Chapter 721 Under everyone's gaze, James pulled out the Blade of Justice.

He looked at the Blade of Justice and pointed it at the Emperor.

"What?"

The masses were shocked by his actions.

The Emperor was stunned. His heart palpitated as cold sweat beaded his forehead.

After a few seconds, he calmed down and shouted, "What is the meaning of this, James? You're pointing your weapon at me. Are you implying that you want to kill me?"

James smiled. "Emperor, you're overthinking this. I was just casually waving it around."

He was holding up the Blade of Justice, which weighed more than five kilograms. His arm had gone weak, and his face gradually turned pale as beads of sweat formed on his forehead. Wielding the Blade of Justice took all his strength.

He reluctantly put it down.

Many sighed in relief. Henry looked at everyone again. "I've said everything I needed to."

James stood up with the Blade of Justice and slowly walked toward the courthouse's main hall with countless cameras pointed at him.

There was a place for the sword at the front of the main hall. When the Black Dragon Army lacked a commander, the Blade of Justice had no master and had always been safeguarded here.

James approached the place, turned around, and looked at the people behind him. His gaze stopped on the Emperor, and he smiled. "One day, I'll come back here to pick up the Blade of Justice and take the lives of those who deserve to die."

Hearing this, the Emperor's heart skipped a beat. He maintained a calm composure and thought to himself, 'I'm afraid you'll never have the chance.

James put down the Blade of Justice. Then, he looked at the countless jurors and asked, "May I go now?" "Yes," the Blithe King replied.

James raised his legs and began to leave step by step.

Many cameras captured this scene.

James' back was slightly hunched, and he no longer had the appearance of a war god. Instead, he looked like an old man on the brink of death. He walked out of the courthouse.

Many people were gathered outside.

These people came to witness James' sentence, but no one imagined that it would come to this result

Seeing the fatigue on James' face, everyone went silent. They used to see him as a dangerous tiger and a threat to society.

Chapter 722 No one expected him to be a national hero who sympathized with the poor and dedicated his life to protecting the nation. A person like him ended up with such a miserable fate.

Thousands of people gathered outside the courthouse. All of them lowered their heads in silence. Many women secretly wept for him.

"James...."

A voice came from behind him. James turned around and saw Henry chasing after him.

Henry approached him and asked, "Where are you going, James?"

James raised his hand weakly and patted Henry's shoulder, saying, "I appreciate you. You don't need to worry about my affairs anymore. Go back to the Southern Plains. Someone needs to be there to manage the hundred and fifty cities. Don't let the Southern Plains fall into chaos."

"But, you..." James waved his hand and interrupted Henry.

"Don't worry. I'll be fine. I'll take this opportunity to have a really good rest. I'm exhausted. Incredibly exhausted."

After pushing Quincy away, James' stumbled and toppled over again. Fortunately, he managed to balance himself.

He straightened up his back and roared.

"I've conquered battlefields and been through the fire! What is mere parasitic venom?!!"

His face was pale but had great fortitude and an unyielding spirit radiating from him. Relying on his strong beliefs, James straightened his body and advanced step by step. Media reporters chasing after him did not miss the chance to film this sight. He stood tall and straight. This was the Guardian of Sol! Seeing this sight, the whole country burst into tears. "We all wronged him!" "He has a Black Dragon card with an endless fortune to spend. Still, he dedicated himself to the people. He created the Transgenerational Group to earn money and give back to us."

"He is our War God, our national hero!"

"Twenty-eight countries compensated nine trillion dollars, but he distributed millions to the Black Dragon Army." "Yeah, they guard the border and protect Sol, but their families struggle to make a living in the country."

Everyone fell silent upon seeing James' ragged figure. Everyone with a conscience began to reflect upon themselves.

James felt like an eternity had passed after finally walking through the cramped pathway. He was drained of his energy and blacked out, collapsing to the ground.

Chapter 723 The public trial that shook the whole nation was finally over. James' crimes were listed during the trial. However, the allegations were cleared off one by one.

As for accepting the bribes... James admitted to committing the crime. However, the money he acquired was distributed to the Black Dragon Army and used to establish the Transgenerational Group to give back the money to the commoners. Although it was illegal, he gained the support of the people.

