

My Wife is a beautiful Officer Chapter 1031 - Chapter 1030: I'm Sorry (part one)

Chapter 1031: Chapter 1030: I'm Sorry (part one)

Leena was in shock as she looked at Nathan. Her eyes were wide with disbelief. What did he say? Was she hearing him right? Did he really mean that Louisa was more important than her, his daughter-in-law? Or was it because he was a good friend with the commander and he couldn't let his friend's daughter be treated as such? Now that made sense! That realization struck Leena's mind like a speeding car. It was definitely the reason why he said those things and treated her with this attitude!

"Dad, do you really dislike me that much? I don't expect you to treat me like your own daughter. I know that's impossible but I don't know why you are treating me this way! You don't even see me as your daughter-in-law, right?" Leena closed her eyes for a short moment. She didn't know how to feel or what to say anymore. Yes, she could apologize to Louisa. That was not hard at all because she was guilty of raising her hand to slap her. Nonetheless, being asked by her father-in-law in such an accusatory tone broke her heart. She felt so disappointed with Nathan and at the same time, lonely as there was nobody there for her.

"Why do you think that?" Nathan didn't really care about how or what caused the issue. The only thing he was concerned about was the fact that Leena hit someone. There was no way that he would tolerate anyone in his family who had beaten another person. That was why he demanded Leena to apologize to Louisa. It was just so wrong to hit a person!. Plus, Louisa was both their guest and his good friend's daughter. He couldn't just let this slide easily. How would he even face his friend in the future?

"Why do I think that? Are you sure that you have no idea? If you're really treating me as a member of this family, then you should have listened to my side of the story and never demanded me to apologize without even hearing me! You just believed what Louisa and Claire said without a doubt and blamed me for everything!" Leena looked straight into his eyes as she said those words. She had to admit that she was afraid of Nathan. She also knew that she shouldn't be saying those things because what she was doing would only cause even more trouble. However, she just couldn't help it, thus, she acted tough and fearlessly defended herself instead. She wouldn't back down easily.

"Leena, where is your manner? Is this how your parents taught you? Listen to yourself now. How dare you contradict me like this? I am your father-in-law. I don't like your attitude at all. You need to think about what your problem is! You did something wrong and it's reasonable for you to apologize. Well, if your parents didn't teach you then let me be the one to teach you a lesson." Nathan had always been a leader and he was used to being treated as one. This was the first time someone had defied his judgment and he couldn't stand it. Moreover, he didn't think he was wrong. Leena was just being unreasonably stubborn! Leena was also his daughter-in-law. She was his son's wife.

She should listen to him by all means! Leena's defiance was making her lose his face. It made him feel like he couldn't even deal with a young girl.

"Well, I think I know what you want and what to do now." Leena's face was extremely pale. She could not believe that Nathan said those words to her. To be frank, he just wanted her to apologize to Louisa and admit her fault. Why did he have to bring Leena's parents into this mess? Didn't he think that insulting her parents like that was extremely impolite? It seemed that he didn't even consider Leena's feelings at all. Then fine! She would do as he said. It was just an apology anyway. It wouldn't kill her. It was not hard, was it? Nevertheless, she had already hit her rock bottom. She was done. She had finally decided not to respect him as her father-in-law anymore!

Nathan's eyebrows furrowed as he noticed how Leena's stare at him instantly grew colder. It sent him the message that something had changed and would never be the same again. The determination on her face was unbreakable. It seemed that she was both heartbroken and desperate. Nevertheless, he had a reputation to maintain, thus, he couldn't take his words back. That was not going to happen, ever.

Leena didn't remember how she walked out of the study room. She couldn't even explain what she was feeling when she walked to Louisa. It was only when she opened her mouth to apologize that she realized that her voice was shaking badly.

"Miss Ye, I'm sorry! I was too hotheaded. I shouldn't have slapped you. I was wrong. Please forgive my impulsive action." There was no blood on Leena's pretty face. She lowered her head and looked down at her toes. She couldn't even focus. She could hear the sound of her own heart shattering inside her ears.

