Chapter 1113: Chapter 1111: A Blind Date (part one)

Leena, what's the matter? Are you sick?" asked Kevin with a look of deep concern marring his features. She wasn't in the bedroom. So he came upstairs when he saw the light was on in this room. Strangely, she was knocking her head against the keyboard. Why? Did she have a headache? What was going on?

"Err... I'm fine. Where's Miss Ye? Did you send her home already?" Leena asked as she quickly closed the chat window. She didn't want Kevin to see what was on the screen. It was a private conversation.

"No, I just sent her downstairs. What are you doing?" He craned his neck to get a better look at the computer screen, but he saw nothing. It was just the desktop, no windows opened. What was she doing up here?

"I was chatting with a friend for a bit. Do you want some fruits? I've got some cut up. I could fetch a plate for you," Leena answered, a bit awkwardly. Her face flushed. She was afraid that Kevin would find out her little secret. And that wouldn't do at all.

No, I'm not a big fan of fruit -- you know that. Anything you want to ask me?" Kevin took a seat on the floor, and then met Leena's gaze. Though he wondered why on earth she would have chosen Korean style for her workshop decor, it wasn't the right time to ask. He needed to explain something to her.

"You tell me. Should I ask you anything? Or is there anything you haven't told me?" she asked. Holding his gaze, she tilted her head.

"So the necklace doesn't bother you, then?" Kevin pressed his lips together firmly. He thought she would at least ask why he had gotten back so late. But the only thing she asked was whether he'd sent Louisa home, not anything more about his relationship with the girl. She also didn't ask about the necklace like he imagined she would.

"What necklace?" Leena drew a deep breath quietly. The question was too sensitive to talk about right now. It was a real sore spot. So she pretended not to know about it. Ignoring it was the best way to keep her sanity right now. She really felt like running off so she wouldn't have to talk about it.

Nana, you know what I'm talking about. Please don't run off. We need to talk. At least give me a chance to explain." Kevin put his hands on her shoulders, forcing her to look directly into his eyes. This time, there was no escaping it. She had to face it, and so did he. And they'd do so together.

"Fine. Since you seem to have something to say, spit it out. I'm your captive audience." She smiled, but it was a joyless affair. It had a taste of bitterness behind it that she couldn't hide.

"I bought the necklace as a birthday present for Louisa. A friend picked it for me. Remember that time I went away for training? Yeah, that's when he bought it for me. It's just a birthday present. I promised her I'd get her a gift. And I did. Whatever else you've heard, it isn't true." Kevin said every word clearly. He didn't want her to misunderstand a single syllable. It was an honest gift, and he was regretting ever giving Louisa a present.

"I know that. And I believe you." Leena smiled sweetly to him. She had seen the necklace when he'd just come back from training. She thought it was a gift for her. She tucked it away, resolving to act surprised when Kevin gave it to her. But instead, he gave it to Louisa, while he didn't get her a thing. How could she not know anything about the necklace? What she didn't know was why he sent the necklace to Louisa. There was a lot to unpack there. Why would he give it to that girl, and not to her? And Louisa didn't make her feel any better about it. She made it seem like it was a gift from Kevin to prove his love to her. The commander's daughter was very good at finding people's weak spots and exploiting them.

"You know? So you know that it was a gift from me?" He frowned slightly and began to search for the answer in his mind, wondering how Leena would know anything about it. Yeah! I happened to see it the day you came back. But I didn't know it was a gift for Miss Ye." Leena laughed bitterly. And yes, she did think it was for her. But he didn't say anything to her about it, and then it went missing. And then she found out he bought it for Louisa.

Why didn't you ask me about it? You must have felt pretty bad when the necklace was gone. And I didn't give it to you. I'm sorry." Kevin felt really guilty now. He couldn't do anything but hold her gently in his arms. He kissed the top of her head. He knew clearly how she would feel when the necklace was missing. She would have all kinds of suspicions about whom he sent the necklace to. But she just held those in her mind all this time. She must have felt nervous those days. All this made him look like a cheater.

"Because I care about you. And I wanted to trust you. If I asked about it, you'd probably think I was a jealous woman. Or that I cared more about things than people. So I figured that you'd be mad at me, or you might feel that I invaded your privacy. So I pretended everything was okay, and then it might end up being okay. It's better than having you resent me." She knew that men really valued their pride and dignity. She would never do anything to hurt a guy that way. So she kept it bottle up.

Chapter 1114: Chapter 1112: A Blind Date (part two)

"Babe, I had no idea. I'm really sorry. And now I feel even worse, because I am not a good husband. I know you have taken a lot of craps from my family while you were still dealing with this. God, I feel like an asshole," said Kevin.

Kevin felt trapped. He didn't want to move to the capital city, so he married Leena to avoid being reassigned. He didn't want to be that far away from Daisy. And he knew that if she hadn't been something that he clung to out of desperation, they probably would still be strangers. And today, one-night stands were pretty common. People didn't just hop out of bed and into marriage just like that. She didn't have to marry him. But he married her to protect his own interests. And really, what did that do to her? All it did was to make her suspicious and bring her pain. But now, he was no longer using her. He really felt something for her.

"What's wrong with you, Kevin? Why are you getting so emotional? It's not like you. And frankly, it's kind a freaking me out. So what's going on? Are you trying to work up the nerve to tell me it's over? Or what?" asked Leena. Unconsciously, she trembled a bit. After all, for a long time, Kevin was dignified and awe-inspiring. He gave her heart a warm feeling. It was really not like him to be so indecisive.

"Or nothing. I don't have any earth-shattering news. I just want to tell you if you have any doubts about me, just ask. I'm your hubby, right? You should be able to ask me everything you want to know or tell me everything you have suffered. I wouldn't get upset. We're both adults," explained Kevin. He gently released her from his arms, and then looked into her eyes. He gave her the right to rein him in with a gentle tone that Leena had never heard before. There was no reluctance. He meant every word.

"So you're ready to give me your heart?" Leena asked. "I'd be happy if you are. You know you already have mine. But really, you don't have to if you don't want to." It wasn't love that brought them together, at least not in the beginning. She never thought that one day she'd care so much about him. And she even wanted to know what he was thinking. But instead of asking him, she used subterfuge to figure it out. But she fell in love first.

"I can't ask you to wait for me anymore. You've been waiting for a long time to hear me say that I love you. And I still don't know how I feel. I know I care, I can give you that. And I have never cheated on you, for what it's worth," Kevin said seriously. He'd never been emotional when it came to relationships. So it wasn't easy for him to have this heart-to-heart talk with Leena.

Leena laughed. Kevin shot her a strange look. "Kevin, you're so serious right now. Lighten up." Secretly, Leena had some very strong feelings right now. She felt love, and care, and who-knew-what. She didn't really know how to answer him, so she could only laugh to hide the unknown emotions rolling around in her heart. Laughter might also dispel the tension between them.

Hey, this isn't easy for me. I pour my heart out to you, and you just giggle like a little girl?" Kevin pretended to be angry and turned his back on her, trying to make himself look pitiful.

