The Almighty Dragon General Chapter 2558—James really was just passing by the area.

The Sangrian Army would have been wiped out today if he had not happened to pass by the battlefield.

‘Thank you.’ The female general expressed her gratitude.

She attempted to get up but had not fully regained her strength.

As soon as she moved, an excruciating pain spread through her body.

She inadvertently let out a painful groan.

Seeing her struggle, James said, ‘I might have saved your life but, your injuries were pretty serious and haven’t completely healed up.’

James looked at the other female soldiers sitting in the distance, and his curiosity was piqued.

He asked, ‘Why do you only have female soldiers? Are there no men in your country?’ Hearing this, the female general was shocked.

Looking at James perplexedly, she asked, ‘Have you never heard of Sangria before?’ James shook his head and said, ‘I’ve been cultivating in the mountains and rarely wander outside.’

‘I’m not very apprised on the affairs of the outside world.’ ‘Oh, I see.’ The female general explained, ‘Our country has been cursed, and men aren’t capable of surviving in Sangria.’

‘Men that stay in our country for over a month will end up dying inexplicably.’ ‘That’s a terrifying curse.’ James was stunned.

A place where men could not survive.

Was there really such a strange place in this universe? The female general nodded and said, ‘Indeed.’

‘Women have always occupied our country, so we don’t have any men there.’ James’ curiosity in Sangria grew deeper.

He asked, "You mentioned your country was cursed? What happened?" The female general shook her head and said, "I'm not too sure about the details.

It's an event that happened a long time ago in the past.

All records about this point in history have been stored in the forbidden site of our country's palace.

Only Her Majesty, the Empress, has access to them." "All I know is no men have ever lived in our country.

All of our civilians are women.

If a man were to enter our country, he'd die after a month." The more he learned about Sangria, the more James wanted to know more about it.

He did not believe their claims that a man would die after staying in the country for over a month.

The female general rested for a while and recovered a bit of her strength.

She struggled about from the ground and looked at the mountains of corpses in the distance with anguish.

"Korinth's attack on us caused our army to suffer a disastrous defeat.

Many soldiers were sacrificed and died tragically in this battle.

Korinth has grand ambitions, but our country has been standing in the way of its plan to unify the world.

Although they've withdrawn for now, they'll definitely regroup and attack us again.

"Korinth is the strongest country in this world.

If they try again, our country might really be wiped out." The female general mumbled, seemingly talking to herself but also to James.

James looked at her and said, "I'm very interested in Sangria's history.

I'll come with you to Sangria." The female general nodded and said, "Alright.

However, you shouldn't stay in our country for too long, Sir.

Otherwise, you might get cursed." James smiled in response.

He was not bothered by the curse.

Afterward, the female general began to gather her troops.

400,000 of her soldiers were slaughtered.

Out of the initial army of 500,000 soldiers, only 100,000 remained.

Moreover, all of the surviving soldiers were injured.

Without James' interference, the Korinth's army would have wiped out the entire army of 500,000 soldiers.

The female general returned home with the remaining soldiers.

At that moment, a woman stood in Sangria's palace hall.

The woman wore a golden dress and a crown on her head.

She was very beautiful and had an excellent figure, radiating elegance and nobility.

Many people stood behind her, all of which were gorgeous women.

'Your Majesty, our army has suffered a devastating defeat.

We've sustained severe casualties, and only one hundred thousand soldiers remain.

Unexpectedly, Korinth withdrew its troops right before our army was about to be completely wiped out.

"We've received intel from the front line that our general has died in battle."

The Almighty Dragon General Chapter 2559-The reports came in one after another.

The Empress had a solemn expression as she was brief on how their troops were faring.

Immediately, she issued an order, "Get the other three armies to gather in the Imperial Capital and tell them to defend it with their lives."

"Understood." At that moment, the female general was on the way back to the country with her 100,000 surviving soldiers.

Half a month later, the female general arrived at the Imperial Capital.

She kneeled on the ground in the Sangria Palace.

'Your Highness, please forgive me for failing to repel Korinth's troops.

Our army suffered heavy casualties during the battle that took place in Yantargh Canyon.

This man is the savior who prevented Korinth's merciless army from wiping us out.

Without his help, Korinth's army might have already reached the Imperial Capital by now." James stood in the palace hall, sweeping his gaze over the civil and military officials gathered.

All of them were beautiful women.

He felt entranced by the sight of so many gorgeous women gathered together.

To him, it was like looking at a mesmerizing landscape.

The Empress' eyes were fixated on James.

She frowned after sensing that his energy was relatively meager and seeing that he was only at the Mage Rank.

She questioned," General, did you say he was the one that stopped the Korinth army?"

The female general replied respectfully, 'That's right, Your Majesty.'" The Empress frowned and said, "He's merely at the Mage Rank's First Stage.

As opposed to him, the Grand Marshal of Korinth has reached the Tribulation Rank's Second Stage.

You said he prevented their army from continuing the attack.

I don't see how could he have stopped them with his level of strength." "What do you mean?" The female general considered the Empress' statement.

During the confrontation between James and the Grand Martial, she had been injured and unconscious.

Thus, she was unsure of what actually happened when the two fought.

At that moment, James stepped forward and replied, "Your Majesty, one's cultivation rank doesn't represent their true strength." The Empress did not respond to his declaration and turned to her servants, "Come and show our benefactor the place where he may have succor.” Soon, several beautiful maids came and led James out of the palace hall.

