

My Wife is a beautiful Officer Chapter 1041 - Chapter 1040: Kevin's Heart Dance (part one)

Chapter 1041: Chapter 1040: Kevin's Heart Dance (part one)

No, she's never mentioned it. Duke, do you have the address?" Kevin asked cautiously, fearing that Duke might find out the real reason why he was asking.

"I'm looking for it right now. Okay, how about this? I'll send you the address later. And remember to ask Leena to call me back." Duke hung up the phone. He saw no reason to say anything else. He made the call to ask about Leena. But she wasn't with Kevin, and he didn't really want to talk to the Major General. He hadn't recovered from the sad truth that Kevin married his sister without asking his permission first.

Kevin bit his lip and put down his cellphone. He now pinned all his hopes on Duke giving him the address. He just had the strongest hunch that Leena would be there. She had to be -- it was about the only place he hadn't looked.

Waiting was pure torture. When the phone beeped, Kevin hurriedly read the message and immediately asked Lee to change the route. He really hoped that Leena had gone to that place to rest and recharge like he had guessed.

After Kevin reached the place, he didn't get an easy pass like Leena did. Because he came here without any notice, the house keeper was very strict. She didn't let him in until he explained his relationship with Leena to her. Helpless as he was, he was glad that one thing was certain, that Leena was really in the house, just like he thought. At least she was being looked after.

When Kevin finally found Leena in the bedroom, she was sound asleep. She might have been too sleepy, or gotten too tired after crying. He could see the trace of tears on her beautiful face. Her eyelashes were still wet. So she hadn't been asleep that long. He looked around the room, and the aroma of liquor filled the air. Looking up, he saw an empty wine bottle lying on the table. Obviously she drank a lot, and needed no glass to help her down the stuff.

He reached out his hand and touched her cheek, a lump forming in his throat. He felt sad to see her like this. His fingers swept over her face very gently, his eyes full of affection. He was moved by her. He felt grateful that she didn't do anything to hurt herself, but waited here for him to come.

Gazing deeply at her, Kevin suddenly realized that he had never looked at her so closely and so attentively. Previously, he only had the impression that she looked good. But with close examination, he suddenly found that she had an attractive oval face. She appeared like a classic beauty, but had a fashionable air. He was stunned by her gorgeous sleeping face. He'd never felt this way before.

Her skin was quite healthy, but looked a little pale. But that did not harm the youthful look she had, especially when she was sleeping peacefully. Her beautiful face had Kevin spellbound. At the same time, he felt a surge of pity and had the urge to protect her. Kevin's heart danced in his chest at the sight of Leena's stunning beauty. He couldn't help but bow his head and plant a gentle kiss on her pink lips. The aroma of the liquor in the air aroused him suddenly. But he collected himself and immediately left her lips. Because he knew if he didn't, he would lose all self-control.

"No! I won't...apologize! I.. didn't do anything wrong!" Even in her dreams, Leena didn't forget to defend herself. Kevin could see how wronged she felt.

"Yes! You don't need to apologize. You did nothing wrong." Kevin grasped her flailing arms. He knew she was talking in her sleep. He wondered whether he was also in her dream. But this was not likely. After all he was the one who made her suffer and hurt her. How could he expect to be in her dreams? She probably hated him.

"Kevin..." Leena mumbled. If she hadn't called out to him with her eyes closed, Kevin would have thought that she was awake. Because she spat out his name so clearly, not something that sounded unintelligible. He examined her closely, only to find that she was calling the Kevin in her dreams, not the Kevin right in front of her now. But this also reassured him that she had dreamed about him. He wondered what he did in her dreams.

"I'm here. I'll always be here with you. Sleep well, my darling," Kevin responded in a gentle voice. He leaned against the wall behind the bed and wrapped her head in his arms. She unwittingly moved to get comfortable in his embrace. Her movements were just like those of a kitten, lithe, lazy and adorable.