Err... Actually, I'm sorry. I didn't mean like that. Please don't be mad." Leena stretched out her finger to poke his arm. She was really afraid that Kevin was truly angry with her.

"That all depends on you," he said, simply. Kevin still kept his poker face and gave her a serious look.

"So what do I do? Tell me. I've already apologized," Leena said. This was not going the way she wanted. Leena was really taken aback by this strange exchange, and she genuinely wanted to know how to fix this. She couldn't know that he was playing a game with her.

"Well..." he said, sounding like he was deep in thought, "give me a kiss and I'll think about forgiving you." Kevin leaned in close. Their faces were just inches apart. He still had that grave look on his face, but he was secretly pleased, deep in his heart.

"I don't think I stuttered. So... Are you gonna kiss me or not?" Kevin's handsome face was a little red as he had never done this before. So you could imagine how embarrassed he was now.

Leena pursed her lips. She didn't feel strange about just kissing him spontaneously. But like this, so heartfelt and so earnest, it was a little weird. She closed her eyes. Finally, momentarily, she gave him a quick peck on the cheek. But Kevin suddenly turned towards her. She opened her eyes quickly, looking at him in surprise. Kevin smiled mischievously and pulled her to him for a deep, passionate kiss. It was with his whole heart. This led to a wonderful night, and opened the way for a really happy road trip.

The sun spread its golden rays over the city, revealing all its glorious sights. After talking with Kevin last night, Claire actually started to warm up to Leena. She wasn't as confrontational as she was before.

"Claire, I'm going to hang out with a friend today. Can you stay at home by yourself?" Leena asked. Today was Patricia's blind date, and she wanted Leena along for moral support, and as an exit plan if things went south. She picked out some black items from her closet. That way she wouldn't steal the limelight from Patricia.

"Go! Have fun! I'll just catch some Zs. I didn't get a lot of sleep last night," answered Claire. Although she didn't really want to stay home alone, she was still considerate and decided not to make a fuss.

"Alright. I'll be back before dinner. So don't worry. You'll get fed tonight." To hide her beauty, Leena donned a pair of ordinary glasses. Instantly, she looked a tad less attractive. This was intentional -- this was Patricia's day.

Chapter 1115: Chapter 1113: A Blind Date (part three)

"I'm not a kid anymore. Why would I worry about that?" Claire raised her head from her magazine and took a look at Leena. When she saw Leena's ugly black dress, she frowned, but said nothing. She was done teasing her, so she just went back to reading her magazine again.

"Well then, I'm off. See you tonight!"

It was so weird. Leena got so used to Claire saying mean things that she almost missed it. But she also felt pretty good not have to fend off her insults.

"Bye,"

Claire said lazily, and didn't even look up again. She just continued to randomly turn pages until she found an article she liked. And Leena didn't care anyway. She left the house in a good mood. She thought she might need to take a little extra time to deal with Claire. Claire had a way of stopping you just so you could listen to more of her crap. What she didn't expect was that Claire hadn't done that today. So she saved a lot of time.

Leena showed up at the coffee shop like she promised. But where was Patricia Bai? Maybe she was early? Nevertheless, she looked around until she found a seat near the window. From this vantage point, she would see Patricia when she came in.

"Excuse me, are you Leena Leng?" said a decidedly masculine voice. A little confused, Leena looked up at the guy.

"Yes, do I know you?" Leena frowned and asked him curiously. He wasn't bad looking. But there were guys that looked a lot more handsome than him. Besides, she had Kevin, and he was the only one she needed.

"Hi! I am Patricia's friend, Summer Xia. Happy to meet you. Mind if I sit here?" Summer asked. He put away the photo he had of Leena. He was using it to try and figure out who he should talk to. He was glad he found the right person, though her picture looked prettier than the girl who was here now.

"Nice to meet you, too. Please have a seat." Leena tried to smile at him, and managed a weak one. What kind of name was 'Summer' for a man? It was usually a girl's name. She wanted to laugh, but this wasn't the time or place. She cursed Patricia inwardly. What the hell did that girl do now? Wasn't this supposed to be Patricia's blind date? So where was she? And why did she act so mysterious?

"Patricia told me about you. She said you were hot, and you are hot." The man named Summer Xia sat down elegantly opposite her. He almost had a noble bearing.

"Ha ha! Thank you for your praising! I don't think Patricia's here yet, though." Leena just smiled at him. She was surprised to hear that Patricia said anything nice about her. She was always critiquing her makeup, or pointing out her "problem areas." So that was nice of her to tell him she was hot.

"She's probably at home! She hasn't told you? I asked her to introduce you to me." Summer shot Leena a confused look. Patricia was always going on about how beautiful Leena was, and how kind she was. So he told Patricia that he wanted to get to know this kind and beautiful girl.

"What? So it's not a blind date for her, but for me?" She said it louder than she intended, but it was such a shock. Patricia had lied to her. But why? She was already married! She did think it weird that Patricia's mom would force her to go on a blind date. That was the story she fed Leena. When she stopped to think about it, Patricia's mom was a little more progressive than that. So Patricia set her up.

It is not as serious as a blind date. We can just get to know each other. Are you thirsty? I'll help you order." Summer was warm and enthusiastic. He was really excited about his date with this sweet, lovely girl. Leena felt like running away screaming, but she kept her cool.

"I think we've gotten to know each other. We don't need to order coffee," Leena said. She lowered her head and felt depressed. It was her blind date, not Patricia's. She'd been lured here against her will. How could she have coffee with another man? Particularly he was with romance in mind. She was already married.

Why? Do you have something else to do? Or have I creeped you out already?" Summer gave her a playful smile. He could see that Leena deliberately dressed up to look like a sensible adult, eschewing fashion, hoping to make Patricia look better next to her. But sometimes, she still seemed immature. The little girl inside her couldn't help but show her face every once in awhile.

"Uh...yes. Yes, I have something else to do." Leena nodded rapidly. Would he believe her? She needed an escape plan. This was not what she signed up for at all.

"I see how you are.

You want to go home because you hate me!" Summer regarded Leena's embarrassed expression. He smiled sadly. She was lovely. And he could obviously know what she was feeling. She didn't know how to hide her emotions and he knew she was uncomfortable. How she felt was written all over her face.

"Okay, just stop. I've only just met you. I haven't known you long enough to hate you. Hell, I don't hate anybody." Leena smiled back. She calmed down after he said this. She learned to hide her real thoughts from Kevin, but she didn't need to do that here. Did he really think she'd fall for it? He was just pretending. He was trying to get sympathy and trying to get her to stay. She wondered if he were smart enough to figure out she wasn't buying it.

"Does that mean you'll at least have coffee with me?" Summer did a little victory dance in his heart. Being pitiful was something he was good at. All he had to do was look at her with those puppy-dog eyes, and Leena changed her mind instantly. What he didn't know was that she had already seen through his tricks. It was too early to congratulate himself.