"Huh! Leena, well, if you think you can slap someone then get away with it with just a simple apology then you are awfully wrong! Police would have nothing to do if an 'I'm sorry' could solve every problem." Claire's words were full of sarcasm. She enjoyed the miserable look on Leena's face. She didn't like Leena anyway. So she felt no sympathy for her at all.

"Then what do you want? Do you want to slap me back? If you really want that, please just do it now before I change my mind." Leena bit her lip so hard that it was almost bleeding. If it wasn't for Kevin, she could simply walk out of this house and never come back. It was all for the love she held for him and also for the happy marriage she pictured with him. She was willing to make the sacrifice and abandon her pride. She would be a docile and perfect little wife even if it meant losing her personality and dignity.

Chapter 1032: Chapter 1031: I'm Sorry (part two)

"Slap you? Haha. Of course not! Leena, do you really think that I am that stupid?" Louisa said with disdain. She was under the impression that Leena was liked by Kevin's family. It seemed that she was wrong. She didn't expect that Kevin's family would take her side and make Leena apologize to her. She suddenly felt a lot better about herself with the knowledge that Leena wasn't welcome in his family at all.

"Well, I have given you the chance, don't ever regret not taking up my offer." There was no trace of warmth in Leena's voice. She had never experienced anything close to this as she was a spoiled girl from a crazy rich family. To be honest, it was probably the most embarrassing and miserable day in her life. What could be worse than being treated like this by her husband's family and being mocked by the woman who wanted to take his husband away? She didn't want to think anymore. She just wanted to leave and hide in a place where no one could ever find her. She needed to be alone to comfort herself. Her heart might be broken beyond repair but never had she let a tear fall from her eyes. She would never give them the satisfaction of seeing her cry.

"Of course I won't. I want you to remember it, Leena. You are the unreasonable one here. You slapped me but instead of revenging against you, I let you off easily. Remember that you owe me, forever." Louisa was more confident as Nathan took her side. Her words turned even more venomous.

"How can I refuse you when you want this? But Miss Ye, don't be so smug. You won't be this lucky forever. There may not be another person to help you or take your side next time you do wrong." Leena glanced at Louisa with her eyes full of disdain. For her, Louisa was just the kind of girl who turned to others to ask for help when she was in trouble. She would be nothing without anyone sheltering her. These thoughts made Leena feel better. Why would she be sad over such a disgraceful woman? It was not worth it.

"That's none of your business and not for you to concern. Just worry about your own damn business! Don't cause any more trouble for Kevin and that's all I want." Secretly, Louisa was happy about Leena being disliked by Kevin's father and sister. Would this mean that she had a bigger chance now to make Kevin divorce his wife?

"What are you all doing here?" Kevin was confused when he saw the three. He just parked his car and then met an acquaintance on his way back. He ended up chatting with him for a short moment. It was undeniable though how the atmosphere inside their house had changed right when he came back. What happened?

"Give me the car keys, I have something to buy now." Leena didn't wait for Kevin's reply. She just snatched the keys from his hand and ran straightly outside. She was fast as she was not wearing her high heels and it was already too late when Kevin realized what just happened. He turned to run after her without thinking because he could tell that Leena was in the worst mood. He didn't want her to drive in such a state in fear that something might happen to her. It was just that Claire quickly grabbed on his wrist and forced him to stop.

Kevin, just let her go! She did it to herself. Dad just wanted her to apologize to Louisa but she was so reluctant! She did something wrong but she acted like it was all our fault.

It was like we were the bad guys here! She's just so impossible! She even threatened Louisa! Can you believe it? To be honest, it's probably the best for her to leave now. I really can't understand what you see in her." Claire puckered her lips. She didn't want her brother to go after Leena. A woman like Leena should leave her family alone and never come back! After all, she was not the only one who wanted to be Kevin's wife and their parents' daughter-in-law. There were so many other choices. Leena could leave all she wanted as long as she never came back.

