The Almighty Dragon General Chapter 4046

Dahlia was perplexed. She had lived for a long time and seen just as much. However, she could not determine whether James had something to do with the raid on their village.

Seeing her conflicted expression, James said, "You might not believe me now, but I'm sure time will prove my innocence."

Then, he took a deep breath and said, "With the Soul Race's strength, it'd have been simple for them to kill Karglain and the others. However, they wanted to capture everyone alive. Their goal is quite obvious. They want to use Karglain and the others to lure out more of your sect members in order to annihilate your members in one go. It's vital that you bring me to your sect's higher-ups as soon as possible."

"No way." Dahlia immediately refused.

"I've already made the mistake of trusting you once. I'm not going to repeat the same mistake. I'll believe you for now, but I won't take you to our headquarters. As a show of my gratitude, I'll spare you today. Goodbye."

After speaking, Dahlia turned and left.

"Get back here."

James raised his hand, and a powerful force emerged from his palm, forcefully dragging Dahlia back to him.

Even though James was injured, Dahlia was still far weaker than him.

"What now? Are you trying to kill me?"

Dahlia glared at James.

James shook his head and said, "No. How will I find the Heaven-Eradicating Sect's headquarters without you? This is of the utmost importance and is part of Thea's plan. There isn't any room for mistakes, so you must stay with me for now."

James raised his hand again, and several mysterious sigils floated out of them.

The sigils stuck onto Dahlia's body and immediately incapacitated her, preventing her from using her strength.

James proceeded to set up a formation around him to heal his injuries, paying her no mind. His body had been sliced by thousands of Sword Energies.

Although the external injuries had recovered, his internal injuries still required attention.

The power from Sword Energies ran amok within him, damaging everything they came into contact with.

Previously, he was in a tight spot and could not suppress the power on his own. Now that he was in a safe location, he urged all his strength to subdue the power in his body.

Then, he used his Chaos Power to expel it from his body. He quickly recovered from his injuries inside the time formation.

After James had healed himself, his brow knit tightly.

Just one of the Soul Race's cities was already this strong, meaning that the Soul Race in its entirety was terrifyingly formidable.

If the Ten Great Races united, then they would be almost unstoppable.

James took a deep breath and dispelled the time formation.

Dahlia was standing motionless in the same spot the entire time he was there.

James stood up and lifted the seal he placed on her.

After Dahlia was freed, she did not immediately leave or try to attack him. She simply glared angrily at James. Her gaze was piercing and felt like it bored deep into his soul. She was infuriated but knew she was powerless against James.

James looked at her and said calmly, "Don't glare at me that way. I already told you that incident had nothing to do with me."

Dahlia snorted and replied harshly, "Is that so? If it had nothing to do with you, then save my grandfather and the other villagers."

James frowned.

"I'm not strong enough to do that yet."

"Then, let me go.I'll figure something out myself," pleaded Dahlia.

She was anxious about her captured grandfather.

James immediately rejected her suggestion, saying, "I can't do that.You'll have to stay by my side until you trust me enough to bring me to your sect's headquarters."

Dahlia was his only hope right now, so he refused to let her leave.Otherwise, it would be incredibly tough for him to find the Heaven-Eradicating Sect's headquarters.

"Y-You...!" Dahlia was livid.

"Let's go."

James strode forward briskly.

As soon as James took his eyes off her, Dahlia turned around and fled.She left the small world and returned to the Chaos.

Just when Dahlia thought she had escaped to safety, a figure flashed before her and blocked her path.

James looked at her and clicked his tongue.

"It's impossible to escape from me.I can immediately locate you, no matter where you run.If you want to save your grandfather, then come with me.Also, pass me all of the intelligence networks connected to the Soul Race."

When he mentioned saving Karglain, Dahlia was thrilled. She asked, "Do you have a way to save him?"

"Not yet. Let's head back to the Soul Realm first."

James turned around and left for the Soul Realm.

After a moment's hesitation, Dahlia followed closely behind James.