My Wife is a beautiful Officer Chapter 1116 - Chapter 1114: Being Jealous (part one)

Chapter 1116: Chapter 1114: Being Jealous (part one)

You are Patricia's friend. I should at least stay for a while for her sake. A sweet smile spread across Leena's face. At the moment, she looked like an innocent angel. However, she cursed Patricia a thousand times in her heart. Patricia had told her that she had been forced by her family to go on a date. She had begged Leena to accompany her. Now it seemed that everything Patricia said was to fool her into coming here alone. She took advantage of Leena's kind heart. What was more, Leena knew Patricia was a sly one. She had told herself that she wouldn't get caught in Patricia's trap. How wrong Leena was! Now she sat there, fuming and pretending nonchalance.

At least? You wound me! I must really have a bad reputation if you are so harsh on me. Summer Xia forced a wry smile and laughed at himself. This woman was sharp with her words. She didn't call him names, but what she said frustrated him very much.

Summer Xia, right? In this cold winter, I am literally feeling the warmth of summer... not because of you, but because of the idiotic way you act. Stop behaving so foolishly. You make me want to laugh! You know what, Summer? You act so childish and I could not be more familiar with it. I've been bored with these antics since middle school. It is so out of date. Please! If you want to impress me, you'll have to try another way." The smile on Leena's face still looked beautiful and pure, but her words revealed that she wasn't so easy to please.

Well, maybe I can't keep up with the trend these days. Come on, don't be so harsh on me! Don't dismiss me so easily." Summer's eyes widened. Leena's harangue surprised him and he stared at her, puzzled. Didn't Patricia describe her as gentle and sweet? From where he sat, he did not feel that way at all! Leena was more of a cunning girl, who did not allow herself to be in a situation she didn't want to be in.

I'm sorry. I'm just not used to a cunning man behaving as if he is truly innocent and wet behind the ears, Leena said sardonically, pursing her lips. He should probably ask Edward - who was a real expert in this respect - for tips. Edward certainly had rich experience and Summer would be a good student under him.

Hah! That's funny. Can I call you Leena? Summer never expected Leena to be so potty-mouthed. She disregarded his feelings and spoke without any charity towards him. She unmasked him right away, leaving him at a loss. Summer did not know how to respond to her and changed the topic of conversation.

I'm sorry, but I don't think we know each other well enough to be on a first-name basis. Call me Miss Leng, please! Leena was well-aware that she was a married woman, so she replied to Summer in a polite and distant manner. She refused his proposal and kept her restraint in check.

Well, fine. But we've gotten to know each other today and I'm sure we will get more familiar later on. Summer shrugged and smiled indifferently. He had foreseen her refusal so he was not too disappointed.

Summer Xia, I want to make sure. Do you merely want to get to know me or do you want to date me? Or is it that you are one of those wile men, who only want to have a one night stand with a woman? Leena sneered lightly. Judging from Summer's appearance, she did not believe that Summer was single and didn't have a girlfriend. He was interested in Leena only because Patricia told him something about her that aroused a need for conquest in him. Leena knew such men very well, who believed in showing off their power by the notches on their bedposts. Unfortunately, he had mistaken Leena for the wrong woman. She was not an innocent girl who would easily fall into his trap, nor was she interested. She had many excellent men around her. More importantly, somebody already resided in her heart, and both her heart and soul belonged to that person.

I want to make sure too. Are you always so straightforward with everyone, Miss Leng? Summer was not an expert at being artful. Leena's direct responses made him feel a bit awkward. He admitted that he wanted to get to know her because of her beauty, but he was no playboy.

Oh, not necessarily. It depends on the subject at hand, not the people I am talking to. Please don't mind if you feel offended, Leena replied, her teeth gritting. If Patricia was here, Leena would set her straight. How could she fool her into a date with this childish man?

"Now I know why you don't have a boyfriend despite your beautiful face." Summer touched his hand to his forehead and smiled lazily. He thought this pretty little woman would be softer and sweeter than Patricia. He now realized he had gotten it all wrong. She was like a little hedgehog who protected herself with her thorns.

"Oh? Why do you think so? I'd like to hear more." All of a sudden, Leena wondered if he was as bad as she imagined. She grew curious about what he had to say.

"According to me, a man would not want a girlfriend who is more forceful than he is," Summer said wickedly. He was not as enchanting as Rain, who left him far behind in that respect. Summer sounded more like a bully when he responded to Leena.

"Then that man is narrow-minded. Why? Are you also one of those men, Summer Xia?" Leena's eyes flashed in annoyance as she gazed at him with fake interest. She looked adorable and geeky wearing her glasses, so Summer did not sense any guile in her.

"Miss Leng, will you stop calling me Summer Xia every time you speak to me? It makes me feel stressful. Please just call me Summer," Summer argued, frowning.

"Don't you worry. I'm not your professor. You don't need to be stressed around me. Also, you are Patricia's friend, and I'm sure you are not a student anymore." Leena reached out and pushed her glasses up. She regretted wearing them as she had to adjust them from time to time.

They chatted with smiles on their faces. Even though their conversation was not as pleasant as an onlooker would think, the two of them managed to keep the atmosphere peaceful. However, they didn't notice the pair of eagle eyes staring at them from a corner of the coffee shop.

"Major General, it's Leena. Shall we go over and greet her?" At first, Lee had no idea what his Major General was staring at so intently, until he followed his gaze and saw Leena.

"Yes. Why not? Shall we say hello?" Kevin turned his stare away from that direction and took a look at Lee, his eyes gleaming. He didn't expect to see such an interesting scene, yes, 'interesting', when he arrived to meet a client here. He noticed Leena the moment she came in. She didn't see him because he sat in a barely noticeable corner of the shop. Kevin had planned to walk over after he finished with business, but unexpectedly, a young boy he had never seen before appeared before her. That was right, a young boy. To Kevin, he was merely a kid in a candy store.

Uh. I don't know. But Major General, are we not heading to the army base now?" The corner of Lee's mouth turned down. The client had already gone. But the Major General neither walked over to Leena nor did he decide to return to the army base. 'What is he planning?' Lee thought, puzzled. 'The report needs to be dealt with urgently.'

"Why are we in such a rush?" Kevin asked him frigidly. A troubled feeling surged up in his heart when he saw Leena talking to the other man with an angelic smile on her face. He did not know what to do about it, so he decided to wait and watch.

My Wife is a beautiful Officer Chapter 1117 - Chapter 1115: Being Jealous (part two)

Chapter 1117: Chapter 1115: Being Jealous (part two)

"I'm not in a rush. I'm just concerned that the Commander would need the report soon," Lee murmured faintly. Was it his fault that he reminded his Major General? They had been here for too long now.

"Lee, do you think I should go over and say hello before we return to the base?" Kevin sought Lee's suggestion, not being able to stand it anymore when he saw Leena burst into laughter once again.

"Of course, Major General. You should do it now. You should go over there and declare yourself no matter who he is," Lee whispered his agreement and encouraged Kevin. His Major General finally made up his mind to do something about this situation. Lee panicked, knowing that he was about to be entangled in big trouble.

Leena smiled and chatted with Summer. Suddenly, she felt chills on her back, as if a freezing wind had come this way. She could not help but quiver.