"What do you mean? Are you saying that dad reprimanded Leena just now?" Kevin's eyebrows furrowed. How did that happen? Why would his dad reprimand Leena without a solid reason? He really couldn't understand a thing!

"Yeah, of course! I told dad that Leena had slapped Louisa. So he was quite angry with her." The look on Claire's face showed that she was very proud of what she did. She thought she did something good for her brother.

"Claire, I'll get to you in a minute." Kevin jerked his hand out of Claire's hold and then hurriedly ran outside after Leena. She must be lying when she said that she had something to buy immediately. She just wanted to get away from this place, from the people who had hurt her badly! After all, he knew that his father was a very serious man and how strict he could be. He was determined to stop his wife but then all he had seen as soon as he opened the door was an Audi Pikes Peak Quattro quickly disappearing from his view. It was too late. He clenched his hands into tight fists. He could feel how his nails were digging deep into his palms. Then without any word, he smashed his fist to the wall, making the wall shake slightly. He couldn't feel any pain, all he could feel was his worry for Leena.

Chapter 1033: Chapter 1032: I'm Sorry (part three)

Leena let all her tears out as soon as she got in the car. She drove the car around the city without a specific direction. It seemed that this trip to the capital city was just a big mistake. She shouldn't have rushed her essay for this. If she hadn't finished her essay so early, she wouldn't have come here and be treated like this. These awful things wouldn't have happened at all. If she hadn't finished her essay so early, she would have still been in Paris, the romantic and beautiful city.

It was just that all these were just wishful thinking. She was no prophet after all. So now, she was stuck here, trapped with these people. She didn't know what Louisa's purpose was before. It was different now though. That vicious woman's goal was to make her angry. Stupid as she was, she gave what Louisa wanted. That was how things ended up like this. She had no one to blame but herself. She was too trusting and too silly. That was why she had fallen for Louisa's trap.

Tears kept streaming down her face, but the ache in her heart never lessened. Instead, she felt more and more suffocated. She just wanted to love someone. Should it be this hard? Was it worth the sacrifices she made? She didn't have any answers to her own questions.

She wiped the tears that wouldn't stop falling. She wanted badly to drive directly to S City but she knew that she couldn't. Not only because of Kevin's family but also because of the ones who loved her deeply. There were many people who cared about her very much and she couldn't let them worry. Besides, it was also not safe for her to drive in such an unstable state. It was a long journey to S City after all.

The phone beside her kept ringing and she knew clearly who was calling. Nonetheless, she just didn't want to pick the phone up. She had no energy to deal with him now. She wasn't prepared to face him yet. Just for once, she wanted to get away from everyone.

Kevin was calling Leena non-stop while looking for her on every street. It was a pain that the capital city was such a big place. It wasn't easy to find her at all.

"Major General, do you think that Leena has driven back to S City?" Lee asked carefully. In fact, he had no idea what the hell had happened. He could tell that the Major General was deadly worried and anxious though. Thus, he knew that something bad must have occurred. Nonetheless, he didn't dare to pry, not now when he was seeing how stone cold Kevin's face was.

"No. I know her. She wouldn't do such a thing. She is not that impulsive." Kevin's eyebrows were deeply furrowed. Though Leena would act childish and throw a fit from time to time, he knew she wouldn't just leave the city and leave him behind. She was not that willful and heartless. She clearly knew the consequences of her actions, thus, she would never go back to S City at such a moment.

"What if she really has something to buy as she told you? How about looking for her in the supermarkets around here?" Lee was just listing all the possibilities. The only thing he knew was that Leena said something about buying things. He could only guess if it was true or not by the limited information that the Major General gave him.

