

Almighty DG 835

Chapter 835

"I shouldn't have blamed him."

Delilah looked at the grave with sorrow upon her face and spoke softly, "I always thought he was a good-for-nothing. I didn't dare mention him in front of others because I was afraid of being laughed at, but... I didn't expect him to be a hero."

Tears started to gather at the corner of her eyes while she talked.

When she realized James was the Black Dragon at the Cansington medical conference, she was overcome with emotion.

The Black Dragon was her father's superior. That was why she put her own safety aside to work as James' assistant, despite knowing she could have died.

She had planned to ask James about her father after the conference.

However, James had already left before the medical conference was over.

"Can you... Can you tell me more about him?"

"Sure." He nodded.

In front of the grave, he spoke about Travis and some of his deeds.

"I remember once when I was drinking with him, he said he had a daughter," Henry recalled. He said he felt terrible to have failed her. He was completely drunk at the time and bawling his eyes out. I'd never seen General Kimberly cry like that before."

While listening to the stories, Delilah started to cry.

her. "My condolences. Still, you should be proud to have a the three of them. Thank you. Thank you it's raining. We should go,"

"Okay."

coins on the headstone, they retraced their

also staying in Southern Plains

you planning to do

few more days, then

help with, just ask," James said.

but we'll say our goodbyes here," said

turned, and got

drove them back to

the Black Dragon

Soon, evening arrived.

the men are on standby and awaiting your orders. When at the time. It was just after five in the evening. "We're not

"Understood."

the military

Dragon Army soldiers. They were and saw Ronn. He approached him and asked, "What's the matter? Is there straight, gave a military salute, and said, "I'm not certain, General Grant. I'm simply following orders