As if Leena had heard Kevin's words in her dreams, she became quiet and calm again. She fell back asleep. It seemed that one remark from Kevin was enough to comfort and satisfy her. She was totally at peace now. Her bad dreams faded away.

As a soldier, admittedly he was never a romantic man. Since they wed, they barely had time to spend with each other, let alone to travel anywhere together. He felt deeply sorry in this regard. But he never had the chance to tell her how sorry he was, to admit this to her.

Most of the time, he wasn't even really emotional. He didn't spend enough time with her, and he felt bad for her because of it. He wouldn't even make their time together romantic to make up for lost time. He had a lot of improving to do.

Gently placing Leena's head on the pillow, he stood up and quietly walked to the balcony. There he took out his cellphone and made a call. He didn't care what other people in his family thought, but he knew his mother would be worried. So he wanted to call her and tell her that everything was fine here.

Chapter 1042: Chapter 1041: Kevin's Heart Danced (part two)

Kevin, did you find Leena?" Driving around, Shannon looked about for Leena on the street, hoping to catch a glimpse of her somewhere.

"Yes, I found her. Don't worry. I will bring her back when she wakes up." Kevin said in a low voice. He didn't want to wake her up.

"Okay, good. Where are you now? I'd like to see her." Shannon really liked Leena, and she thought that she was an ideal daughter-in-law. She felt relieved when she heard that she was safe.

"Just stay put, mom. It's a little far away and you'll be tired by the time you get here. Don't worry. She's fine now. She's asleep, probably after crying." Feeling exhausted, Kevin leaned against the handrail. Finding Leena had eaten up all his energy. And it wasn't so much physical as psychological, the stress and fear and despair that he suffered in the process.

"Okay, Kevin, take good care of her. Try to comfort her and don't let her think too much. You can stay out tonight. Take some relaxation time, just the two of you." Eager as Shannon was to see Leena, considering that Leena might be very depressed now, she thought it better to leave some space for the couple to be alone. No matter how much she cared for her, what Leena needed most right now might be Kevin's company. Shannon herself was also a woman, and placing herself in Leena's position, it was easy for her to realize what was the most important thing to Leena now. To most people, the relationship between mother-in-law and daughter-in-law was always a thorny problem brimming over with endless hatred. But in Shannon's eyes, she felt closer to Leena than her own daughter. The first time she saw Leena, she actually didn't take her as her daughter-in-law, but treated her as if she were her own daughter. Only mothers could love their daughters wholeheartedly, which was why Shannon wanted to see her again and hold her.

"But what about my promise to Father?" Kevin asked hesitantly. He promised his father that he would accept the punishment after he found Leena. He was a soldier, and he had to keep his word.

"Don't worry, I'll handle this. You two have fun." Shannon didn't ask where they were now. Because she worried that if she knew the address, she couldn't control herself and would drive there to see them tonight. And tonight was not the right time. No matter how much she wanted to see them, she had to be patient and wait.

"Okay, Mom, thanks." Kevin was overjoyed. He had thought to ask his mother to help him to deal with the thing between him and his father, but he didn't know how to bring it up. Since his mother offered to tackle the problem for him, he had no reason to refuse.

"Don't be silly. You're my son. There's no need to thank me. Tell Leena, she doesn't need to worry. She's always the daughter-in-law of my family in my heart." Shannon was much different from many other wives of high officials. She had the in-born noble appearance, but she was a very amiable person. She never put on airs in front of Leena and was easy to get along with. She and Leena were so much alike, that was why she was into Leena so much.

"Mom, thank you for all this. Leena will be very happy to hear it." At this moment, Kevin felt very grateful to his mom. Because his mom didn't side with his father. Instead, she chose to believe Leena unconditionally. He was moved in this regard. He knew his mother almost never acted against his father. But this time, she made an exception for Leena's sake. He could see her obvious affection towards Leena. And how could he not be touched by this? She was very supportive of Kevin, too, knowing he did nothing wrong.