The Black Dragon had a Black Dragon card and was not short on money. However, he still knowingly broke the law to give back to the country. After the public trial, James collapsed. No one knew why it happened. However, the public knew that from that moment onward, Sol had lost their War God and a great commander devoted to the country. During the public trial, James used all his strength to hold up the Blade of Justice and put it back in place. After leaving the courthouse, he walked through a path surrounded by people about two to three kilometers long. Once he got through the crowd, he collapsed on the ground. He remained unconscious for a long time.

James gradually regained consciousness and found himself lying on a bed with an uncomfortable ventilator over his face. He immediately wanted to take it off.

"Are you awake, James?" A feathery voice excitedly called out for him. James slightly turned to his side. A woman was sitting beside him. She was wearing a red dress that wrapped around her sexy figure. Her beautiful face lit up with joy. James nodded and stretched out his hand to remove the ventilator. Quincy quickly stood up and assisted him while saying anxiously, "You're extremely weak right now. You can't be moving around too much. Lie down and rest."

"You're in Capital Hospital. You passed out after the public trial and have been unconscious for one whole day," Quincy explained. Seeing James' current appearance, she choked up, and tears began to fall. James was leaning against the bed with a slightly pale face, and his voice sounded lifeless. "James, you're already in such a bad state. You shouldn't..." "Do you have any cigarettes?" "I-I'll

The doctors were baffled by James' illness.

They explained that James' body would continue to deteriorate. His cells and tissues would gradually die off from the phagocytosis of the virus. Ultimately, the normal cells in his body would be gone entirely, leaving only the virus cells.

This was a detailed diagnosis of James' body through modern medical technology. After hearing the results, everyone was in a daze and went completely silent. Quincy walked out of the ward. Many of them saw her but did not say anything.

However, Thea immediately stood up and walked toward the ward upon seeing Quincy. James' ended up like this because of her. He would never have ended up in this state if not for her being captured by the enemy and used as a pawn to threaten him. She entered the ward and saw the awakened James. She walked over to him and stood in front of the hospital bed.

Tears welled up in her eyes as she looked at him. With an apologetic and guilty expression, she said, "I'm sorry. I'm so sorry. It's all my fault." James raised his head with all his strength and looked at Thea.

Chapter 724 James gently shook his head.

He did not blame anyone. Even without Thea, the Emperor would have found another way to deal with him. If it was not her, it would have been someone else.

"By the way, are you alright? Are you feeling better?"

Thea shook her head. "I don't feel any discomfort and should be fine for the time being."

Hearing this, James felt relieved,

The Gu in Thea's body was not as vital as his, and she was not in immediate danger.

James was engrossed in his thoughts.

“James, your cigarettes,” Quincy’s voice sounded. James came back to his senses.

A cigarette was handed over to him and he reached for it. Quincy took out a lighter, then lit the cigarette for him. He took a drag on the cigarette, and satisfaction spread out on his pale face. The people outside came in one after another – Xara, Scarlett, Henry, Whitney, and the Elite Eight. They stood before the ward bed and watched James leaning back while enjoying his cigarette. After smoking, James looked at everyone and reprimanded, “What’s wrong with you guys? Why’re you all looking at me with such grim expressions? I’m not dead yet. Henry, hurry back to the Southern Plains to take control of the situation there.”

Henry said hesitantly, “How can I leave with you like this, James?” James waved his hands and said, “I’m fine. I won’t be dead any time soon.” Then, he looked at the Elite Eight and instructed, “You guys stay for the time being. Find a place to stay and wait for my instructions.” James already had a plan in his heart. Blake was a dangerous criminal. He left the nation with no choice but to dispatch hundreds of elites to capture him.

James no longer had the title of Black Dragon or the Dragon King. He had no authority to release Blake.