"That's not possible. Just drive carefully! Drive around the neighborhood and see if we can find her car." Kevin didn't know what his father said to Leena as he didn't have the time to ask. He knew that Leena had apologized to Louisa and was in a bad mood because of it. Thus, he guessed that his father's words could have torn Leena's heart.

"Okay, Major General." Lee's eyebrows were also deeply furrowed. Things were all good this morning when they went out. How could things turn out like this when they got back? Things just changed too fast.

Kevin kept ringing Leena but she never picked up. It seemed that she didn't even want to talk to him and chose to ignore his phone calls.

And he was right in fact. Leena indeed didn't want to talk. She calmed down after a long time of driving. It didn't mean that she didn't mind what happened anymore. She was just calmer than before and could think clearly now. No matter what, she was not in the mood to go back to Kevin's house. She had finally got away from them. Why should she even care if what she did disturbed them or not? It was after another hour that she considered that maybe she might have thought too highly of herself. It was probably just Kevin who cared if she would ever go back. Yes, he might be thinking of her or else her phone wouldn't keep ringing.

Letting out a silent breath, Leena thought that she couldn't keep on driving without direction.. She glanced at her phone for a short moment then suddenly picked it up. She didn't answer the call though. She hung up directly and called the number she remembered by heart.

"Hello, Leena! It seems that you finally remember your brother!" Edward was quite surprised but happy about Leena calling him. It was always a pleasure receiving his little sister's phone call. He automatically stopped the work he was handling and leaned back against his chair. He wanted to concentrate on every word Leena would say.

"Edward, don't be silly. How can I ever forget you? Look, I'm calling you right now, aren't I?" Leena replied though she was indeed a bit guilty about what he just said. She wouldn't have called Edward if she didn't have a favor to ask. Edward was a smart man and if she cut to the chase, Edward would definitely know that something was wrong. Therefore, she started with a joke before cracking her true reason.

Chapter 1034: Chapter 1033: I'm Sorry (part four)

Well, I guess you are right. How are you doing? How's the capital city treating you? Isn't it great fun?" Edward asked casually in a gentle tone, he wanted to know if Leena was alright because he still felt surprised about Leena's call. If only they were together, his little sister would have seen the affection that instantly flashed in his eyes as he talked with her.

"No. It's no fun without you all here." Leena didn't lie about that. She really thought the capital city was no fun without her brothers and friends. She already had a tough time getting along with Kevin's sister. The thing that happened between Louisa and her just hours ago wasn't as pleasant either. Then top it up with Nathan's attitude. Everything just made she feel very lonely.

"Wait a minute, Leena. Why does your voice sound so weird? Have you been crying?" Edward immediately straightened his back. He was sure that there was something wrong with his little sister's voice. Did something happen to her? Was Kevin's family not treating her right? Edward's brain was suddenly bombarded by all the negative possibilities. Why did he have a bad feeling about this? He could feel that Leena wasn't telling him everything.

"No! Of course not. You worry too much. I'm just not used to the weather here so I caught a cold. That's all." Leena would never tell Edward what exactly happened because Edward was overprotective. It would only go worse if he knew because he would definitely rush here and take her home in a flash. So she put on a smiley face for her brother and tried her best to be strong though he couldn't see her. It was nice to know that Edward still cared so deeply about her.

"A cold? Again? Well, it seems that my worry is in fact legit. Haven't you been taking good care of yourself as Tom had told you? You get sick so easily and I'm not happy about it." Suddenly, Edward was displeased with Kevin. What was he doing? Why didn't he take good care of his sister? Leena was by his side all this time! How could he not notice that Leena could easily catch a cold? He would definitely have a word with him once they were back. Kevin couldn't keep ignoring Leena any more. He wouldn't allow it.

"It's just a cold! You have absolutely nothing to worry about. I will be healthy again in a few days. Plus, please don't tell Mr. Cold that I've caught a cold. He would be worried sick." Leena knew Duke so well and she was aware that Duke also cared so much about her. There was no doubt that her brother would rush to the capital city even if her problem was just a small cold. Mr. Cold was just really like that. There was no way of talking him out of something once he made up his mind.