Miss Leng, I am wondering if I can take you out later? It is really nice talking to you. We are the same, don't you think?" Summer felt like he was at a disadvantage, but he was attracted to Leena. She was not pretentious and always said what was on her mind. He wanted to get to know her better.

Uh! Well..." Leena was in trouble. She did not know how to respond to his invitation. Did he enjoy being insulted? She was not even being kind to him. Why did he still want to be her friend? Whatever she had said was to scare him into not wanting to talk to her anymore. It appeared her plan had failed.

Nana, tell him. Would you go out with him?" Kevin's mouth curled. He looked at Leena pointedly, his eyes locking on hers. He asked her the question casually, as if the young boy was not with them.

"Kevin. Why... why are you here?" Leena was shocked and stood up immediately at her husband's sudden arrival. In doing so, she hit the table and almost fell down.

Are you so excited to see me that you are throwing yourself at me?" Kevin grabbed her arm and kept her from falling down. He held Leena close so she would not get hurt. Since he was still in his military uniform, it would not be appropriate for him to behave intimately with her in public. He was a soldier after all.

"N-no. I'm just surprised." Leena's adorable face turned red at his quip. There was nothing between her and Summer, but she had no idea what to do. She was sure Kevin had misunderstood the situation.

Leena, your husband and I are surprised to see you too," Lee peeped at the proper time. Summer could guess who this man was and Lee's words made him even more anxious. His heart thudded. 'Is this tall man her husband? Oh, please no. If it's true, how would I explain this date to him?' Summer thought, sweating. 'Would I be accused of breaking a military marriage and put into prison?'

Nana, is this your friend?" Kevin turned his frosty stare to Summer. He did not betray his emotions, even though he felt uncomfortable as hell seeing his wife talk to this boy so gleefully.

Oh! This is just one of my best friends' friend. We got to know each other today only," Leena replied, not thinking too much of it. There was nothing she wanted to hide from Kevin.

Oh, you just got to know him today. Nice to meet you. I'm Kevin Gu." Kevin decided to play the mature man. He calmed down in front of his potential rival. This way, he would win without a fight.

"Nice to meet you. I'm Summer Xia." Summer was frightened upon seeing the shining military bars on Kevin's shoulders, but he strove to maintain his cool and reached out to shake hands with Kevin. He imagined it would be a tough handshake, like what he had seen on TV dramas. Fortunately, it was not.

Sit down, please. Summer Xia, you don't need to be nervous. I'm not a bad guy." Kevin smiled when he saw Summer's forehead gleam with sweat. He sat down next to Leena.

"Oh! Yes, yes." Summer shivered and sat down. How he wished he could get away! But he dared not escape since Kevin looked to be very powerful. He cursed Patricia silently. Had she deliberately put him in this terrible situation? Why did not she tell him that her best friend was a married woman? Moreover, her husband was a Major General! He never expected to see such a big figure in person.

Where is your friend? Isn't she here? Or did she abandon you and won't be coming at all?" Kevin teased and looked at Leena, leaning against the back of his chair leisurely.

"Can I say the latter?" Leena looked at Kevin pathetically. She knew Kevin was good at reasoning. He observed details that nobody else could. He must know what happened to her even without her telling him.

Yes, of course you can. It seems that this friend of yours doesn't have a good opinion of me," Kevin said while casting a sidelong look at Summer. His mouth twitched.

"Um? Why would you say that?" Leena was usually very smart, but somehow in front of Kevin, she behaved like a three-year-old.

Isn't it obvious? How could she introduce you to a man as your potential boyfriend?" Just as Leena had imagined, Kevin was clever enough to see what happened here. He didn't seem worried and his smile grew wider.

I'm sorry. I didn't tell her that I've already married. She is not fully responsible for this," Leena winced, covering up for Patricia immediately. Leena felt anxious. Truthfully, she was not sure if Kevin was really angry.

"Oh, I get it. It seems I should be responsible for this, since you don't want to be seen with someone as unpresentable as me. That's why you didn't tell her you have a husband. Lee, let's go back to the army base," Kevin announced and immediately shot up to walk out with Lee. He never expected his wife to want to hide his existence. It felt like being stabbed in the heart.

"Sure. Goodbye, Leena!" Lee threw a concerned look at Leena and followed Kevin in a hurry. He knew the Major General was furious. Lee could sense that Leena was very important to him.

Wait, Kevin." Leena did not anticipate that things would go like this. She grabbed her bag in a hurry and ran toward Kevin. Summer was insignificant at the moment.

"Leena is following us, Major General. Shall we wait for her?" Lee asked in a concerned tone. He looked at Kevin with worry in his eyes.

"You go. Wait for me in the car." Kevin didn't say that he wanted to wait for Leena, but he slowed down and sent Lee away. Obviously, they were going to have a confrontation about this. Kevin was not angry that Leena didn't tell her friend about his existence, but he very much minded that he was apparently not good enough for her. She couldn't even tell others that he was her husband! In all honesty, Kevin was angrier at himself than he was at his wife.

Let me just explain, Kevin. It's really not what you think," Leena said breathlessly as she caught up to him. She grasped Kevin's hand without thinking twice.

"Did you run here? Look at all these sweats." Kevin frowned. He reached out and wiped the sweat beads off her forehead.

"Yes, I ran because you got so angry and left all of a sudden. You didn't even allow me to explain anything," Leena grumbled as her jaw tightened.

"It's not that I did not allow you to explain. I just need to return to the army base soon, so I left." Kevin took a look at the wristwatch Leena had gifted him. It was late.

"But you were really angry. I was worried about you," Leena complained. She pressed her lips together, looking sad.

"I'm sorry, okay? I was not being myself just now. Let's talk about it later when I get home tonight, all right? I have to head back now." Kevin studied the time again. He was supposed to be at the army base already but got delayed because of Leena's appearance. The door in his heart was already open to her. It was something he did not quite realize about himself. He behaved so abnormally when he saw her with another guy that he was ready to throw aside his work. Kevin hated seeing her smile so brightly with another man.

"Okay, I'll talk to you tonight." Leena bit her lip. Her face was pale. She thought the world of Kevin and was afraid to lose him. It was unnerving to see him swing round and just walk off. She couldn't imagine her life without him.

"Okay. Take care. I have to go." Kevin tucked the escaped tendrils of Leena's hair behind her ear, wearing an affable smile. Leena's insides warmed.

"Bye." Leena reluctantly let go of Kevin's hand and watched his tall and handsome figure get inside the military Hummer. Lee was in the driver seat. She didn't turn her gaze until she saw the car vanish in the heavy traffic.

"Miss Leng, are you all right?" Summer, who had followed them outside the coffee shop, asked in a concerned tone. He detected a trace of sadness on Leena's expression.

"Oh, yes. I'm fine. Nice of you to ask." Leena composed herself and dragged her attention back to Summer. A small smile graced her lips, making her appear even more beautiful.

"I'm sorry. I didn't know you were married." Summer felt a sense of deep loss. He had been attracted to Leena at the very first sight and wanted to pursue her passionately. But to his intense disappointment, this beauty was already married.