Soon, the two arrived outside the Soul Realm.

In the Chaos outside of the Soul Realm, James looked at the big prosperous world before him and said, "Your soul's aura stands out too much.

Anyone ranked above you will be able to sense you're a human.

If you enter as is, you'll be found out before even getting close to the Soul Race's core regions."

"Then what should I do?"

"I'll teach you a cultivation method that can help hide your soul aura," suggested James to Dahlia.

While in the Ecclesiastical Restricted Zone, James studied countless Supernatural Powers left behind by Acmeans.

All of them were powerful Supernatural Powers made by the Human Race.

Among them were also profound cultivation methods capable of hiding one's soul aura.

"Okay."

Dahlia agreed without any hesitation.

After the battle in the Primordial Realm, the status of the Human Race in the Greater Realms had fallen sharply.

Most of the Human Race's powerhouses had died, and their fortunes were lost.

The Human Race today never inherited the supreme Supernatural Powers of their ancestors.

James raised his hand and pointed his finger at Dahlia's forehead.

Suddenly, information about the cultivation method began to flow into her mind.

Dahlia sat down in a lotus position and began processing the information.

Then, she began to cultivate accordingly.

James set up a time formation around her body to give her more time to cultivate.

After that, James also sat in a lotus position in the Chaos, thinking about a way to save Karglain and the other humans.

In the face of the mighty Soul Race, he was powerless.

His only option would be to infiltrate the Hopeless City and use the Heaven-Eradicating Sect's intelligence network to dig up information about Karglain and the other captives.

Only after he understood the situation better could he properly formulate a plan to rescue them.

Dahlia was a quick learner, and she expediently mastered the cultivation method James gave her.

After successfully learning the cultivation method, Dahlia used it to hide her soul aura.

The Soul Race would not be able to detect her soul aura while she was in their territory, making it much easier to move around.

"Thank you." Dahlia expressed her gratitude.

After James passed her the cultivation method, her trust in James was slightly restored.

The Heaven-Eradicating Sect's members could easily move about in the Greater Realms without having to worry about being caught if she could share it with them.

"It's no big deal."

After replying to her, James altered his appearance. He turned from a handsome young man into a portly man.

"The Soul Race already knows what we look like, so we'd better put on a disguise," said James.

"Alright." Dahlia also changed her appearance.

After the two adopted disguises, they boldly entered the Soul Realm.

James and Dahlia returned to the Soul Realm and arrived outside the Hopeless City.

The Hopeless City was heavily guarded that day.

Many guards from the Soul Race were stationed outside the city gate.

In front of the gate stood a three-meter-high green boulder with mysterious inscriptions carved onto it.

"Wait."

Dahlia immediately stopped James.

James turned behind and asked, "What's wrong?"

Dahlia pointed at the green boulder outside the city gate and said, "Do you see that green boulder?"

James looked in the direction she pointed, nodded, and said, "Yeah. What's wrong with it?"

Dahlia said, "That's a magical treasure created by the Ten Great Races. It's specifically used to identify the aura of humans. Once it detects a human, it will react strangely. It also emits a light beam that can sense humans."

Hearing this, James took a few steps backward and cautiously stared at the green boulder.

Dahlia said, "Normally, it will only be able to tell that we're humans when we get close to it. Additionally, its range can be expanded by a powerhouse. The inscriptions on it will spread out and search for humans in the area. Seeing that they have it at the city gate, they must be trying to prevent humans from entering the city."

James frowned and asked, "Then what should we do?"

"How would I know?"

"Let's go somewhere else first," said James.

Now that there was a treasure at the city gates capable of perceiving one's soul aura, it might be able to recognize him as a human even though he had concealed his aura.

"Alright." Dahlia nodded.

The two gave up on entering the city and quickly left the area, heading toward a mountain range outside the Hopeless City.

Then, they ascended one of the mountains.

After reaching the summit, the two restored their original appearances.

James stood on the mountain and scanned the prosperous city in the distance. He frowned and thought deeply.

