The Almighty Dragon General Chapter 2561-'Are there still cultivators who aren't unaware of the different points in history?'

James thought for a bit and suggested, "How about you tell me about Sir Galileo and this world instead?"

The Empress replied, "I already told you many past records have been lost with time.

Very little information about Sir Galileo and this world still exists.

Moreover, most of them are only legends passed down by the older generations.

I can't say for certain how reliable they are.

All the existing records don't contain information about Sir Galileo or this world." "I see." James rubbed his chin.

After listening to their long stories, they were only legends in the end and were not necessarily true.

"Since you've saved our country, I'm very grateful to you, Sir.

Please let me know if there is anything you desire.

As long as it's within our country's capabilities, I'll definitely fulfill your request." James waved his hand and said, "I didn't save Sangria expecting a reward in return.

I was simply passing by and saw what had happened.

With that being said, I do indeed have a favor I'd like to ask of you." "Go ahead.

Please let me know what you'd like." The Empress looked at James expectantly.

James said, "If possible, could you help me find the whereabouts of two people using Sangria's intelligence network?" "Sure.

That wouldn't be a problem." Then, James drew Henrik and Qusai's portraits and handed them to the Empress.

The Empress ordered her servants to copy the portraits and dispatch people to quickly begin searching for them.

James suddenly asked out of curiosity, "By the way, are you human?" "Yes, I'm human.

Is there something wrong?" The Empress looked at James in bewilderment.

James asked, "Then, is there a seal in your body?" "A seal? What kind of seal?" The Empress was further confused by his question.

James was surprised by her answer.

He felt like this planet was very different from Earth, and the people here were isolated from the rest of the universe.

It seemed like they were clueless about anything that lay beyond their world.

James asked the question offhandedly, never expecting such a shocking response.

"Humanity is in a precarious state right now.

Elysian Seals were placed on every human's body, preventing any breakthrough in cultivation." James explained the situation.

The Empress chuckled and said, 'You've got a good sense of humor, Sir.

I've never heard of such a seal before.

I can assure you that I'm human and don't have a seal in my body like the one you've mentioned." "I see..." James was taken aback.

Their civilization had entered the Apocalypse Age, and Elysian Seals were placed on all humans throughout the universe.

The Heavenly Path was in control of the entire universe.

All humans, regardless of where they were in the universe, would have an Elysian Seal placed in their bodies.

Yet, why were there no seals on the humans on Planet Galileo? "Do you really not have one?" James looked at her in disbelief.

The Empress replied earnestly, "I really don't have one." "Haah." James took a deep breath.

What a weird and mystical place.

When he arrived on this planet, Sophie mentioned it was theoretically impossible for him to have reached this place and that a powerhouse must have interfered with the spatial passage.

'Who could the person who meddled with our passage be?' thought James.

The Almighty Dragon General Chapter 2562-Everything was so out of the ordinary.

What kind of place was this? Why did he arrive here in the first place? "You've already been in our country for half a month, Sir.

For your safety, you should leave as soon as possible.

You're going to die if you don't leave," the Empress earnestly reminded him.

James gently waved his hand and said, "It's fine.

I feel alright and don't believe in curses, nor do I think that something bad will happen to me." "Sigh." Since James insisted, the Empress could do nothing to dissuade him.

She had seen many others like him.

Many men on their planet refused to believe in Sangria's curse and would come to test it out themselves.

Eventually, all of them died.

James beamed at her.

"You don't have to worry about me.

Your Majesty.

I'll leave the moment I feel the slightest bit of discomfort here." Hearing James' reassurance, the Empress was relieved.

James stayed in Sangria Palace for the time being, waiting for the Empress' subordinates to acquire news about Henrik and Qusai.

At that moment, a discussion was happening in the main hall of Korinth Palace.

The Kingdom of Korinth was the strongest country on Planet Galileo.

It was a hegemony, occupying over half of Planet Galileo's territory.

Korinth was rich in resources and possessed the might to uphold their great ambitions.

To unify the world, they had to travel south and conquer another major country.

They would have to travel through Sangria in order to achieve this.

Only after destroying Sangria would they be able to continue heading down south to continue on their conquest of the world.

The main hall of the Korinth Palace was magnificent and extravagant.

A middle-aged man sat in the highest seat of the council.

He was slightly chubby and was about 150 years old.

He had slightly tan skin and exuded an intimidating aura.

He was the current Emperor of Korinth.

His name was Xandalous Korinth, also known as Korinth the Second.

All the country's civil and military officials were gathered in the main hall.

At that moment, the Grand Marshal of Korinth was reporting about the battle in Yantargh Canyon.