Again with the thanks. I'm your mother, not anyone else. You don't need to be so polite. I'm doing this out of love. Don't thank me again." Shannon pretended to be a little angry at him. But Kevin felt very happy. He knew it was a way for his mom to show her love towards him. And such a happy feeling followed him for the rest of his life, helping him to conquer every difficulty he faced.

After finishing the call, Kevin went back inside to check on Leena. Making sure that she was fine, Kevin tiptoed out of the room. He planned to ask Lee to get some takeout.

"Mr. Gu, is Mrs. Gu okay?" the housekeeper asked as soon as Kevin walked downstairs. Mrs. Gu told the housekeeper not to disturb her. So she left her alone upstairs. If Mrs. Gu got angry because of her disturbance, she would be done for. Young girls from rich families were usually very arrogant and had a mercurial temperament.

"Yeah, She's fine. Thank you for taking care of her," Kevin said to the housekeeper politely. Their visit might have added extra work for her.

"It's nothing. Mr. Mu told me that if Mrs. Gu came, we must treat her the same way we'd treat him. So it's our duty to serve her." The housekeeper smiled. She was a very kind woman.

"Mr. Mu? So you mean Edward Mu?" Kevin asked doubtfully. Did Edward already know that Leena came here? He wondered if Leena had told Edward what happened to her recently.

Chapter 1043: Chapter 1042: Kevin's Heart Danced (part three)

Yes! He told me a young couple would come here and asked me to take good care of them. So I felt very strange when Mrs. Gu came here alone. I didn't expect that you would come later." Saying this, the housekeeper glanced at Kevin with a worried face. She asked a lot of questions to him before letting him in, so she worried that he might be mad because of this. But there was a soldier following him, so she assumed that he was not a bad guy.

"Oh? He told you that, huh?" Kevin didn't know how to feel now. Obviously Leena hid the truth for him, even when she was hurt because of him. How could he ever repay what she did? How could he express how grateful he was for her deep love?

"Yes, Mr. Gu. I don't know what you like to eat. Please tell me which kinds of food you like. I can prepare it for you right away," The housekeeper said, constantly rubbing her hands. She was very nervous.

"Thank you. We'll get dinner. We've already been so much trouble for you. How can we expect you to make dinner for us?" Kevin politely refused the housekeeper's nice offer. It was already very rude for him to come here without notice, so he didn't want to make more trouble for her.

"Mr. Gu, you're too polite. It's our duty to serve you. I get paid by Mr. Mu, and I feel obliged to serve his friends as well. If he knew I didn't even make dinner for you, he'd probably fire me." Panicked at his words, the housekeeper immediately shook her head. If Mr. Mu got it in his head that she didn't serve them well, she might lose this highly paid job.

"Don't worry, he won't know if we don't say anything to him." Kevin still felt it was hard to make the housekeeper cook dinner for them. They caused so much inconvenience due to their unexpected visit. And they were not going to make more trouble for her.

"Sorry, Mr. Gu, please let me prepare dinner for you. I'm pleased to serve you and I don't want to lose my job." The housekeeper still insisted. She believed that there was no other choice, that Edward would have a fit and accuse her of not doing her job. And it had been a long time since the last time anybody was here. So she felt happy to make her guests feel welcome. And part of that was to fix them a meal.

"Eh? So you seriously think he'd fire you?" Kevin frowned. It seemed that he had no choice now.

"Or are you worried about my cooking skills? Rest assured. Mr. Mu tested my cooking skills when I applied for the job. Although the food I make might not be as good as those made by famous cooks, I believe I won't disappoint you." The housekeeper confidently tapped her chest to reassure him. Kevin was amused by this gesture.

"Okay. Then thanks for taking the trouble to make dinner for us." Seeing that she was so enthusiastic, Kevin eventually said yes. Although he thought it might be too much trouble for others to make dinner for them, standing in her shoes, he realized it was only part of her daily job.

"Don't be too polite. As I said, it's my duty. Please wait a bit and dinner will be ready soon." Now that Kevin said yes, the housekeeper smiled affably.

