Chapter 1026: Chapter 1025: The Smacks (part one)

"I'm fine. The more he rejects me, the more my affections grow," Louisa said, as she tried to maintain her dignity. She was strong in her determination to win Kevin over at the same time.

"Are we still following them?" Kevin's rage made Claire timid. She had never seen him so angry before.

"Claire, I need your help. I fell in love with your brother at first sight a few years ago. Then I went abroad for further studies. I thought he would still be single when I came back. But unexpectedly, he got married." Louisa was regretful. She could have already become Kevin's wife if she hadn't gone abroad.

"Don't worry, Louisa. I'll help you get my brother," Claire promised. Her hatred for Leena reached a summit and led to her immediate consent to Louisa's request.

"Thank you! I'll be so grateful to you if I become your sister-in-law." Louisa looked at Claire earnestly, trying to convince her that she meant what she said.

"I guess you have to be." Claire giggled. She always thought that only a woman with a similar or better family background deserved to be her sister-in-law.

A sly twinkle flashed across Louisa's eyes. Claire's naivety was beyond her expectations. 'What a waste it would be if I didn't take advantage of it?' she thought.

Leena had no intention of waiting for Kevin to follow her, so she quickened her pace. It was a long while before he finally caught up with her.

"Leena, why are you walking away in such haste? I almost lost you." Kevin had been nervous when she sneaked out of his sight. His forehead was sweating.

"I didn't want to be in your way. I left so you could have a good time with your sister and Louisa." Leena sounded a little jealous. She would rather be anywhere else than stay with those two women.

"Sweetie, are you jealous?" Kevin smiled, gazing at Leena's pout. Recalling how those plump lips had kissed him, a wave of happiness surged into his heart.

"Jealous? Why should I be jealous! Don't be ridiculous." Leena pursed her lips. In her view, if she and Kevin were meant to be together, no one could separate them; and if they were not, she couldn't force it. Therefore, she let nature take its own course. She had chosen to stay away from Louisa and Claire, not because she was worried that she wasn't as charming as Louisa, but because she couldn't stand Claire's verbal attacks on her.

"I am glad to hear that you are not. Let's go sit over there." Kevin held her by the wrist and took her to a row of benches.

"Kevin... I want to eat ice cream." There was a cabin not far from them. Leena fixed her eyes on it.

"Ice cream? You'll get sick from eating ice cream on such a cold day." Kevin furrowed his eyebrows in concern.

"I don't care. Are you going to buy me one or not?" Leena raised her head to look at him with sparkling eyes, full of expectations to which no man had the heart to say no. Neither did Kevin. As if hypnotized by the spell in her eyes, Kevin started to move toward the cabin.

Leena, you deliberately tried to separate my brother from us, didn't you?" Claire asked her in anger as soon as she found Leena. It had taken her and Louisa a while to find them.

"Be reasonable. Your brother is a grown man. Nobody can take him away from you, if he doesn't want to be," Leena said indifferently while sitting on a bench. Since Claire refused to appreciate her good intentions, she didn't see the need for her to put up with her insults anymore.

"Hmph! Of course. Leena, get yourself a mirror. If you really think it is possible for a low-class woman like you to manipulate someone like Kevin, you are out of your mind." Louisa narrowed her eyes at Leena, contempt written all over her face. The carefree air around her bugged Louisa.

"Then in your opinion, who can manipulate him? You?" Leena had quite a mouth if need be.

"I don't think it would be a problem if it is Louisa. She is much better than you. You are nothing but a fake." According to Claire, there was no way the painting Leena gifted his father for his birthday could be genuine. It must have been a fake she bought to deceive her father. It pissed her off just to think of it.

"Claire, you can hate me, but don't insult me. If you really hate me so much, why didn't you just pick a different path? You could have avoided seeing me here." Leena wasn't weak. She had put up with Claire because she was Kevin's sister. But since Claire didn't appreciate her friendly gestures and kept pushing her, Leena didn't see the point for further endurance on her part.

"Huh. So this is who you really are. You pretend to be so docile, polite, and sweet in front of my mother. Aren't you tired yet?" Claire glared at Leena as she gnashed her teeth, surprised to see the weak lamb suddenly grow sharp teeth.