Bang! After hearing the Grand Marshal's report, Xandalous slammed his palms on the table and shouted furiously, "What are you doing, Jaziel? You withdrew your troops after you gained such a great advantage over the enemy?!" The Grand Marshal, Jaziel Wattmann, immediately prostrated himself.

"I had no choice but to retreat, Your Majesty.

The man that interfered was too strong, and I wasn't a match for him.

Had I continued to pursue Sangria's troops, not only would I have died, but our millions of soldiers would also be eliminated in one fell swoop." "Please calm down, Your Majesty." An old man in a robe holding a fly-whisk stepped forward.

He bowed slightly and said, "It seems Sangria's is destined to survive for a while longer.

I suggest we hold off for now and reorganize our tactics." "Never!" Xandalous roared angrily, "We must take down Sangria as soon as possible to pave the way for our armies to head down South and conquer the world! This time, you shall lead troops and conquer Sangria! I'd like to see who still dares to stand in Korinth's way!" "Understood, Your Majesty." The chancellor did not dare to turn away his order.

Sangria had spies planted in Korinth.

As such, Sangria was immediately informed about Korinth's chancellor personally leading troops against them.

At that moment, the Empress was fraught with anxiousness in the Sangria Palace's main hall.

"It seems Korinth is determined to destroy Sangria this time.

They've sent their chancellor to lead troops against us.

He's a deadly force to be reckoned with.

What should we do?" The Empress swept her gaze over many of the beautiful officials and sighed deeply.

The female officials below her went silent.

"Your Majesty, how about we surrender to Korinth?" A woman stepped forward and suggested, "Korinth is much stronger than our country.

If we continue to fight, our country will also end up destroyed.

Surrendering will be much better than allowing our country to fall on its knees." "Never!" The Empress replied resolutely, "Our country has a history of more than ten thousand years.

Korinth has only been founded very recently in comparison.

Even if our country is destroyed, we'll never surrender to them!" "Your Majesty!" A female soldier walked into the hall and kneeled on one knee.

The Almighty Dragon General Chapter 2563—The Empress replied, "Go on." The female soldier replied, "Your Majesty, Wushua's envoy, has arrived."

The Empress' face immediately lit up with joy, and she hurriedly said, "Invite her in right away."

Wushua was another powerful country on Galileo, and they were only slightly inferior to Korinth in terms of strength.

"Please come inside, Miss." Soon, a woman walked into the palace hall.

She was a beautiful woman wearing a white dress.

Her pretty face carried a sense of dignity and nobility.

She walked into the main hall and arrived before the Empress.

However, she did not kneel.

Instead, she said pompously, "Xianna Sadie, I'm an envoy from Wushua.

How dare you not personally welcome me?" The Empress smiled faintly in response and ordered her servant, "Please provide her a seat." Soon, someone brought a chair for the envoy.

Wushua's envoy sat down and crossed her legs.

The Empress smiled at her.

"Is there a reason Wushua has sent an envoy here to Sangria?" The envoy smiled disdainfully and said, "I'm here on behalf of our Majesty, Xianna.

His Highness has learned of Korinth's attempt to conquer Sangria some time ago and heard that they are planning to strike again.

"His Highness has stated he will send a large army to garrison Yantargh Canyon and assist Sangria in resisting the Korinthian Army if you agree to unite our countries through a political marriage."

The envoy explained the purpose of her visit.

The smile on the Empress's face immediately disappeared.

'Marry?' 'Impossible.' It was Sangria's long held tradition.

Any woman in Sangria was allowed to marry men from other countries.

The only exception to that was the Queen.

Women who married in different countries would also send their daughters back to Sangria, ensuring the country's legacy.

The Empress replied coldly, "Go back and tell your Emperor I'm never going to marry him, I won't abandon our country even if I have to go down with it.

Please leave at once." She expelled her guest.

"You'll agree to it sooner or later." The envoy did not stay a moment longer and quickly departed.

The civil and military officials in the main hall looked at each other blankly, and everyone sat in stunned silence.

Meanwhile, Xianna, the Empress of Sangria, began to contemplate deeply.

The main hall went silent.

After a while, one of the officials stepped forward and advised, "Your Majesty, this is a good opportunity for us.

Wushua is a powerful country.

If we gain their protection, our country will have a chance to survive this disaster."
"You're all dismissed." Xianna stood up, flapped her sleeves, and left the main hall.

For the past couple of days, James had been living within the palace.

Since he was Sangria's benefactor, he was allowed to walk freely around the palace and the city.

He was incredibly curious about the curse on Sangria and how it was able to kill off only men yet allow women to live unscathed in the country.