Dahlia spoke worriedly, "When the Soul Race captured Grandpa and the other villagers, they didn't do it to execute them. They're going to try and lure out more of our sect's members."

James turned to her and asked, "Does your sect have any other bases in the Soul Realm?"

Dahlia nodded and said, "Yeah. We have quite the amount. However, the Soul Race were enraged after Bruce killed the son of one of their elders. In retaliation, they dispatched all of their forces to look for our hideouts. They found some of our bases and completely destroyed them. Our village was one of the very few that was still standing. In the end, they still ended up captured."

James thought for a moment and said, "Our only option is to sneak into the Hopeless City and try to get more information about the situation."

"...But how are we going to manage to sneak in?" fretted Dahlia.

James shook his head, unable to devise a plan.

Since there was a treasure at the city gates capable of detecting humans, they must also have similar treasures inside the city.

Even if they snuck in, it would be hard to do anything without revealing themselves.

Suddenly, James remembered the Ursas' power.

Their power was capable of imitating any other kind of power.

If he could learn it, then he could use it to mimic other races' soul auras and would be able to explore the Hopeless City freely.

Previously, the Ursas had taught their Signature Power to the Omnipotent Lord's subordinates.

James never expected to land himself in a situation where he needed their powers.

"What a pain in the *ss."

James rubbed his temples frustratedly, then turned to Dahlia.

"I think we need to consult your sect leader on this matter."

“He won’t help you. When the sect was founded, he made a rule forbidding our members to rescue members who were taken captive by the enemy. This was to prevent unnecessary sacrifice that would result from a rescue mission,” said Dahlia as she shook her head.

Since Dahlia insisted she could not bring him to meet the leader of the Heaven-Eradicating Sect, James had no choice but to do things on his own.

However, rescuing Karglain and the others was not going to be an easy job.

Even entering the Hopeless City was a problem, let alone trying to rescue them.

James sat on a boulder on the mountaintop and stared at the Hopeless City in the distance.

After a while, James asked, “How strong is the Hopeless City?”

Dahlia replied, “It’s one of the Soul Race’s primary cities. Their City Lord is Hutchin Halpin. He’s from the Soul Race’s royal family and is also an elder. He’s extremely formidable and has surpassed the Macrocosm Ancestral God Rank. He’s a Quasi Acmean.

“There are many powerhouses in the Hopeless City. As far as I know, there are three Quasi Acmeans and several Nine- Power Macrocosm Ancestral Gods.”

Dahlia shared what she knew with James.

Hearing how strong the Hopeless City was did nothing to assuage James’ worries.

At the moment, he was only able to take on Nine- Power Macrocosm Ancestral Gods. He stood almost no chance against a Quasi Acmean.

Unfortunately, there were three of them in the Hopeless City.

“To rescue your kin, we’ll need to devise a plan to outsmart these people,” James decided.

He thought for a brief moment and said, “Tell me your contacts inside the Hopeless City. I’ll try to sneak in and figure out the situation from there. You need to stay right here. If I get caught, don't worry about me and escape at the first sign of trouble. I'll find my own way to escape."

Dahlia looked at James with a serious expression.

Then, she said, "Our sect has many intelligence agents, but they're not that strong.

Most of them work as servants in the mansions of major families or are cleaners in brothels.

"To contact our intelligence personnel, you'll need a code. Each of them is trained by a different person and they all have different codes." I don't know who the intelligence personnel inside the Hopeless City are, but I know there are a few of them there. The secret code is for you to ask them 'Do you want a man? *. If they're one of ours, they'll reply that question affirmatively."

James looked at Dahlia and chuckled.

Dahlia blushed and burst out, "What's so funny?!"

"N-Nothing."

James composed himself and asked, "Who are your contacts? I'll find a way to enter the city, get in touch with them, and investigate the current situation in the Hopeless City."

"Their names are..."

Dahlia listed the names of all the intelligence personnel from the Heaven-Eradicating Sect posted in the Hopeless City.

"Alright, got it."