James also remained silent and turned around to follow them.

After James left, the Empress began to interrogate the female general.

The female general relayed everything she knew in great detail, including being saved by James.

Then, the Empress called for some of the surviving soldiers.

From the testimony of these soldiers, she learned that James was indeed the person that forced the Grand Marshal of Korinth to retreat.

After learning of the truth, the Empress sighed in relief.

“We’re safe, thanks to him.

Otherwise, we would’ve been in dire straits by now.

‘You’re all dismissed.’ The Empress stood up and left the palace hall.

Meanwhile, James had been shown his accommodation within the palace.

He was given an independent courtyard which was surrounded by lush greenery.

The birds sang beautiful melodies as they perched in the trees and the fragrance of flowers perfumed the air.

James was sitting down to rest in the yard as he tried to get a sense of his surroundings.

He muttered, “There’s nothing out of the ordinary here.

Why did they say that men can’t survive in Sangria?” While he was deep in thought over the topic, a group of people approached him.

The person in the lead was a woman wearing a golden dress with a crown atop her head.

Many beautiful court ladies followed behind her.

All of them had equally lovely and were on par with the Empress in terms of appearance.

However, they lacked the elegance and grace that she exuded.

“Sir.” The Empress approached him with a charming smile.

She looked at James and gave him a slight bow as she said, “I’m very grateful for your assistance.

If it wasn’t for your intervention, my country would’ve been in ruins by now.

You’re our country’s benefactor, so do tell us if there is anything you would like.

After we have repaid your debt of kindness, we humbly request that you leave as soon as possible.

Otherwise, a curse will befall you.”

The Almighty Dragon General Chapter 2560-After confirming the truth from a variety of sources, the Empress acknowledged that James had indeed saved Sangria’s remaining soldiers and temporarily averted their crisis by preventing Korinth’s attack on their country.

It was common courtesy in Sangria to repay the kindness shown to them.

Since James had saved their country, they wanted to show their gratitude.

However, the Empress did not want James to remain in Sangria for an extended period of time because she was afraid he would find himself in a dangerous situation or die abruptly because of the curse.

The Empress did not want something bad to happen to James.

James was immediately intrigued after hearing the Empress bring up the topic of the curse.

He could not contain his curiosity and asked, “Your Majesty, what kind of place is Sangria? Why has a curse that prevents men from living here for an extended period been put on the country?” The Empress doubtfully shook her head and said, “I don’t know too much about the specifics.

It’s something that happened a long time ago.

The truth of many of these things has been lost to time.” “Something that happened a long time ago?” asked James.

The Empress shook her head again and said, “I don’t really remember clearly.

Our country had been destroyed multiple times in the past, and many important records have been lost.

Whatever records that remain were left behind by our country’s powerhouse.

However, there isn’t much recorded about the curse.

The ancient records only state that the curse is related to a battle that happened in ancient times.” The Empress fell into thought, racking her brain for information.

After briefly thinking about it, she said, ‘The planet we’re on right now is called Planet Galileo, named after a peerless powerhouse, Sir Galileo.

For unknown reasons, he disappeared, and this planet was sealed off.

Living beings on our planets aren’t able to leave and foreign beings aren’t able to enter our planet.” The Empress explained their planet’s history.

However, since these events were from ancient times and happened long before the current day, there was not much she knew.

“Our country is situated at the very center of Planet Galileo.

It’s where the seal is also located.

That seal the reason there’s a curse on men in our country.” James listened attentively.

After hearing her stories, his mind began to wander.

‘Sir Galileo? What kind of person is he?’ James asked Sophie who was in the Celestial Abode.

Sophie was well-informed and knew about almost every famous and powerful creature in the universe.

However, James did not get Sophie’s response after calling for her a few times.

He had no choice but to ask Nova, who was also within the Celestial Abode.

“Nova, do you know about a powerhouse named Sir Galileo that existed in ancient times?” Nova replied, “Never heard of him.

I've traveled the universe with Emperor Jabari and have heard of almost every famous and powerful living being.

However, I've never heard of anyone named Sir Galileo before.

'There are only two possibilities.

"One, is that this Sir Galileo isn't a well-known powerhouse.

'The alternative is that he isn't from the Primordial Age, but instead from the Ancient Heavenly Court Age or the Primeval Age.'" Hearing this, James looked at the Empress standing beside him.

The Empress did not disturb James seeing that he was deep in thought.

James pointed to a chair beside him and said with a smile, "Please don't hold back on my account.

Let's talk while seated." Hearing this, the Empress could not help but return his smile.

Her two shallow dimples appeared when her slender lips curved, giving her a very charming and sweet appearance.

She was the Empress of the country, yet an outsider was telling her to act freely.

The Empress turned to one of her attendants.

The attendant immediately walked over, took out a piece of cloth, and set it on the chair for the Empress to sit.

James asked, "Your Majesty, which age was the Sir Galileo you mentioned just now from? Is he from the Primordial Age, Ancient Heavenly Court Age, or the Primeval Age?" The Empress looked at him puzzledly.

The time periods James mentioned were unfamiliar to her.

She asked, "What do you mean? What is the Primordial Age, Ancient Heavenly Court Age, and Primeval Age?" This time, James was the one baffled by her question.