"I am who I am in front of your mom, because she is kind to me and I respect her. However, with you, I've had enough. I have always put up with you, but this is enough. Don't push me any further." Leena gave her a sneer. She never picked on anybody, but she wasn't a wuss either.

"I beg your pardon? You put up with me? That's rich. Come on, don't blow your own trumpet. Besides, just because you married my brother doesn't mean you are my sister-in-law all the time," Claire yelled, instantly drawing attention of the passers-by. Noticing the gazes from others, she lowered her voice a little.

"As you said, I married your brother. It is your brother whom I am going to spend the rest of my life with, so why should it bother me whether or not you like me?" Leena laughed sarcastically. She had given Claire many chances to be friends with her, but in return Claire threw them away and bad-mouthed her again and again. Now, Leena would do nothing but be ruthless to her.

"Hah. So you really think you can spend the rest of your life with Kevin? You wish! The game is not over yet. Let's wait and watch." To Louisa's ears, every word Leena just said sounded like she was gloating to her. She hated Leena's guts.

"Okay. Let's wait and watch." Leena smiled and stood up. She decided to look for Kevin instead of wasting more time with these women.

"Stop! I'm not done yet." Louisa reached out her hand and held Leena by the wrist. She wouldn't let her go until she got out something satisfactory from her.

Chapter 1027: Chapter 1026: The Smacks (part two)

"Get your hand off me! Don't push me!" Leena turned back and snapped. She didn't care who Louisa's father was. She was an independent career woman who didn't rely on anyone, including Louisa's family. She wouldn't grovel to them.

"Are you going to hit me? Claire, do you see the kind of woman she is?" Louisa raised her eyebrows, not afraid at all if Leena hit her. She used to be as rebellious as a gangster before she went abroad.

"Yes, I do. I'll tell my parents what a horrible person she really is and she won't be able to be a part of my family any longer." Claire jutted up her chin with a complacent look on her face, as if imagining how embarrassed Leena would be once her parents found out who she really was.

Leena looked up at the sky and let out a long breath. They were in a public place. She didn't want to make a scene. But these two women didn't seem to let her go easily.

"Leena, at the end of the day, you are nothing more than a cheap bitch. You know Kevin doesn't love you and that he is in love with someone else, but you won't leave him anyway. Don't you have any shame at all?" Louisa said, viciousness in her eyes. She knew her words would provoke Leena. That was exactly what she expected. She wanted to see how Kevin would react when he saw her getting attacked by Leena.

Slap! Leena turned around and smacked Louisa hard. It stung, but as she had expected, Kevin saw the slap and stopped in his steps, a stunned look on his face. She thought the pain was well worth it.

"Oh my God. Leena, how can you be such a savage woman? Even if we are wrong to follow you and my brother, you could have just told us not to follow; how could you hit Louisa?" Claire hadn't seen the smack coming. She was astonished because Leena had always seemed to be such a sweet girl. However, as soon as Claire saw her brother hastening toward them, she started accusing Leena.

"Why should I put up with someone who has a potty mouth? Louisa, you deserve it." Leena looked at Louisa disdainfully. She hated anybody who used the word 'bitch'. Louisa had touched a nerve. When she turned back, she saw Kevin standing in front of her with an ice cream in his hand. He seemed shocked. Leena moved her lips and attempted to explain everything, but she couldn't say a word and walked past him. The ice cream dropped on the ground as she walked by and touched his arm by accident. Her heart quivered and her eyes watered when she heard the ice cream drop, yet she didn't stop and walked on. 'This is what those two women wanted,' she thought. They had been trying to ruin her date with Kevin and make trouble for her. Now they got what they wanted. They must be gloating.

"Kevin, have you seen how horrible she is? We were just talking to her and she hit Louisa for no reason!" Claire complained. At the same time, she was amazed at how clever Louisa was. She understood that she was trying to cause misunderstanding between Kevin and Leena, but Claire was surprised that Louisa was willing to hurt herself to achieve her purpose.

"I believe Leena. She wouldn't have done that if you two hadn't crossed a line." As much as Kevin was shocked to see the scene unfold, he knew Leena and believed in her. She wasn't a bully. On the other hand, Louisa and Claire had been provoking her all this time.

