

The Almighty Dragon General Chapter 947

On the cliff...

Thea's eyes frequently glanced down the cavern as she waited impatiently for James and Maxine to return.

After checking for the umpteenth time, she finally saw James climbing back up and excitedly chirped, "How did it go, Honey?"

James shook his head sadly.

"This cavern is bottomless, and the heat was searing hot down there. We couldn't go any deeper. I doubt grandpa would've survived."

Maxine climbed up after him.

James sighed and said dejectedly, "We're done here. Let's go back."

Since they could not find him, James did not intend to waste another second in this cavern.

Based on what he and Maxine had gleaned from the clues, he had a rough idea of what might have happened.

His grandfather was most likely still alive. He was still slightly dubious about Maxine's theory.

James firmly believed that his grandfather would not bring harm him, or Thea.

The only thing he was unsure about was why his grandfather needed to come up with so many elaborate plots.

James turned around and left.

Thea followed after him.

them leave, the accompanying

a walkie-talkie and instructed

Soon, the helicopters returned.

later, everyone was brought back to Inside a military barrack...

James and asked, "Going back so

"Yeah." James nodded.

got to rush back to Cansington as soon as possible to sighed and said, "I've heard about the Capital. As a member of the Cadens and the Dragon King that killed the out his hand and thumped it in you. I'm sure you'll be bitterly at that's enough. Let's drink again when we have a

his farewells, he turned around and boarded the private plane the Centurion

Maxine boarded after took off and disappeared into the

James asked, "Thea,

no idea. Grandpa didn't

and worry. They're both safe and

in Thea's

in worry since he

He sighed deeply.

situation, and he already had a hard time trying to

in Cansington, they would be