"You don't have to hurry, take your time. We're not super-hungry yet." Kevin thought that Leena might have to sleep for a while. So dinner could wait. Leena had drowned her sorrows in alcohol and she lay on the bed like a drunken cat now. So she wasn't likely to wake up soon.

"Okay, I know. I'll go fix dinner. Please make yourselves at home." The housekeeper knew Kevin was not just an ordinary guy, judging from his noble temperament. But she was surprised that he acted so politely to a servant like her. In fact, it was rare to see such a humble person these days, so Kevin left a good impression on her.

"Sure, I'll be fine here. Please don't worry, and you can get back to work." Kevin smiled. Since the housekeeper was taking care of dinner, he wanted to go upstairs and stay with Leena. He worried that she might do something to hurt herself when he was away.

When Kevin came back to the bedroom, Leena had already kicked the quilt off. Obviously she was restless.

Kevin laughed and shook his head. He slowly walked to her bedside, his charming eyes full of affection. It was a pity that nobody was around to witness this beautiful moment between them. If there was anyone around, he could tell that Kevin loved her. In fact, Leena was slowly walking into his heart, it was just that he hadn't realized it yet.

He gently replaced the quilt and tucked her in. The weather was quite cold. Although the heater was going, he couldn't be too careful, trying to prevent Leena from catching a cold. It was not long since the last time when Leena got a cold in France. He didn't want Leena to get sick again, otherwise Duke would really be angry at him. Different from last time, Kevin was at her side now. And if she got sick this time, he would really be a jerk. Of course, he was careful not mostly because he was afraid of being blamed by Duke. More importantly, he really cared about her health.

Looking at her sweet sleeping face, Kevin couldn't help but pinch her cheeks. Probably because her skin was so fair. And it made him suddenly aware that she was incredibly cute. The beautiful sensation lingering on his fingers made him laugh unwittingly from the bottom of his heart.

Chapter 1044: Chapter 1043: A Frank Talk (part one)

Leena might have slept for a long time. It didn't mean that she had slept quietly though. She had mumbled, tossed, and sometimes, talked in her dreams. She also did a lot of sluggish gestures the whole time she was in bed. Needless to say, she was undoubtedly drunk.

It was the minor hangover that welcomed Leena as soon as she woke up in a daze. She couldn't help but stretch her arm and attempt to knock her throbbing head slightly. She was only a split second away from the first knock when a huge hand suddenly caught her wrist immediately and made her jerk out of her wits.

"Don't do it. You already have an addle head. You might just worsen the case if you do it." Kevin smiled with spoiling eyes. He never anticipated Leena to sleep for such a long time. He was actually a bit anxious earlier as he waited for her to wake up. There were even sometimes when he put his finger close to her nose just to feel her breath as if he was afraid that she would not wake up anymore.

"Kevin, why are you here?" Leena was completely shocked and had lost all her composure. She had never expected him to appear before her at all!

"You guess." Kevin tidied her messy long hair as he replied. He didn't have a plan to ask her why she ran away. He was thoughtful enough to understand that those sad and awkward questions would just annoy her.

"I'm sorry! I didn't mean to run away from home. I just wanted to find a quiet place to stay alone." Leena lowered her head and apologized humbly as if she was the one that made a mistake.

"Yes. I see. Are you hungry? Let's go and eat something." Ironically, Kevin did not blame her at all and chose to care for her instead.

No, I'm not. My head is still aching." The lady said as she lifted her hand again to knock her head. Same as earlier, Kevin caught her wrist again. He stopped her from hurting herself further and the next thing she knew was that he was already massaging her head.

"Don't drink too much next time, okay? It will make your headache worse." Kevin frowned slightly as he skillfully and gently rubbed her eyebrows.

"Are they angry?" She did not respond to his warning but asked something else. She looked at him worriedly and wondered about the consequences that her action had created.

"Mom's worried about you. She said that you would always be the daughter-in-law of the Gu Family." The man answered her question but in a way that it would not touch anything about Nathan's attitude. It would be best if Leena wouldn't hear anything about his father's coldness.