"What? Kevin, you saw what happened. How can you still trust that woman? Why are you always on her side? Did she drug you or something?" Claire gaped at Kevin before she uttered the words. She had thought he would come to his senses and seek justice for her and Louisa. Instead, he was calm, as if nothing could be more natural and fairer than a slap in Louisa's face.

"What 'that woman'? She is your sister-in-law. Show some respect! Louisa, no matter who is right, and who is wrong, since my wife hit you, I apologize to you on her behalf. She shouldn't have done that no matter how angry she was." Kevin sounded impartial and composed. In actuality, he was worried about Leena. She had walked off in a rush.

"That mean woman isn't my sister-in-law! She never will be, no matter what you say!" Claire raised her voice willfully. She was frustrated to see her brother had chosen to believe Leena instead of her. He had seen her slap Louisa, still he thought it was their fault. How could he be so biased in her favor? He was her own brother. How could he treat her like this? She wouldn't take the blame.

Slap! It was so loud. This time it wasn't in Louisa's face, but in Claire's. Suddenly, silence fell among them, as if even time had forgotten to tick by. Touching her stinging cheek, with her eyes wide open and face deathly pale, Claire stared at Kevin in shock, as if the man standing in front of her was a total stranger instead of her own brother. All her life, she had been the princess around whom even the world seemed to revolve. But now, her own brother had hit her for another woman.

Kevin, you hit me, for her! Is she more important to you than your own sister?" Claire asked loudly, biting her lips. The pain in her face aggravated as she spoke. She frowned and promised herself that she would make Leena pay for this sooner or later.

"Claire, you should know why I hit you. It was not only because of your rude remarks, but also because your conduct is unbearable for anyone with a conscience." Kevin closed his eyes in disappointment. His heart ached as he hit her. After all, she was his sister, no matter how wrong she was. He turned to glance at Louisa and said,

Louisa, you'd better have come here just because you wanted to catch up with Claire. Once I find out that you have an ulterior motive, I'll deal with you too, even if you are the daughter of the Commander."

"Kevin, am I so unworthy in your eyes? I am the one who was hit, not Leena. Even though she is your wife, you should be impartial to us instead of protecting her." With her hand on her face, Louisa thought of giving up. On the other hand, she felt she was unable to take this kind of outcome peacefully. But Kevin's words were harsh. If she kept pestering him, it would seem humiliating.

I didn't say she was right to hit you. But I also know there must have been a reason. And you two know better than anyone else what the reason was." Kevin didn't believe Leena raised her hand for no reason. She had always been rational. They must have said something to irritate her.

"It is easy to find a stick to beat a dog. You just want to find something to blame us for, don't you? Do you really think you know her? Wake up! Ask around. We all saw how malicious that woman was just now. Believe it or not, nobody provoked her. If you really think it was our fault, then I am speechless, but I still have faith in justice." Louisa managed an innocent look on her face, as if she was the victim and Leena the guilty one.

Huh! Justice! I hope you understand what that word means." Kevin glanced at her coldly and turned away. He walked swiftly in the direction Leena had left, assuming that she was crying in some corner. He had seen her moist eyes when she passed him by.

Watching Kevin leave, Louisa bit her lips. The hatred in her eyes increased. She cursed inside, 'Leena, you are lucky this time, but pray for yourself, because your luck won't hold forever.

Chapter 1028: Chapter 1027: I Don't Want to Apologize (part one)

Leena kept trying to hold back her tears the entire way. Kevin had seen that she slapped Louisa. Now he must think she was malicious. However, she did not regret slapping that woman one bit. On the contrary, she felt relieved because she did not need to tolerate Claire and Louisa's provocations anymore. In any case, she had fallen out with them, hadn't she?

At that moment, she missed S city very much. She missed the people and her life there. She always felt like she should not have come here as her arrival was not welcomed. Although Shannon liked her very much, she knew that other people looked at her contemptuously last night at the birthday party. She hid in the garden because she did not want herself to face the embarrassing situation. It seemed that in today's society, everybody paid more attention to identity and background. If she was the daughter of a senior official, the treatment she received would be totally different!