There was only one option left-breaking him out. Before that, he had to visit Sol’s supreme commander, and on top of that, he would need a lot of help from Sol’s top officials. James knew Blake was imprisoned in the most heavily guarded underground prison. The Red Flame Army was responsible for safeguarding the prison. It would be impossible to break Blake out without the help of the supreme commander. Scarlett stepped forward and said, “What should I do now, James? The Transgenerational Group was forcibly disbanded, and the company’s money has been confiscated.” James waved his hands and said, “It’s alright, Scarlett. You’ve been working hard all this time. You can go back to Cansington and take a break for a while. I’ll reach out to you if I need you. However, I doubt that’ll be necessary.”

Chapter 725 Scarlett panicked. “I’ll die without your protection, James.” Scarlett was a grave robber. She and her companions robbed the Prince of Orchid Mountain’s ancient tomb.

A lot of buzz about the ancient tomb was spreading in the criminal world like wildfire. In the past, she was the Transgenerational Group’s chairman. Thus, no one came knocking on her door. Now that the Transgenerational Group had fallen, people from the underworld would surely be after her.

She would die if she returned now.

James’ face was pale as he replied weakly, “I can’t protect you with the way I am right now. How about you go to Cansington and look for the Blithe King? Ask him to arrange a position for you. He is one of the Five Commanders, and I’m sure no one will trouble you with him as your backbone.”

Since James had already devised a plan for her, Scarlett had no complaints. James glanced at Quincy and said, “You should also return to Cansington.”

“No.”

Quincy refused. At that moment, Thea returned with food she had bought from the hospital cafeteria. She overheard their conversation as she walked into the ward.

She was slightly taken aback but quickly recollected herself and walked over. “James, I got you some food.”

Smoke spread throughout the ward.

Gradually, he fell asleep.

After sleeping for some time, he opened his eyes in a daze. In front of him was a sexy woman with a gorgeous appearance. She was sitting on the edge of the bed, staring at him with big eyes. "What're you doing? Why're you back?". James sat up and frowned as he looked at Quincy sitting on the bed. "Didn't I tell you to go back? I don't need you to be worrying about me."

Quincy rolled her eyes and said mockingly, "Don't think too highly of yourself. The Transgenerational Group has collapsed, and I'll have no job if I go back. I simply think staying and developing in the Capital is better." Hearing this, James did not bicker with her. He laid back in bed and rested.

James was waiting for Gloom to arrive. He believed that Gloom would definitely come to him.

Time passed by minute by minute.

It was soon midnight. Quincy had fallen asleep in the ward.

At that moment, James sensed footsteps approaching.

Chapter 726 The footsteps were light.

Although James' health was declining, his senses had not been dulled.

He rolled off the bed and tip-toed out of the ward. He scanned the hallways and approached the staircase.

When he reached the staircase entrance, he immediately noticed a man dressed in a black coat and duckbill hat, deliberately covering up his appearance. The man leaned against the wall and waited for James to approach. "The King has requested for me to check on you. Are you alright?" a hoarse voice asked. James stood beside him. His body was unstable, and he had to resort to leaning against the wall to reduce his burden.

James wore a grim expression as he explained, "My body is in a critical condition. I was poisoned with Gu. My body is weak and will slowly deteriorate until I'm completely paralyzed. I'll have to await my death in pain while bedridden." "Gu?"

Gloom was shocked.

"How can this be? Haven't these cultlike practices been destroyed a hundred years ago? How is it possible for anyone to be raising Gus?" James glanced at Gloom curiously. He seemed to be incredibly familiar with Gu. A hundred years ago, it seemed that many people raised Gus. "You seem to know a lot?" Gloom shook his head and said, "I don't know much about it. I only heard my teacher mention it before."

James muttered, "I know."

"He could tell I was poisoned with Gu at one place and claimed he had a way to get it out of my body. I'm confident he won't be a match for me once I recover."

“That’s not necessarily the case. You’re both at the pinnacle of martial arts and will be on par in a fight. A few years ago, the other participating elites had exhausted his strength before you took him on. Otherwise, you would never have beaten him.” “I’m not the James from a few years ago.”

James was sure of himself.

Hearing this, Gloom went silent. After a while, he asked, “What do you need me to do?” “I plan to break Blake out of prison. I need you to create an opportunity for me. After I get him out, I need you to use your connections to send him and the people assisting in the operation out of the Capital

James knew that Gloom had the ability to do so. Even if the Red Flame Army guarded the prison, he could accomplish such things. It was because he was the King’s subordinate and personal bodyguard. As long as Gloom showed a willingness to help, it meant that the king was on his side, and it would be easy to accomplish the prison break “Alright. I’ll relay the message to the King and contact you again.” Gloom lowered his hat and turned to leave.