After James learned their identities, he immediately stood up and reminded Dahlia, "Remember what I told you. Leave right away if I get captured."

After speaking, he turned and headed off.

"Wait," Dahlia called out to him.

"Yeah?"

James turned around and looked at her.

Dahlia said, "My contacts are all working in dismal conditions. Please be careful when contacting them, and avoid situations that will expose their identities at all costs. Once their identities are exposed, it's over for them."

"Alright. I understand."

James nodded, then disappeared from the mountaintop in the next moment.

The Almighty Dragon General Chapter 4050-James appeared outside the Hopeless City once more. He was not in a hurry to enter the city and unleashed his Divine Sense to survey the surroundings.

Hopeless City was one of the Soul Race's core cities, so it was protected by a powerful formation.

Usually, the formation would be inactive, but it was activated today.

When the formation was activated, every other entrance would be closed, making the main city gate the only way into the city.

Outside the city gate lay a treasure that could discern a target's aura.

If James were to get too close, it would scan his soul aura and identify him as a human.

It was created by the Ten Great Races to weed out and kill humans.

James observed the situation outside the city gate from a distance.

Seeing how heavily fortified the city was, he began feeling anxious. He hid outside the city, waiting for an opportunity.

A few days later, James was still in his initial hiding spot and had not moved.

A 180-centimeter-tall man in a black robe suddenly walked toward the city. He held a knife in his hand, and dragged its blade across the ground, leaving marks behind.

A powerful aura erupted from his body, immediately attracting the guards' attention. Right after, thousands of guards rushed over to him.

"It's...him?"

James, who was still concealed from afar, was surprised to see the man approaching the city gate. He was none other than Bruce, who had slaughtered a prodigy of the Soul Race some time ago. He stood near the city gate and unleashed his intense aura. He slowly raised his big knife, pointed it at the guards ahead of him, and demanded, "Bring your City Lord here, I want to speak to him!"

Swoosh! A ray of light suddenly shone on the ground.

The Hopeless City's Lord, Hutchin, appeared from within it.

When he saw Bruce outside the city gate, his face immediately turned black.

"I've been searching for you, but you took the opportunity to hand yourself over to me.

"Surround him! I want him captured alive."

The thousands of guards rushed out and immediately surrounded Bruce.

"Haha!"

Bruce burst out laughing as he looked at the guards.

"I came here with the resolve that I wouldn't leave alive."

After killing the Soul Race's prodigy, Bruce escaped to a safe location.

However, he learned that his village chief and the villagers had been apprehended.

In the end, he showed himself in order to rescue them.

The village chief and the others were captured because he acted of his own accord.

If he had not killed Soul Race's prodigy, he would not have angered the Soul Race and his village would have been spared.

“I’m the one responsible for murdering your prodigy.

This has nothing to do with my village chief.”

Bruce said, “The village chief and the others have been living in seclusion in a small village within the Soul Realm. They have never done anything to oppose the Soul Race. Let them go. I’ll bear the consequences of my actions.”

Hutchin snorted disdainfully.

“Do you think you’re in a position to be setting conditions?”

At that moment, Bruce’s aura sky rocketed and dispersed to form a terrifying magnetic field.

The guards’ faces became distorted once they faced Bruce at his full strength.

“You’re a Quasi Acmean?”

Hutchin stared at Bruce in disbelief.

James also felt the aura from afar and was also slightly surprised.

From what James had heard, Bruce was a prodigy, but he had only reached the peak of a Nine-Power Macrocosm Ancestral God.

He had not yet reached the Quasi Acme rank.

James looked intently at Bruce.

Soon, he understood what was happening.

Bruce’s aura was very unstable, and inconsistent.

He had sacrificed his own Blood Essence and soul to forcibly reach the Quasi Acme Rank.

Although he was strong temporarily, he would be incapacitated after the battle.

Even if he survived, he would lose his cultivation base and become crippled forever.

“This guy doesn’t even care for himself.He is willing to sacrifice himself to save them.”

James could not help but feel worried for Bruce.