James wandered around for a few days but had not acquired any useful information.

He was slightly disappointed.

James returned to the palace's entrance with a cigarette in his mouth.

Seeing James' approaching, the guards at the palace entrance deliberately got on one knee to greet him.

James had grown accustomed to their respectful behavior and did not pay it much mind.

He leisurely walked into the palace and coincidentally bumped into the civil and military officials leaving the hall.

The officials were all attractive women.

Seeing James, they could not help but begin to talk about him.

"Why hasn't he left yet?" "Does he have a death wish?" "Hush! Keep your voices down.

He's Sangria's savior." The officials consciously avoided James.

"Mr. Caden." A voice called out for James.

Hearing the voice, James turned to the source and found it was the general he had rescued previously.

He looked at her and nodded gently.

"Yeah?"

The Almighty Dragon General Chapter 2564-James not only saved Sangria but also the life of this female general.

The general walked over and looked at James strolling leisurely.

She asked worriedly, "Why haven't you left yet, Sir?" Their journey to the Imperial Capital took more than ten days.

After arriving in the Imperial Capital, James stayed there for a few more days.

In total, James had already been in Sangria for about 20 days.

She was worried about James' safety, afraid he would be cursed and encounter misfortune if he did not leave soon.

James, on the other hand, was very calm about the whole situation.

He asked with a smile, "Is there really a curse on Sangria?" The female general nodded solemnly and said, "Yes, it's real.

Many men have come to stay in Sangria.

They didn't believe the curse existed.

Eventually, all of them were cursed and died inexplicably." She reminded James, "If there isn't anything else important for you to do here, please leave quickly."

James was very interested in the curse but found nothing unusual about the country.

He asked, "When the curse befalls someone, does anything unusual happen?" The female general shook her head and said, "I'm not sure.

All the men seemed normal before the curse occurred, and all of them died suddenly.”
“Alright.

I understand.” James nodded and bid farewell to the female general.

Later, he returned to the palace’s backyard where his temporary lodgings were.

James sat in the yard and contacted Nova who was in the Celestial Abode.

He explained the curse in Sangria and asked, “Nova, does such a weird place really exist in this universe?” “It’s possible.” Nova replied, “The universe is vast and boundless.

Many unfathomable things exist, and it’s not very unusual either.” “Speaking of curses, I suddenly thought of Curse Magic.

If I’m not mistaken, the curse here might be related to Curse Magic.” “What? It’s related to the Demon Race’s Curse Magic?” James was astonished.

Nova explained, “Curse Magic doesn’t just belong to the demons.

It simply happened that a powerhouse of the Demon Race obtained an incomplete version of the Curse Magic.

Then, it was slowly disseminated among the Demon Realm’s powerhouses.” “During the Primordial Age, a powerhouse obtained the incomplete Curse Magic and invited other powerhouses to study it together.

Therefore, many of the Demon Realm’s powerhouses more or less knew a little bit of Curse Magic.

Eventually, they taught it to their disciples, and it became more widespread in the Demon Realm.

“Curse Magic is very powerful and is a fearsome skill.

However, the Curse Magic that is known to the world merely is an incomplete version.

The complete version has been lost in ancient times.” Hearing this, James could not help asking, “Then why did you say the curse here is related to Curse Magic?” Nova went silent for a moment.

About a minute later, he replied, “Call it a lucky guess.” “Also...” “Hmm?” James responded.

Nova said, "When I accompanied Emperor Jabari in the past, we traveled all over the universe.

In a certain ruin somewhere, we unearthed some items from the Primeval Age and acquired some information." "What kind of information?" Nova spoke again, "During the Primeval Age, Seven Realms existed in the universe.

These Seven Realms were also the strongest planets in the universe.

However, there were still many other worlds that weren't that far behind the Seven Realms.

Back then, an invincible swordmaster went to one of the worlds in pursuit of a particular person.

However, the negotiations failed, and the world ceased to exist.

"From the information we've unearthed, this particular world was almost completely shattered by his sword attack.

However, a powerful person intervened and protected the world right before it was destroyed.

This person had the complete version of Curse Magic.

They used it to seal off the planet and successfully save it from destruction.

"Although the world was saved, the curse sealed it off.

Thus, powerhouses from outside the planet could not pass through the seal and reach this planet.

"Back then, Emperor Jabari had been searching for this sealed world throughout the universe.

However, he never found this world protected by the complete version of Curse Magic despite travelling to the far reaches of space.

'The situation on this planet is very similar to the information Emperor Jabari obtained.

Therefore, I suspect this world has existed since the Primeval Age, and the seal on this world from true Curse Magic."