"I should have told you earlier. Now you know why I didn't give you a chance." Leena did not like to trifle with other men's affections. She was used to nipping their adoration in the bud before they got out of hand.

"I hate to be blunt, but I don't understand. Why did you marry a military officer? You're beautiful, vivacious and charming. You would find it hard to adapt to the lonely life," Summer couldn't resist asking, although he knew it was uncalled for.

"Sorry, but I don't think it's any of your business." Displeasure wrinkled Leena's forehead. She didn't like others prying into her private matters. This was the first time that she had met Summer. She couldn't open her heart to a man she barely knew.

You're right. I ought not to have asked you such a thing. I'm sorry for going too far. Don't be mad at me. I think we can still be friends, even though you are married," Upon seeing how Leena's face had darkened, Summer immediately apologized to her. He realized he shouldn't have asked her the stupid question. It was an invasion of her privacy.

"We'll see about that. Thank you for buying me the cup of coffee. I have to go home now. Goodbye!" Leena was in no mood to chat with Summer anymore. She needed to come up with something soon to clear the air with Kevin.

"Bye! I hope we can meet again," Summer bid her goodbye reluctantly. Leena, who was so sweet and charming, was an absolute stunner. More importantly, she wasn't big-headed or arrogant. She could be a little wicked, but she was kind at heart.

Leena opened and shut her mouth slowly, withholding her words. She glanced back at Summer and walked over to her car in haste. They had met each other in passing and talked for a brief moment of time. He wouldn't have any impact on her life. So why should she care about him?

On his way back to the army base, Kevin remained silent. He held his fist to his mouth while his other hand cupped his chin. Trailing a long index finger across his lips, he gazed blankly at the scenery that whirled past him from outside the window, taking no notice of its beauty. Kevin replayed the scene he saw at the coffee shop in his mind. Leena let out unbridled smiles.

So that's what she looks like when she's happy,' he mused, 'That's the grin I never get to see when she's with me.' Kevin felt a sudden pang of jealousy. 'Maybe I don't care enough about Leena. Maybe I don't make her feel secure and protected, so she doesn't laugh freely when she's with me,' he thought. Truthfully, he didn't think Summer posed a threat to him. Leena was a sensible woman. She wouldn't give up a mature and steady husband, only to choose a young and puerile man instead. Kevin set his mind at rest. He knew that Leena felt immeasurable love towards him. However, that didn't mean Kevin could squander that love as he pleased. He needed to figure out what to do about this situation.

Through the rear-view mirror, Lee looked at Kevin with worry in his eyes. Kevin was behaving strangely. He usually talked a lot, but right now he was just mute. He had the habit of getting lost in thought but Lee had never seen him look as sad as he did just now. His sorrow made Lee uneasy.

Kevin was still staring into the distance when the car came to a stop. He didn't snap back until Lee reminded him that they were at their destination. Then Kevin picked up his briefcase, got out of the car abruptly, and bolted to the office building.

"Hey! Major General Gu, why are you in such a hurry?" Daisy frowned at Kevin as he bumped into her. The documents in her hands went flying to the ground. "What happened to Kevin? He has a reputation for being calm and cool-headed. Why is he in such a hurry?" Daisy thought with a look of mild confusion on her face.

"Ah, sorry. I didn't notice." Kevin bent down and frantically helped Daisy scoop up the documents. The papers he picked up scattered to the ground once again since his hands were already full.

"Look, I get you're trying to help, but you're just making it worse. Forget it. Let me pick them up myself. The Commander is waiting for you. Go see him. You're very late," Daisy urged Kevin while squatting down to pick up the documents. 'My God,' she sighed inwardly. 'This is a mess. It'll take me a few minutes to rearrange these again.'

"Okay. Sorry again, Daisy. I'll talk to you later." Realizing that there was no time to lose, Kevin stood up and strode to the Commander's office.

"Senior Colonel Ouyang, let me help you." Lee, who had followed Kevin, bent down to pick up Daisy's papers.

"Thank you, Lee. What happened to Kevin? He seems a little absent-minded. It's not like how he usually is," Daisy asked him, still frowning at what happened.

"Err... I have no idea. Maybe it's because of his wife." Lee stood up and handed over the documents to Daisy. He didn't intend to tell Daisy what he had seen at the coffee shop.

"Leena? Didn't you go out on business? How is this related to her?" Daisy's expression was puzzled. Although Leena sometimes acted like a willful child, she was also intelligent and sensible. She didn't make trouble.

"Well, it's a long story. You'd better ask Major General Gu for details. I'm not privy to this matter, so I should keep quiet," Lee said in embarrassment and touched his forehead.

"Okay, I see. You can go now." Daisy turned around and walked into her office. There was no point in forcing Lee to spill the beans. As Kevin's guard, he wouldn't tell her about Kevin's personal affairs. He couldn't break his trust with his Major General. It was a strict code of practice that he had to adhere to.

Chapter 1119: Chapter 1117: Relief (part two)

It took Kevin an hour to finish reporting the work to the Commander. It was almost time for him to go home, but he still had a lot of work left to do, so he needed to stay behind for a while.

Standing outside Daisy's office, Kevin hesitated for a fraction of a second before he raised his hand to knock on her door. Thinking of the conversation with the Commander, he sighed with profound resignation. The Commander had assigned Kevin to assist with the new mission. For that Kevin would have to leave for a few days once again. In the past, leaving home didn't pose any trouble for him. But now after marrying Leena, he was reluctant to do so. They seldom got time together and it bothered him so much. Kevin didn't want to act in defiance of the Commander's orders, but he was tired of this way of life.

"Come in," Daisy answered the door without raising her head. She sat in her chair, examining the sniper rifle in her hands while meticulously recording the data on paper.

"What are you doing?" Kevin asked as he walked in. Watching Daisy, he once again realized that he didn't have feelings for her anymore. He had left his infatuation far behind.

"Oh! I'm checking for the structure, range, and deadliness of AK-9. Are you done with the meeting with the Commander?" Daisy put the sniper rifle aside and asked Kevin with curiosity. She wasn't into gossip, but she was concerned about Leena. She hadn't seen that girl for so many days and missed her quite a lot.

"Yeah. Did you find anything?" Kevin asked casually as he sat down on the couch. Truthfully, he wasn't very interested in the sniper at the moment.

"Not yet. I'm still studying it. But now you can tell me what happened." Daisy leaned back against her chair comfortably, paying attention to Kevin.

"Nothing. I was in a hurry so I didn't notice you." Kevin forced a smile. Everything had been going well until he stumbled upon Leena talking cheerfully with another guy at the coffee shop. His heart plummeted once again.

"Don't lie to me. I can tell you have something on your mind from the distant look in your eyes. I heard it was Leena. What happened? Did you quarrel with her?" Daisy asked tentatively, even as she realized that couldn't be the case. A mature and sensible man like Kevin wouldn't quarrel with his wife.

"Lee told you? When did he become as gossipy as Mark?" Kevin gave her a helpless and wry smile. He should punish Lee. Only then would he restrain himself from tattling on Kevin behind his back.