"Well, that can be negotiated. How will you convince me to not tell Duke about your sickness though? What do I get out of this?" Edward suddenly wanted to tease her. He found it quite amusing messing with her and watching her being all flustered.

"Well. If you really want me to do something for you, I guess I can go check your house in the capital city for you. You know, just to check if the house is still yours or if it has already been stolen and sold by others in secret." Leena was just worrying about how to mention this to him. She didn't expect that Edward would give her such a good chance to bring the topic about his house up. She felt relieved. In this case, she wouldn't have to make up some excuses and lie to him anymore.

"You can rest assured. That's not possible. Nobody dares to sell my house without my permission. After all, no one would want to endanger his life by doing such a thing." Edward was confident about this, thus, he didn't even worry about the kind of situation Leena imagined happening.

"Edward, just tell me where it is! I'm already in the capital city right now! Shouldn't I know where my brother's house is? It's quite reasonable!" Leena pleaded. She had to know the address to Edward's house because that house was the only hiding place she could think of. She couldn't give it up so easily.

"Huh. Do you want to go there? Are you kidding? Do you want to spend some time alone with Kevin without his family intruding? Am I right?" Edward had a knowing smile on his face. Well, he was married too and he knew the feeling when you wanted to be alone with your other half. Thus, he clearly understood what Leena was thinking now. Or so he thought.

"Ummm... Edward, there's no need to say it out loud, okay? Don't be a smartass." Leena didn't correct Edward even if what he said squeezed her heart painfully. It was fortunate that he couldn't see her face or he would definitely know that she was lying. To be honest, her brother had just pinned point what her heart exactly wanted, a moment with just Kevin alone! It was just bad though that it wasn't the truth and those words made her sad again.

"Alright, alright. Calm down. I was just teasing. I will text you the address later and will also make a call to let the guards know that you will be there." Edward shook his head. How could he possibly refuse Leena? That was just impossible! Besides, he bought his house in the capital city out of whim. If Leena wanted to go there then he could just let her as she pleased. Everything would be okay with him, as long as Leena was happy.

Chapter 1035: Chapter 1034: Don't Push Me(part one)

"Okay! Thanks, Edward." Only around her big brothers could Leena feel like herself. She could smile more easily, and they were always good to her. Around them, she beamed with happiness, and her world was full of joy. Even the cloudy sky looked bright and sunny to her.

"Ha!. Why are you so polite all of a sudden? That's not like you. You're trying to hide something from me, right? So what is it?" Edward was smart and sensible. He could detect every subtle change in her tone. It was not for nothing that he was known as a savvy businessman.

"You're overreacting. I just wanted to thank you. What's wrong with that? It's no big deal." Though it came out of nowhere, Leena was suddenly overcome with gratitude. Expressing one's gratitude was certainly easier than apologizing. Why should she hold back when others were nice to her? She decided to go for broke and pour out her heart to him.

"Okay, you're off the hook for now. But still, you're acting weird. It's been a long time since you thanked me for anything. Really, I don't remember you ever doing that," Edward quipped with a smile. He looked as attractive as ever when he smiled. Edward Mu was famous for his cool, collected manner and his self-control. He was completely unflappable, and liked to show off that side of him.

"Don't tease me, Edward. You want me to apologize for being a little snot? Fine. But not now. I'm driving. Don't distract me." Leena pretended to sound angry, so Edward wouldn't know what was really going on.

"Yeah, I guess. But drive slower, okay? I'll text you the address." Edward smirked inwardly. He had always treated Leena like his own sister. No matter what, he still had that habit, and would never stop spoiling her.

"I will! See you later, Edward!" Leena said gently before ending the call. Her face was still pale, but she felt better after hearing Edward's voice.