"What about Dad?" That question from Leena almost made Kevin cough. It seemed like avoiding the topic was actually purposeless as she was very much concerned about his father's thoughts of her.

"He's fine. We don't need to worry about him." He knew what Leena really wanted to know but then he chose to drop the topic right there. It was obvious that he didn't want to talk to her about his dad. However, Leena was sensitive and was able to read his thoughts through his shifty eyes. She knew right then that Nathan must be very displeased with her. She sadly shut her eyes and concluded that it was her caprice that made everything around them even more terrible.

Kevin, did I cause you trouble?" Leena asked carefully. She knew that Kevin was fond of intellectual people. However, how she behaved hours ago was far from being an intellectual woman. She did it at will and did not care about the results. She had been trying so hard to be a mature woman. All her efforts didn't matter though thanks to her willful behavior.

No, not at all. Don't think too much. Is your head still aching?" Kevin stopped what he was doing and then suddenly pulled her in an embrace. The more she acted thoughtfully, the more he felt that he owed her.

"No, it feels much better now. Thank you!" Leena forced a smile because of his tender actions. She did it to comfort him although her head was still aching a bit.

"Leena, we are a couple, right?" said Kevin as he bent over and looked into her eyes seriously.

Yes, of course. I'm aware of it. Is there anything wrong?" Panic arose from Leena upon hearing him. Would he talk about the divorce Nathan had threatened her with? That was the last thing she would like to do! Just the thought of it was enough to mess her heart. What if she had guessed right? How was she supposed to respond? Would she agree on the divorce decisively? Or would she beg not to divorce? There was even no need to ask. She would definitely choose the latter as she had fallen for him so deeply and wholeheartedly. She had loved him blindly even without any assurance that he felt the same.

"Yes, there's something wrong! Have you ever met a couple who behave like us? You are being too polite and even thank me for everything I do regardless of how small they are." Kevin disliked it very much when she was acting distantly from him. He was bothered about those things as what he wanted was for her to be closer.

"Oh! Is that what you want to say? I thought..." Leena paused and did not continue her words. She was suddenly relieved. The only thing she would consider serious as of that time was divorce and nothing else.

"You thought what?" asked Kevin confusedly. He got no clue about what she was trying to say.

"Oh! Nothing! What time is it? It looks quite late." The lady turned her head to the window and noticed how dark it was outside already.

"Almost eight o'clock. You've been sleeping for several hours." The handsome man answered as he checked his watch. Their dinner had been ready a long time ago. Nonetheless, he wanted to have it with his wife, thus, he waited for her to wake up. Those foods were probably cold by now.

Chapter 1045: Chapter 1044: A Frank Talk (part two)

Ah! So it's already that late? What shall we do? Mom must be worried a lot!" The woman said as she jumped out of the bed. She almost fell down as she did it too carelessly. It was fortunate that Kevin was right there and caught her in his arms even before she hit the floor.

"It's okay. Mom said that we don't need to hurry back. Don't be nervous. We can stay here for tonight." The man put his coat around her tiny body considerably. It was a bit cold inside the room.

"Really? Didn't you say that to comfort me?" Leena felt a bit shy with how his arms remained wrapped around her. Kevin's continuous gentleness made her face turn red.

"You don't believe it? No problem. We can call Mom to prove it." The man said as he pretended to fish his phone to make a call to his mother.

"Stop! Didn't you say let's eat something? Let's go now!" Leena rejected Kevin's offer instantly without even thinking twice. She wasn't ready to go back home and face Shannon yet. She acted so childishly earlier and she was too embarrassed about it.

"Are you going downstairs like this? Why don't you go and clean yourself a bit before we go for the dinner?" Kevin suppressed his laugh and then gave her messy look a quick once-over.

"Oh! I forgot it. Hold on. I'll finish it soon." Leena stuck her tongue out naughtily and ran to the restroom. She was happy until she stepped in the restroom and saw her face in the mirror. Her smile automatically melted. She looked at the mirror agonizingly and examined how bad her frustration was showing on her face. All her disguise disappeared completely at that moment.