"Maybe he is subconsciously influenced. Did you notice he is not as prissy as before?" Daisy envied Kevin, who had Lee as his guard. Lee was meticulous about everything. She hoped Mark could follow Lee's example, but instead Lee got affected.

"You're right. It looks like Mark is the bad egg. I need to punish him sometime," Kevin teased, knowing he wouldn't do anything to Mark.

"Good. I won't bother myself to do it then. But don't try to change the topic. What's wrong with you and my girl Leena? Did you bully her?" Daisy pinned Kevin with a sharp and penetrating look, forcing him to tell her the truth.

"Just like you said, she is your girl. With you as her sister, I wouldn't dare to bully her." Kevin smiled bitterly. He hadn't done anything to Leena, but Daisy already declared that Leena was her girl. Kevin must have a death wish if he truly tried to bully Leena now.

"Uh huh. And you shouldn't try to either. I'll never forgive you for it." Daisy wore a self-satisfied smirk on her face. Obviously, this was something Kevin and Leena had to deal with themselves. As an outsider, she didn't mean to interfere between them.

"Why do I suddenly feel threatened? Am I allowed to counter-attack?" Kevin checked his watch. Although he was short on time, he was not in a hurry to leave.

"Major General Gu, are you openly challenging me?" Daisy's eyes flashed mischievously. She had already been looking for someone to practice with her, and here was Kevin, volunteering himself.

"You misheard me, Daisy. I don't want to compete with you. If I hurt you, Mr. Mu would eat me alive. I shouldn't ask for trouble by goading you." Edward already didn't like Kevin. If he knew that Kevin hurt the woman he loved so ardently, he wouldn't let Kevin off so easily. It was better not to be in his bad books.

"Oh? Do you think I lack the skills? Don't look down on me!" Daisy cracked her knuckles, itching to have a go at him.

"Come on. I can't afford to offend you two. I should leave. I don't want to invite disaster." Kevin stood up. He had to finish his work.

"Ah. Don't be so solemn. Get your things done and go home to Leena early. She needs you." Daisy shook her head with understanding. Leena might get lonely, so she hoped that Kevin would go home early. As military officers, both Daisy and Kevin were up to their eyes in work. They owed their families a lot.

"Okay. You should go home early too. Don't work so late every day." It made Kevin's heart ache to see Daisy work overtime. Army life was tough on a woman.

"I can't. I'm very busy. You know, there are many drills and missions recently. I have a lot of work to do," Daisy said, sighing. Her overbearing husband resented her staying out late these days.

"I owe you an apology. I took a week off, so you had to do my work too," Kevin said, feeling sorry for her. It was his fault that she had so much work.

"It's not your fault. All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy. You can't work non-stop. You needed a break. Don't worry about me. I am accustomed to it. I won't be so busy once I get the work at hand done." Daisy comforted Kevin with a smile. She massaged between her eyebrows. Looking at the piles of documents on her desk, she knew she would go home late tonight too.

"I hope so. Well, go on with your work. I have to leave." Kevin turned and walked away smartly without feeling any nostalgia for the old days. A few months ago, he felt reluctant to leave Daisy's office each time he visited her. But now that feeling was long gone. He didn't have a crush on Daisy anymore.

Daisy looked at Kevin's receding figure, lost in thought. She wondered if his love for her had already extinguished. If so, it would be to the satisfaction of all. She wouldn't feel so guilty in front of Leena.

When the night fell, Kevin finally walked back to his office from Falcon's. He was covered in dust after his demonstrations to the soldiers.

Kevin picked up the briefcase on the table without tidying himself up and hurried out. It was already past seven p.m. Even if he drove at high speed all the way back home, it would be past eight once he arrived.

Kevin was surprised to see Edward's eye-catching Lamborghini parked at the gate as he drove out. 'Surely he came to pick Daisy up,' Kevin thought to himself, 'It's late. Hasn't Daisy gone back yet? I thought she went home long ago. If I had known she is still working in her office, I would have dropped in.'

Kevin's car came to a stop. He opened the door and got out. He had to say hello since he had already seen Edward. Edward was one of Leena's brothers, and so he was Kevin's brother, too. He had to show his respect.

Edward had also noticed a car coming his way. Originally he thought it was Daisy's military Hummer since they looked the same. But as the car approached, he was disappointed to find that it wasn't hers. Edward didn't realize it was Kevin's until he stepped out. Despite his dislike for Kevin, Edward got out to greet him too. The alluring, irresistible smile on his face attracted a lot of admiring glances.

Why are you here, Mr. Mu? Hasn't Daisy gone home yet?" Kevin greeted Edward first. From what he knew of Edward, the latter was arrogant enough not to say hello to others on his own initiative.

Chapter 1120: Chapter 1118: A Peaceful, Easy Evening (part one)

"You wouldn't see me here if Daisy were back," said Edward casually. Leaning comfortably against his car, he wore a charming smile on his face. The man was the essence of chill and coolness.

"Daisy has a lot on her plate lately. The military gave her a lot of work to do. She has been so busy, she probably doesn't have time to think about home and her man. Did you try calling?" Kevin smiled back at him. When he folded his arms comfortably, the muscles on his arms expanded to fill his sleeves, his exquisite chest easily visible underneath his shirt. The man's figure was enough to cast a deadly spell over even the strongest willed woman. No wonder so many were hysterically infatuated with him.

"Not yet. Just go home, Kevin! I'll wait a little while longer." Edward lifted his head, as if by looking in that direction he could see the inside of the army base. To him, it was better to leave Daisy alone when she was working. She wouldn't hang around the base after work, and calling her might mean that he would have to wait longer for her to get done with her work. If he just showed a little patience, it was its own reward.

"Alright. I'm taking off then. Call Mark if you really get antsy. He should be able to remind her when it is time to stop and go home." There was a reason Kevin said that -- Daisy was known to get caught up in her work and forget to stop. She worked hard, sometimes too hard.

"Yeah, I'll do that. By the way, treat Leena nicely." No sooner had Kevin turned to leave than Edward said this. It wasn't by chance, and it wasn't a standard goodbye. Edward hoped that Kevin would just forget about Daisy and his infatuation, and Leena would have his heart. Anyone would feel sorry for Leena if she were unhappy. That was why those words left his lips, and he hoped it would make an impression on the young soldier.

"I will. Bye!" Edward's words had the intended effect. Kevin's body stiffened, and it was a few seconds before he could manage to get any words out at all. Edward didn't have to remind him to treat her well, but in those words was buried a message: "Forget about Daisy, and learn to love your wife."

A satisfied smile broke across Edward's face. Sometimes, it didn't pay to be too direct. Just a couple of words in the right place at the right time could communicate volumes. Men talked this way all the time. A clever man, Kevin must have understood the meaning in Edward's farewell.