On the other side, Edward texted the address to her. However, he just couldn't shake away the feeling that something bad was going on. He knew Leena too well, he could tell she was not happy at all. Things weren't so simply. She was holding something back.

Leena pulled over, stopped the car, and took a deep breath to calm her nerves. Silence reigned over the small space as she waited for the text to come in. The conversation soothed and drained her, all at the same time. She usually enjoyed talking to Edward; he was pretty easy to talk to and sometimes had good advice. He was a great guy, at least to her. So she had to really pull it out of her hat, and steel her nerves to fool him. He wasn't dumb at all, and he hadn't gotten where he was by being gullible.

Before long, her cell beeped, and she saw Edward's text. The address was an unfamiliar one, but she was a stranger to the capital city anyway. Fortunately, the car had an onboard GPS, so she wasn't worried about getting lost, although it took her some time to get there. When she arrived, she was amazed. She always knew Edward was rich, but this was beyond that. It wasn't what she expected at all; she thought maybe he lived in a large loft in a skyscraper or something. She was cruising through a rich, residential area, where a cluster of large, luxurious homes stood, each one belonging to a single family. Gardens, courtyards, pools and fountains, every house had at least one of these. Edward's residence looked very expensive, though he didn't stay in the capital city a lot.

No one stopped her as she passed through the gates, so the guard was probably told ahead of time. She glanced at the garden as she entered, and saw flowers and plants in full bloom, despite the colder weather in the north. The garden must have been carefully taken care of by someone, she thought.

Suddenly, she heard a respectful voice say,

"Welcome, Mrs. Gu! Mr. Mu told me to take good care of two honorable guests. But I only see one of you?" She ended with a question when she got a good look at Leena. Leena turned around, and saw an old lady, in early fifties. She was definitely dressed like a housekeeper, and looked kind and gentle. 'She must be the one who cleans Edward's house,' thought Leena as she returned a smile.

She said, "Oh, really? He is so nice. Glad to meet you. But I don't need to be taken care of. All I need now is a soft bed, and a good night's sleep. And you shouldn't put yourself out. I'm not an honorable guest, just someone who's crashing here." She shrugged innocently, and smiled. She had always been an easy-going person, and was nice to everyone, despite her high social status.

"Oh, no! Mr. Mu told me specifically to take good care of you, and cater to your every need. Boss' orders," said the lady urgently, as if she were scared to be sent away by Leena.

"It's okay. You don't have to do all that. I'll have a talk with Edward, so you don't get in trouble, okay? But don't tell him I came here alone. Can you do that for me?" asked Leena, giving her a look of sincerity. She was just here visiting the in-laws, although the incident happened. If Edward knew that she ran out alone, then her secret might get out. She didn't want any of this to go public. If it got out, things would become far more complicated than before. She knew her big brothers were protective of her, and would definitely have a problem with this. She just didn't want that to happen.

"Okay, Mrs. Gu, so you want me to leave you alone? W-what do I tell the boss if he asks? And he will ask, believe me," stuttered the old lady in hesitation. She'd worked for Edward for a long time, and she had no more to do than simply clean the empty house, water the flowers and weed the beautiful garden. She was well-paid and worked at a leisurely pace. Things were quiet here, and the only urgent task for her now was to take care of two guests. How could she not? She felt like that would be slacking off, and she thought that was unfair to Edward.

"You don't have to explain anything to him, as I said. If he asks about it, just tell him to call me instead, and I'll explain everything. So could you get my room ready?" Although Leena had recovered a little from what happened earlier, she still looked pale and drained of energy. What she needed now was some sleep to get her going again, and some time to sort everything out, not a servant.

"Alright, then. This way, please." That said, the elderly woman led Leena to her room, although she didn't believe a word of it. Leena's phone had been buzzing since she walked in. But Leena didn't seem interested in checking it at all. She knew who it was, but she didn't feel like talking to him. She really didn't feel like talking to anyone at all, truth be told. So she tried her best to ignore the persistent buzzing from her cell.
