew particularly because she was backed by the support of a seventh-grade alchemist like Daniella. When Severin surpassed her name in the rankings, she was not pleased about it and came to Pearl Light Isle to issue a challenge to Severin.

Despite her extensive preparation as well as the advantage she gained from using one of the three special cauldrons from the Sixth Mountain, she lost the tournament and spiraled into depression for over two months.

During the two months, her defeat to Severin became a source of trauma and nightmares, thus hindering Emery's progress. It was only later that she heard about Severin reaching the seventh floor of the Alchemy Tower, and that was when she was finally able to let go of her arrogance. Even Celeste was unable to reach the seventh floor, so Severin's ability to achieve that feat could only mean that his talent surpassed everyone—even Celeste.

When Daniella returned to the Sixth Mountain, she could only sigh when she saw Emery's breakdown.

Click to rate this post!

[Total: 0 Average: 0]

Life After Prison Chapter 2000-Emery recalled vividly her master's advice during that challenging time, where she was told that confronting the problem head-on was the best way to overcome her inner turmoil. However, Emery hesitated to immediately fulfill her part of her bet, believing that she could conquer her traumatic experience without any help.

Alas, the outcome was a resounding failure. Since her defeat to Severin, Emery found her progress becoming stagnant. There was even a decline in her success rate of refining the sixth-grade medium-rank Crystal Spring Pill.

In her helpless desperation. Emery finally accepted reality. Letting go of the trauma after Severin's defeat would require her to face the situation head-on.

After days of internal struggle, a recent surge of terrifying swordwill on the Seventh Mountain caught her attention, and it later transpired to her that Severin was behind that.

Emery's master, Daniella, insisted that Severin possessed the potential to become a celestial, which only highlighted the vast gap between Emery and Severin. Realizing that she would forever live in Severin's shadow unless she confronted the trauma of her defeat, Emery decided to come to Pearl Light Isle and fulfill her bet.

Though it was an outright embarrassment for the Sixth Mountain's alchemy genius to work as a maid and maid, Emery needed to consider the bigger picture. In Daniella's opinion, being a maid to someone as gifted as Severin—who had a Divine Constitution, exceptional alchemical ability, and incredible swordsmanship—was an opportunity not to be missed. For those reasons, Emery felt aggrieved by Severin's response.

Confused by Emery's reaction, Severin scratched his head and asked, "Does this mean you're insistent on becoming my maid?" After a moment of bewilderment, he looked at Emery. "Are you serious?" Emery gritted her teeth and replied coldly, "I lost the bet. I'll become your maid!" Emery's determination elicited a nod from Severin as he produced a jade token from his pocket and tossed it to her. "Okay then. You'll officially become Pearl Light Isle's maid from today onward. Here's the token you can use to access the island," he said before promptly returning to the island in apparent ignorance of Emery's expression.

With the token in hand, Emery's expression reflected a mix of her hesitation, unwillingness, and humiliation. She stood rooted to the ground and watched as Severin's figure vanished from sight. In the end, she gritted her teeth and said, "I'm here already. Why else should I hesitate? Master told me that Severin was the most talented alchemist the sect had seen in the past ten thousand years.

He might have already gained that knowledge passed down from the Alchemy Tower. I hope I won't regret this decision." Emery clutched the token in her hand and pursed her lips as she entered Pearl Light Isle with determination.

Click to rate this post!
[Total: 0 Average: 0]