Kevin climbed into the car. He nodded at Edward before driving off at full speed. His lips curled into a bitter smile. There were a lot of rumors about Edward, particularly concerning his skill and ruthlessness, and above all his intelligence. The president of FX International made it clear in just a few words that Kevin should just let Daisy go, and forget about his crush. And in doing so, love Leena with all his heart and soul. But this was not a novel idea. Since Leena was like a sister to him, he wanted her to be happy. As a husband, he wouldn't stand for any rivals for Daisy's affections. It was better for Kevin to move on and love the one he was supposed to love.

The night fell earlier in winter. The city had turned into a sea of colorful lights when Kevin hit downtown. Lights turned on or off now and again. They gave warmth and light to those still lingering on this cold winter night. If every light represented a home, then Kevin hoped these lights would never go out. Everyone deserved a home of their own, somewhere to go, somewhere to rest, and live, and love. These lights were comforting, and told Kevin he was home.

Kevin slowed down when he passed a flower shop. He thought for a second, and then just sped up again and continued to go home. Yes, it was romantic to get a bouquet of flowers for your girl, and she might even be more loving after she got a gift like that. But he didn't feel all that romantic today.

"It's so late. Why isn't Kevin home yet? Is he usually this late?" This was not the first time Claire complained about Kevin being late. She was so anxious she could not tear her eyes away from the clock on the wall.

"He must be really busy. He works overtime a lot anyway. Are you hungry, Claire? Supper is ready now. We don't have to wait for Kevin," said Leena with an embarrassed smile. Actually she got used to waiting. Kevin was late coming home a lot, so there was not much to do about it. She preferred to eat with him. But it was not fair for Claire to wait too.

"That's cool. I can wait! By the way, did something happen? You just don't seem like your usual bright self." Claire settled her gaze on Leena. She noticed something off when Leena came back this afternoon. But she bit back her words, and just waited. She couldn't wait any longer. She had to ask.

"Nothing. You're imagining things, Claire. I'm just tired. It was a long drive." Leena avoided eye contact. She did that when she lied.

Really?" Claire got her answer, but she was still suspicious. Still, she tried hard not to pry any further, and she promised Kevin she would try to get along with Leena. Curiosity killed the cat, and she didn't want any dead felines. Besides, the last thing she wanted was to make Leena mad.

"Okay, what do you think happened to me? I'm okay. Nothing happened! I'll fetch the soup. Kevin will be back any time now." Leena practically fled into the kitchen. She feared that her eyes might betray her secret to Claire. She was right, she wasn't in the best of moods, but she didn't feel like talking about it either.

Leena's attitude didn't escape Claire's attention. She observed her sister-in-law carefully, and it only magnified her suspicions. 'So what happened when she was out? She is really a mess!' Claire said to herself in secret.

Leena took a minute to calm down before she turned on the stove. She was relieved that Claire stopped asking questions, otherwise she would have been found out. She didn't do anything wrong, and there was no reason for her to lie. But what would Claire think if she found out about Leena's blind date? Though she was tricked into it, it didn't make her feel any better. Would her sister-in-law think that she was a tramp who cheated on her brother? She and Claire already had problems, and she didn't want to create any more bad blood between them.

Just as Leena predicted, Kevin got home soon, immediately after she set the table and served the soup. It didn't make her feel any better -- Leena still felt embarrassed looking at Kevin.

"Wow! You sure took your time getting home! Do you know how long we have waited for you?" Claire curled her lips disapprovingly while casting a look at Leena. Kevin arrived home pretty much when Leena said he would. Those two were sure in sync. Kevin was a creature of habit, like most guys, so it was easy for Leena to figure out when he would get home from work. She could predict the exact time he would set foot inside the house. Or did Kevin call before he got home?

Chapter 1121: Chapter 1119: A Peaceful, Easy Evening (part two)

"Next time, don't wait. My wife does, but that is because she likes to eat with me. I can't be sure when I can get out of there, so just eat if you're hungry!" Kevin said that while looking at Leena. He almost smiled, but he stopped himself.

"But we don't know if you will be late! So just call next time. Do you know how annoying it is to wait? There is so much yummy food here, that our tummies are growling while we wait. So stop torturing us and call!" Leena gave Claire a thankful look. This was precisely what she wanted to tell Kevin. But for some reason she wouldn't tell him this directly. So Claire stepped up to the plate and did Leena a favor.

"Okay, I will." Kevin noticed the silent exchange between the two, and apparently it was Leena who wanted to say something. 'Would you still hold back if Claire hadn't said something?' Kevin thought, 'I told you to come to me if you had a problem.' He never thought that he should give Leena a call if he was unable to get home on time. Was he too busy to call? Or did he just not care enough to ask how Leena felt? So did she just sit there, anxiously waiting for him to come home? And why didn't he even think of that?

"Go wash your hands. Dinner is up." Kevin's gaze brought an embarrassed smile to Leena's face. She lowered her head to avoid eye contact.

"Hmm! I can't eat if I don't shower first. I'm all hot and sweaty. Go ahead and dig in. Don't wait up. I'll be done soon." Kevin went upstairs as he talked. He was in such a hurry to get home that he had no time to take a shower in his dorm in the army base.

"Let's eat, Claire. He will be back soon." Leena had already taken her seat. Unlike women, men usually finished their showers quickly. Sometimes, just a couple of minutes were enough for them. Besides, men didn't take as much time to tidy up in front of a mirror before they left the bathroom.

"I really never knew you could cook this well. The food is just out of this world. I thought you were just an ordinary girl, but you've outdone yourself here. Everything smells nicely." Claire took the chopsticks in front of her, and picked up a slice of braised eggplant from the plate. Those delicious dishes were so alluring that she could not resist it any more. Since Kevin gave the okay, she just went ahead and started in. Kevin could hardly blame her if there was nothing left for him.

Hmm... I took classes. Generally speaking, my cooking is not bad." Leena looked at Claire in surprise. Instead of saying something mean, Claire praised her for the first time. She should mark this day on the calendar.

"That's why. You worked at it, even studied to get it right. No one is born with it." Though she was still arrogant, she seemed more positive and optimistic. It looked like she took Kevin's advice, and decided to be nice to Leena for once.

"It just takes determination. If you want to learn, you just need to do it." Leena just said that to herself. She loved Kevin, and was determined to love him. But she wasn't sure how long she could hold on if Kevin didn't love her back. Only a fool would keep doing something and not get anything out of it. So what would happen if she felt disappointment, or even frustration? What if she started to resent Kevin? These feelings might drive her away from the man she loved.

"I tried and quit. I could never figure it out." Claire had a different opinion. She said this before giving it any thought. To be frank, she seemed to be unable to learn anything that required patience. It might be because she didn't have any to begin with.

"It's okay Claire. You're lucky to be born in this great times, when women don't have to be good at cooking or cleaning. In the past, that was unthinkable. But now, more and more girls are never taught how to cook." A warm smile broke across Leena's face when she talked about cooking. Actually, she liked cooking only because she liked to see how Kevin ate up all her food with a pleasant expression. He liked it, so she liked to cook it for him. Watching Kevin finish everything she cooked, was one of her happiest moments. Whether it was hearing him loudly sucking the bones of chicken claws or slurping Shrimp Dumpling Soup, these sounds made her feel loved.