Leena found a comparatively remote place and sat down. She would not envy others, no matter how high their statuses were. In her heart, she believed that what she owned was not inferior to others. She possessed a deep familial affection that could not be exchanged with any precious titles. Although her family was not a political one, everyone in it loved her very much.

Leena bit her lip. She wished she could hear Duke's voice. She took out her phone, but didn't dare to tap out his number. If she told Duke what had happened, she would cry. Duke already disliked Kevin. If he knew what had occurred, he would dislike Kevin more. That was certainly not what she wanted to happen. No matter how grieved she felt right now, she would not call up Duke.

After what happened, Kevin must be quite disappointed with her. Would he believe her? Or did he believe in Louisa? But it didn't matter anymore, did it? After all, she had done it, and now it was useless to regret it.

She took a slight breath, looking up at the sky and trying to hold back her tears. At the same time, she continued to comfort herself in her heart, 'Leena, it's okay. This is nothing serious. If you cannot stand such kind of grievance, how can you go on fighting in the future?'

Kevin looked for Leena everywhere. But no matter where he looked, he did not find her. It was inevitable for him to get a little anxious. It was also easy for his temper to flare up when he couldn't find someone. However, he continued to be calm, which was odd.

"Leena." Upon seeing her petite figure, Kevin quietly let out a breath of relief. He quickly ran over to her. Leena raised her head and glanced at Kevin indifferently. She lowered her head again. She knew Kevin came to question her and she was ready to receive his scolding.

"Well, do you not want to look at me? Or is there nothing you want to tell me?" Kevin looked down at her from a height. Although his tone was a little indifferent, he felt a little prickle in his heart when he saw her red eyes.

"If you want me to apologize to Louisa, then no. I won't do it," Leena said in a firm tone, lifting her head to gaze at him. Truthfully, she didn't think she did anything wrong today.

"Who said you had to apologize? I just want you to talk about the cause of what you did. Is that okay?" Kevin kneaded the line between his brows, feeling like he was unable to deal with this. But he could not leave the problem unresolved.

"Can I say no? I do not want to say yes. If Louisa really insists that I have to apologize, tell her that she can come straight to me, instead of letting you stand up for her." Leena felt depressed to the extreme. Did Kevin still choose to believe Louisa? If so, he would definitely question her about what she did.

"Leena, can't you be more rational? What is the meaning of 'stand up for her'? Did you mean to say you think I won't stand by your side?" Kevin frowned. He really did not like her act of pushing him away from her. After all, no matter what, he was her husband. He would not help others in bullying her!

"Yes, I'm not rational enough. But don't you always know that?" Leena jutted out her chin. She looked like a little hedgehog with erect thorns all over her body, as if only this way could she protect herself from injury.

"Leena, I did not come here to quarrel with you, but to solve this problem. Can you not be so sensitive?" Kevin felt somewhat helpless. He wasn't scolding her. So why was she being so aggressive right now?

"What did you say? I am sensitive? Kevin Gu, you have the heart to blame me, don't you? You know that I slapped your commander's daughter, which means you will get into trouble because of me. So, are you sure you can continue to be calm?" Leena asked him solemnly. Truth be told, she had not considered that when she slapped Louisa. Otherwise, she wouldn't have been so impulsive. But the strange thing was, even if she calmed down now, she could not find it in herself to regret what she did.

"So you are beginning to worry about me now?" Kevin did not reply to her, but asked her another question instead. He was quite interested in her answer.

"I'm sorry about it. But I don't regret it." Leena lowered her head. Her small face was pale. She admitted that she did not consider him when she got angry and slapped her. She might have made trouble for Kevin. That was on her.

"Let's go. We need to go home first." Kevin stretched out his palms, waiting for her to grab them. He thought they should not be here in such a circumstance. It was better for them to go home early. After all, Leena needed a quiet space to calm down, didn't she?

Chapter 1029: Chapter 1028: I Don't Want To Apologize (part two)

"You send back Claire and Louisa first! I want to stay here alone for a moment." Leena did not think that she could continue to pretend to keep peace with them. So she wanted to avoid facing them if she could. She also needed time to think about how she would explain what she did today to Nathan and Shannon when they returned home. It was a serious claim that she slapped Louisa. She knew that Claire would definitely tell them.

