

The Almighty Dragon General Chapter 7668

Chapter 7668

“What are you all staring at? Turn around!” Yaretzi snapped, waving at Xezal and the others.

Startled, they quickly turned away.

After a long moment, Thea gently pushed James back, her eyes brimming with tears. “Don’t leave me. Even if we die together, I fear separation more.”

James met her gaze, his voice unwavering. “Alright.”

There was no hesitation. No doubt. Just firm resolve.

Then, he raised his hand and summoned the Void Dao Realm.

“My love, I’ve recovered what was lost. Let’s take a gamble.”

Thea’s eyes widened in shock and excitement. “The Void Dao Realm... It’s finally back!”

“Wait,” James cautioned, quickly explaining the dangers of using it and the risk of triggering an alarm.

Even after hearing his warnings, Thea couldn’t help but hold it close, unwilling to let go. It had been too long. The Void Dao Realm meant too much to her.

At that moment, Yaretzi stepped forward. “The Void Dao Realm has returned, but I still haven’t regained my true self. This—”

“That’s not the real issue here,” James interjected, his gaze sharp. “The real issue is this: We only have one shot. Can we withstand the combined assault of Juniper’s present and future selves? This is the ultimate gamble. Not just for me and my wife—but for the future of every living being.”

Yaretzi nodded. “You’ve fought Juniper’s past self. How strong was he?”

James narrowed his eyes. “Stronger than Yefrenes when he entered the Haleth Realm.”

Yaretzi's expression shifted. "The Creator God, Yefrenes, entered the Haleth Realm against the natural order. His power was halved upon crossing the innate gate. Even so, he was second only to Frona. If Juniper's past self had more than half of Yefrenes's strength, then his present and future selves must be on par with Yefrenes at full power."

She hesitated, then added, "If they join forces, their strength might even rival Frona's peak."

At that moment, Frona's voice echoed in James's mind.

"No," she said. "They're stronger than I was at my peak. Fueled by an immense number of living spirits and fighting within their own Dao Theory Realm, they are nearly invincible."

James sucked in a sharp breath.

This was why he had been so cautious. Throughout his journey, he had faced countless powerful enemies—but never anything as dangerous as this. Never foes this incomprehensibly strong.

He had confidence. He had fighting spirit. He was never short on strategy or wisdom. But this time, failure wasn't an option. He simply couldn't afford to lose.

"If we're going to take this risk, we need a solid plan," Thea said firmly. "We should break it down into three steps."

James and Yaretzi exchanged glances, momentarily stunned.

Xezal and the others leaned in closer, awaiting Thea's insight.

Because in a battle of this magnitude, careful planning was everything.

If they simply charged forward recklessly, they would be walking straight into their own destruction.