"Are you making fun of me?" asked Claire with a frown. Though Claire was slow in some respects, she wasn't bad at everything. But every one could see why Claire might have thought that Leena was teasing her. Her words apparently struck a nerve.

No, no. That's not what I meant. I'm just talking about girls in general," Leena anxiously explained. She really didn't want to ruin what they had going right now. She still remembered the bad times between her and Claire, and didn't want a repeat. She explained so quickly every one could tell she was nervous.

"I'm glad you weren't teasing me. I don't want to fight anymore, and I don't want Kevin mad at me. I promised him we would try and get along." Rather than completely fly off the handle, Claire calmed down again after Leena reassured her. She didn't talk about it again.

"Promised Kevin? What are you talking about? Is he making you be nice to me?" Leena felt confused. She thought it was strange that Claire was nice to her. But she didn't think about it twice, since most people were nice to her. Sometimes it took a bit for people to warm up to someone. Now, it seemed that Claire was treating her better because of some arrangement with Kevin. But what did she agree to? And what was Kevin's part in all this? Leena could not help but feel curious about it.

That is a secret between me and Kevin. You will have to ask him," said Claire with her lips curled. Then she dug in to the tasty food, and said nothing more about this secret. The meal was incredible, as excellent as anything cooked by Maud.

"What are you guys talking about? I could swear I heard my name. So what's up?" asked Kevin, walking downstairs. He was so quick when he showered. In the past ten minutes, he did things that would have taken Leena an hour. Wearing more casual clothing, he looked quite refreshed.

My Wife is a beautiful Officer Chapter 1122 - Chapter 1120: A Peaceful, Easy Evening (part three)

Chapter 1122: Chapter 1120: A Peaceful, Easy Evening (part three)

"We're saying bad things about you." Claire flashed a naughty smile at her brother. Actually, Claire could be quite pleasant. But sometimes her selfishness made her do some pretty bad things. She would resort to trickery and deceit to get her way. Since she got away with a lot in the past, it would take time to teach her the difference between right and wrong. But she was getting there.

Oh, really! What are these bad things?" Kevin asked Claire, but looked at Leena all the time. He was very interested in how Leena would explain this later. He had a naughty smile on his face, too. He knew that they would never really talk about him that way, but he loved to play along regardless.

Everything, including how you were forced to kiss your classmate back when you were in school." Claire answered Kevin in a teasing tone. She really felt like teasing him tonight, so she pulled out all the stops. That incident was the best way she knew how.

Leena was shocked. She tried to imagine this cold, tough man kissed by a teenage girl against his will, and she just couldn't do it. It was such a funny picture that it immediately brought a smile to her face. She put a hand to her mouth and started giggling uncontrollably.

"Hmm... I..." Apparently, it shocked Kevin, too. That was the most embarrassing moment of his life, and he couldn't believe she brought it up. He got flustered and started to choke on his food.

"Don't get all choked up, honey. Here, take a drink." Leena still teased him, even as she passed him a glass of water. But she still had to stifle her laughter, and pressed her lips tight to avoid smiling. She could tell he was really uneasy now.

Yeah, yeah. Laugh it up!" Kevin glanced at Leena and Claire angrily. He would rather die than remember that humiliating moment. He would have felt much better if that girl was hot. But she was so fat that she almost crushed him to death when she fell on him. She knocked the breath out of him, and he was left shaking for a few minutes while he struggled to breathe. Even then he still made funny noises every once in a while when he took a breath. It was the lowest point in his life, and he didn't even want Leena to know. Not like this.

"Wow! She must have been a real hottie! Otherwise no one could have made you do that! Admit it, you surrendered to her on purpose and liked it," said Leena jokingly. He never really shared that many details of his life, especially funny stories like this one. So she took advantage of this moment and teased him.

"Oh yeah. She was gorgeous, with those long slender legs, bright big eyes and sexy sweet lips." Kevin was going to tell Leena, but he was still mad at her for what happened this afternoon. He got jealous then, and so now it was her turn.

"What? Gorgeous? No way, dude. She was as fat as a pig. A real porker. What is the matter with you? Are you a chubby chaser?" That girl was so fat that when she fell, no one was laughing, but the floor cracked up." Kevin never wanted to hear about this again. Claire had crossed the line, and exposed his deepest, darkest secret. Embarrassed and enraged, his face distorted in a mask of rage.

"Ha ha! Maybe she is beautiful to your brother. There is your proof that he has specialized tastes." The exchange between Kevin and Claire had Leena's undivided attention. She felt so much better than she did this afternoon. She laughed nonstop, barely stopping to catch her breath. She was free to be who she really was, and it was a good feeling.

Claire was caught up in it too, erupting into peals of laughter between bites. "Really? Kevin, I never knew that you were into fat chicks. Then what about Leena..." Claire cast a glance at Leena's svelte figure. With that skinny body, she was far from being beautiful according to Kevin's standards. The thought made Claire laugh even more.

"This is bullshit! Will you stop? Just eat, damn it!" Kevin shouted in fury. His angry scream worked, and both of the women stopped. But they still wore smiles on their faces. They giggled in muffled tones and kept looking at Kevin during the meal, and laughing every time.

"Actually, Kevin, there's nothing wrong with having a different standard of beauty." It was rare that Claire was on Leena's side, but tonight was different. Like Leena, Claire loved making fun of her brother. It didn't happen very often, so when she got a chance to tease him, she wouldn't let it go.

"So what happened to that girl after the kiss?" That was the most interesting part of the story to Leena. She noticed Kevin's face darkened in rage and shame. But since Claire had joined in, she didn't really fear what he was going to do. What could he do? Punish both of them?

"What do you think happened? Kevin pushed her away, and then she fell down and passed out." Claire burst into a fit of laughter when she mentioned the ridiculous scene. She fainted so quickly that Kevin went white as a sheet in fear. "He thought he killed her on accident. So he kept yelling 'I killed her I killed her!' She woke up, and then he thought she was undead. He screamed and ran off. He thought she was --" at this point Claire really lost it. Between laughs, she managed, "a zombie!"

"What..." That was the last thing Leena expected to hear. She looked at Kevin, now terrified. So how did Kevin, just a teenager at the time, push a heavy girl and knock her out? What was more, how could he do that? There was no way that girl could fight back.

Now, he was a strong and well-trained military officer. What would happen if she pissed him off, Leena wondered.

Kevin cast Leena a cold glance. A wicked smile flashed across his face when he caught her terrified expression. She was eager to know what happened to him in the past, but he had no reason to quench her curiosity. She shouldn't know too much about him. So was she finally regretting this little conversation? That thought brought a bright smile to Kevin's face, which only intensified the terror in Leena's heart. Leena could not help but shudder. 'Will he treat me in the same way if he gets really mad?' Leena asked herself in secret.

The three finished supper. It was an easy, peaceful evening. They talked, laughed, and enjoyed the delicious food. As usual, Kevin gathered up the dishes and put them in the sink. He was the dish washer. He was too busy to keep Leena company at home, and he didn't really have the time to help out around the house. But whenever he was at home, he had to do something for her.