She walked out of that room, refreshed after cleaning herself. There was not even a trace of unhappiness on her face at all. She was far from who she was just seconds ago. Leena couldn't help but mock herself silently as she thought that she should probably become an actress and play on the stage for her excellent skills.

They looked like a perfectly in love couple as they walked downstairs with them holding hands. However, Leena knew that this was not just the case. Her mind was weighed down despite the sweet smile on her face.

"Mrs. Gu, you're awake. Shall we start the meal?" The housekeeper greeted them happily as soon as she saw them. She had just finished warming the dishes with the thought that Leena might still be sleeping. It turned out that she did it at good timing.

"Yes, please. I'm sorry for troubling you and thank you." Leena replied in a polite tone. She knew that the housekeeper cared for her so much simply because of Edward. Nevertheless, she chose to show her good manners to her.

"You're welcome, Mrs. Gu. It's part of my job." The housekeeper rubbed her hands awkwardly. She rarely saw a rich woman like Leena who was so down to earth.

"Leena," Lee turned to Leena and greeted her. Although he did not know what exactly happened to her in the Gu Family, there was a part of him that subconsciously believed that she was the one who was wronged. Based on the couple of days when they got along, he did not think that she was the type of person who would deliberately cause troubles for others.

"Oh, Lee. You are here!" Leena did not expect that Lee was there too, thus, she was surprised upon seeing him. Was the trouble she made for Kevin that big? Goodness! Even his subordinate knew that she had run away.

"Yes. I came here with Major General." Lee replied honestly as he rubbed his hands. He felt a bit shy whenever he was faced with Leena, something that never happened when he was faced with Kevin. After all, he was just a young man, therefore, it was just normal for him to be shy before a beautiful lady no matter who she was.

"I'm sorry for causing such trouble for you." An awkward smile cracked Leena's lips. Unlike Lee, she felt a bit ashamed instead of shy. As the wife of Lee's superior, she did not set a good example at all. She had acted so ill-behaved that she made him and Kevin busy and anxious.

"Oh! Leena, don't say that to me. I can't take that." Lee took a quick glimpse at Kevin before replying to Leena. He didn't want to be punished with heavy training for accepting the woman's apology. What was more, he actually did nothing but just be a driver. That was all! It wasn't like he experienced the same as his Major General who was already at the brink of madness earlier. He could swear to it that he saw him almost go insane.

"Alright! Let's have dinner." Kevin shot Lee an emotionless glare. He felt something odd crept in his heart. Men were naturally territorial and would never be happy to see their wives close to any other man. Kevin was not an exception to that and he felt genuinely neglected in this situation.

As a reaction, Lee ended up scratching his head as he wondered why the Major General suddenly acted weirdly to him. Kevin was very different from the former Major General. Was he just pretending to be calm? Lee was afraid that he might face his punishment somewhere in the future. He could not help but shudder at the thought. His Major General seemed to become more cunning.

"Please, take a seat!" Leena said to the housekeeper and frowned slightly. They had a lot of servants in their family. However, this situation where the masters ate while the servant stood beside never happened at her home

"Mrs. Gu. I'm not supposed to have dinner with you." The housekeeper waved her hand to reject the offer in a hurry. She would not accept such advice because she believed that servants were not supposed to have meals with their masters.

"It's okay! Take a seat and join us! We're family and you don't need to be too polite with us," Kevin also joined Leena to persuade the servant. He would feel more unacceptable and intolerable to enjoy dinner with somebody watching than Leena. As an enthusiastic soldier, he would never be comfortable with that thought as he believed in equality. There was no such thing as class difference to him.

"Yes! Major General and Leena are very easy-going. You can get along with them well. Don't worry. Just sit down and have dinner with us! The more people, the merrier, right?" said Lee. He and Kevin had always got along with each other in a comfortable way, be it inside or outside the army base. Kevin just simply didn't care about hierarchy and such.