James also walked back to the ward.

“Where did you go?” As soon as he entered the ward, he saw Quincy standing at the door with a suspecting expression.

Chapter 727

James was deeply absorbed in his thoughts.

He was processing the information Gloom had shared about the Gu raisers that existed a hundred years ago.

“They wanted to control the world with Gus?”

Quincy’s voice startled him. He raised his head and glanced at Quincy standing at the ward door. “How did you not even make a sound? Are you trying to scare me to death?”

“Where did you go?” Quincy looked at him suspiciously and walked out of the ward to scan the surroundings. Seeing no one outside, she walked back into the ward with her arms folded.

“It’s already so late. Who did you sneak out to see?” asked Quincy.

James yawned. Then, he walked to the hospital bed and muttered, “I’ve slept so long and felt a little stuffy, so I went for a walk.”

“Is that so?”

Quincy looked at him in disbelief.

James lay down and nodded. “Of course, what else could it be?”

“Fine.”

"It's venom." James corrected her.

Quincy was puzzled and asked, "Venom? What kind of venom?"

James did not know much about Gu and was unsure how to explain it to her.

In the end, he did not answer her question. Quincy also did not ask about it anymore and continued feeding him.

After the meal, she wiped James' lips with a tissue. Then, she took out a cigarette and passed it to him.

James waved and said, "I'm quitting. By the way, help me complete my discharge procedures."

"Discharge?" Quincy frowned. "Look at yourself right now. You can barely even walk. Where are you going if you don't want to stay in the hospital?"

James murmured, "I'm a doctor myself. I know my body very well. The hospital can't save me right now. I'm the only one capable of saving myself."

"That's true. You're a genius doctor. I'll go complete the discharge procedures for you."

Quincy nodded, turned, and walked out of the ward.

James laid back in bed and rested.

After lying down for a while, he fell asleep.

James was in a daze when Quincy returned after completing the discharge procedures. She even thoughtfully got him a wheelchair.

Chapter 728

She looked at the groggy James, pointed at the wheelchair, and said, "Get on."

James was amused and laughed. "Seriously? You're exaggerating my condition. I can still walk."

Quincy said sternly, "Don't be stubborn. Get on right now. The doctor said that your condition is an unprecedented one. You shouldn't move around unless absolutely necessary. The virus in your body is constantly absorbing your energy. Thus, the more you move, the more active the virus cells."

James nodded. The doctor's statement was similar to his conjecture.

He sat up from the bed.

Quincy quickly walked over and supported him onto the wheelchair. Then, she pushed James out of the hospital.

Outside the hospital...

Quincy asked, "Where are you off to?"

James scanned the bustling city. He was perplexed.

He felt that the city had no place for him, despite how large it was.

James sighed and replied, "Let's find a hotel for now, and we'll return to Cansington after a few days."

followed him downward.

Gloom swiftly slid down the pipes like gushing water, descending the building rapidly. He jumped from the eighth floor but landed on the ground almost instantly. Soon, his figure blended into the dark alleys.

"Impressive skills."

James took a deep breath in amazement.

Gloom was the King's personal bodyguard, after all. It was only natural for him to have extraordinary skills.

James was confident in his strength but knew he had no hope of winning against the mysterious Gloom. He would have to use his ultimate weapon, Crucifier, to stand a chance. against him.

James returned to the hotel room and took out the Crucifier.

It was in the form of a wire.

He tapped on the wire, which instantly scattered, turning into countless silver needles.

Then, he picked up the silver needles and gently squeezed them together. The scattered needles quickly combined and turned into a steel wire again.

"The Crucifier does not conform to modern physics. What are the secrets behind this weapon?"

James played around with the Crucifier and mumbled to himself.

He had acquired the Crucifier from a cave. His medical book briefly explained the methods to transform the weapons but did not mention the specific function of it.

James had been researching it over the years but had not found anything conclusive.