"You can choose. Either we go back together or I stay here with you." In truth, Kevin wanted to hold her petite body in his arms. But he held back as he wanted Leena to realize her mistake. After all, no matter how he skirted around the issue, it was her who slapped Louisa. Even if she had been bullied by Louisa and Claire, she was not in a dignified position here. Slapping someone was indeed a bad conduct.

"Kevin, do you know you are forcing me to do what I don't want to do?" Leena really didn't want to cry. But she couldn't restrain her tears any longer. She hadn't yet thought out how she would explain this to Nathan and Shannon. Couldn't he give her some time to think?

"What? I am forcing you? Really? What I have forced you to do? Tell me!" Kevin fumed. Was he wrong to ask her to go home first? Or did she want to cry alone in front of so many people? They were outside and had an audience.

"All right. I seem to have used the wrong word. I am sorry. I just want to be alone for a while. I didn't mean anything else." Leena felt exhausted in both body and mind. She was really tired.

"Do you want to keep me out of your heart?" Kevin felt helpless. Did this mean he was just a sham husband in her eyes? Why did she not trust that he believed her?

"But you have never thought of coming into it, have you? Don't you think that question is kind of ridiculous?" Leena didn't want to quarrel with him. But the words were out of her mouth before she knew. It was the truth of how she felt unconsciously. She felt as helpless as he seemed to be.

"What if I say I have? Do you think I am lying to you? If I did not take you seriously, why would I have promised you a marriage?" Kevin had thought that she did not care if he loved her or not, because she had never asked him before. It turned out that she just hadn't had the opportunity to erupt like a volcano.

"Kevin Gu, sometimes I think you are so hypocritical. The woman you love is clearly not me, but you still show a kind of loyalty to me. In other people's eyes, you are good to me. But only I know how deceitful you really are." Leena didn't know why she wanted to blurt out her thoughts all of a sudden. She also did not think about the consequences they would have once she said the words out loud.

"Leena, what are you saying?! If I don't like you, whom do I like?" The word Kevin used was 'like', not 'love'. Even now, his feelings for Leena could not be labelled as love.

"You should ask yourself that. How would I know the answer?" Was Leena so hell-bound to speak out no matter what the cost was? Otherwise why was she so keyed up today?

"I don't know what you're talking about. There is no such woman. I do not like any other," Kevin answered flatly. If Leena had questioned him about this in the past, he would definitely have been robbed of words. But now, he had completely forgotten about his infatuation for Daisy. He felt wronged when he heard Leena accuse him like this.

"If I were you, I wouldn't mind saying it out loud. There is nothing wrong with liking a person. So why do you hide it? If you continue to hide it, it just makes you seem like that you don't have the courage to assume the responsibility." Leena continued to be aggressive. Didn't he want to hide whom he liked from everyone? She should make the matter public, and see how he continued to hide it.

"Leena, have you been investigating me?" Kevin was a bit provoked. The one thing he hated the most was for someone to intrude on his privacy. Leena was looking to touch a raw nerve.

"I apologize. But I don't need to pry. I would know what you are thinking and could easily get the answers I need. I don't need to investigate you." Leena knew that even if she wanted to stop speaking now, it would be impossible for her to comply to her rationality. So why not take advantage of this opportunity to put her sorrows out in the open? After all, she needed to face them sooner or later. It was just a matter of time.

"It seems to me that Claire and Louisa are quite right. I do not know you well." Kevin did not know that Leena already knew so many things about him. She even knew that he loved a woman before! However, Leena took the meaning of his words as that he thought she was a scheming woman. She assumed that he was indirectly telling her that he believed Claire and Louisa, but not Leena herself. His words hurt her, but she still did not compromise on her pride.

"Are you disappointed? I am indeed such a vicious woman." Leena bit her lip. She felt utterly hopeless. She didn't care what he thought anymore. Moreover, she was not afraid to bear such grievance again.

"So you have known all this, but you just pretended not to care about it?" Kevin smiled with self-mockery. Since she said so, she must know whom he loved before. How could she keep the secret of her knowing for such a long time? He was so curious.

Chapter 1030: Chapter 1029: I Don't Want To Apologize (part three)

Now that you have condemned me, do I still have a chance to explain myself to you?" The questions and the corresponding answers between the two of them were not regarding the same issue at all. The seeds of contradiction were buried deep. Both of them misunderstood each other's meaning at the same time, which led to the situation worsening.

When they went back to the car, Claire and Louisa had already got in. As the two of them spotted Leena, they glared daggers at her mercilessly. The strange thing was that they all sat on the back seat. Claire and Louisa did not use any tricks this time.

At their stares, Leena just ignored them. She looked at the passing scenery outside of the window with calm. However, her mind was not as calm as her face expressed. The conversation between Kevin and her had not solved the problem, but only let it get worse. Even now, they suspected each other.

At the time, she couldn't help but speak out the secret she had tried to keep all this time. She always pretended to know nothing about Kevin loving Daisy. Although she did not say her name out loud, she told him that she knew he loved another woman. She didn't know whether that was a good decision or not. According to the degree of regret she felt right now, it was probably not a good one. But she lacked patience.

Kevin gave her one last look and did not say anything. He still wondered how she knew that the person he loved before was Daisy. Did he do something that had exposed his secret? However, he did not feel any panic. On the contrary, he was relieved. After all, he was hiding nothing from her now. Also, he no longer loved Daisy. He could explain that to her. When they went back to Gu house, Claire was the first one to get out of the car. She walked straight toward the door. Leena knew she was in a hurry to tell Nathan and Shannon about what happened today. Louisa took a look at the two other people sitting in the car and got out. She pressed her lips together and quickly followed Claire's pace. The clock ticked away. Seeing Leena was not moving from her seat at all, Kevin decided to make a compromise. It did not mean the problem between them was solved. It was just put away temporary. "Get out of the car," Kevin said. It was the first time he said something after they left that place. With Claire and Louisa in the car, he did not know how to communicate with Leena. He always felt like there was a high wall placed between them that he couldn't climb, and that didn't let him come any closer to her.

Leena bit her lip, wondering how she would be treated later. Would Shannon scold her? Would Nathan kick her out of the house? In all honesty, she had no idea. But she could not just stay inside the car. She got out, not seeming to want to wait for Kevin as she directly walked into the house. No matter how much she wanted to escape, she could not change the fact that she had slapped Louisa. Inevitably, as soon as Leena entered the living room, she saw Nathan glare at her sternly. The only person in the family who was kind to her, Shannon, was not there. She would really be scolded this time.

"Leena, come with me to the study room," Nathan said in a dignified manner. He did not tolerate it when others put any resistance against his commands.

"Yes, okay," Leena said as her voice trembled. From the periphery of her eyes, she saw Claire and Louisa looking at her, chuffed. She had come in a little late after them. In the short time, Claire must have told Nathan everything.

Claire made a smug face at Leena. 'Hmph!' She knew that her father would certainly help Louisa and her get justice. She would like to see how this awful woman continued to stay in their house.

"Tell me! Why did you slap Louisa?" As soon as Leena entered his study room, Nathan asked her the question. Leena did not even get the chance to glance around the room.

"I apologize. I'm a little impulsive today." Even though she did not think she did anything wrong, Leena still had to take the initiative to admit the mistake in front of her elder.

"Impulsiveness is not a reason to hit someone. It's not a response you should have as a member of the Gu family," Nathan said firmly. He looked a bit aggressive.

"I..." Leena bit her lip. She did not know how to describe what happened today to him. She could only drop her head and listen to his rebuke with embarrassment.

"I don't want to see something like that happen again. Conduct yourself well and don't make trouble any more. And go and apologize to Louisa. This is your punishment." Nathan kept his face majestic and it scared Leena. She did not dare to explain herself.

However, she didn't want to do what he said. "Dad! I don't want to apologize." Leena insisted on not doing this, because she felt that she had done nothing wrong. She was unwilling to bow down to Louisa.

"This is not up to you, unless you don't want to stay in the family any longer," Nathan said in all seriousness. He was not kidding. Although he was glad that Leena had given him an expensive gift, it didn't do anything to satisfy him about her family background.
