Chapter 1263: Chapter 1261: Evil Is Rewarded With Evil (part one)

Anger like a volcano ready to erupt consumed Edward. All he wanted was to severely punish Louisa in his own way. He closed his ears to everything that Daisy said. "Which side are you on, Daisy? You think I've gone too far? Humph! Louisa has been stirring things up. Hasn't she gone too far? You think I can just sit by idly?" In bitter hatred, Edward clenched his teeth. Louisa's father was Daisy's immediate boss, but he was a complete stranger to Edward, so Edward didn't need to fawn on him.

"I didn't say that. Anyway, I have told you what I think. Do as you see fit." With her eyebrows knitted in a frown, Daisy cursed within. Although Louisa was a bitch, her death was completely unnecessary. And Daisy didn't want to inflame the situation.

Sitting by, trying as much as possible to remain calm, Kevin moved his lips, but he didn't say anything. But in truth, he wanted to kill Louisa, were it not for the fact that he was a military officer who needed to exercise self-restraint. So instead Kevin fought back the urge to act on sudden impulse. Besides, he also believed that Edward knew what he was doing.

"Don't worry. I won't place you in a dilemma." Dejection written in his eyes, Edward sighed. For Daisy, the love of his life, he had to make concessions. There was no way he would hurt her.

"Okay," Daisy answered softly. Now, she had no option but to let her husband have his way. If Daisy tried to stop him, it might only get him mad and push him over the edge, which certainly she didn't wish for. The only thing she could do under current circumstances was to let him be, hoping he wouldn't lose his cool. She had to trust his judgment.

When Rain stormed out, preceded by Edward, Daisy knew they wanted to vent their anger tonight. Trying to mediate, she held Luke's hand and whispered to him, "Luke, you must try to stop Edward and Rain if they lose control of their emotions. Their temper is irrational. Please, don't let them escalate the situation." Their furry unsettled her, but she couldn't pacify them, so she turned to Luke and hoped he would be sensible.

Trust me, Mrs. Mu. I won't let them do anything unreasonable. I'll keep them in check, but for now, I have to go." As Luke watched the two receding figures, he wondered why he had made such a promise to Daisy. How would he stop his young master from doing anything he wanted?

Okay. Go." Feeling nervous, Daisy bit her bottom lip and gave a weary sigh. She had started her work very early this morning and had been busy dealing with various issues the whole day. She was utterly exhausted.

"Hope they won't act recklessly," Belinda said, similarly expressing deep concern. From what she had long heard about Edward's violent tendencies, it bothered her what would follow.

It's all right. Go back to sleep. You can't be so tired." Being in her first trimester of pregnancy, Belinda needed to be extra cautious to avoid a miscarriage. And to help with the early complications of the pregnancy in the first three months, she counted on Daisy for support in many ways.

"I'm fine. Don't worry about me. On account that Leena is in danger, I won't fall asleep even if I go back. I might as well stay here with her. It makes no difference going back home. At least she won't feel so lonely." For a split second, Belinda winced, apparently feeling unwell, although she quickly fought to conceal her discomfort.

"You have to go back to sleep, Daisy and Belinda. I'll be here with Leena," Kevin who was leaning against the wall tried to reason with the two. Although he knew that Daisy and Belinda were worried about his wife, he didn't think there was much they could do to help her. For this reason, there was no point in letting them stay around, especially when they needed rest. That would be an unnecessary inconvenience to them, Kevin thought.

"Kevin is right. Just go. We'll take care of Leena here," echoed Tom. Only he knew how best to help Leena if her physical condition worsened. The others didn't need to waste their time here.

"Okay. Then we'll go back. Meanwhile, I'll take care of the army base, Kevin. Don't worry about that. Take good care of Leena here." Daisy thought they were right. There was still much to be done and she decided to help lighten the burden by stepping in for Kevin at the army base, especially in resolving the disagreement among soldiers.

"Thank you, Daisy. I'll personally talk to the commander about the mission. I'll ask him to replace me with Hank." With Leena still unconscious, Kevin was at crossroads on how to juggle between caring for his wife and attending to work. It was his first time in the army that he had ignored orders from above.

"Okay. How about you, Claire? I can drive you back," Daisy turned to Claire. As a young girl, Claire couldn't stay in the hospital late at night.

Thank you, Daisy, but I want to stay here with my brother." With a smile, Claire answered. Since she brought the trouble, she couldn't stay out of it.

"Okay. Let's go, Belinda. We'll come back early tomorrow morning." Calm and collected as ever, Daisy knew what to do at this critical moment, living up to her reputation.

"Well, then, Kevin and Tom, please take good care of Leena." Hearing what the others said, Belinda no longer insisted on staying. She would go home to sleep and come back tomorrow morning. After Leena woke up, she would need some time to recuperate. They would be busy by then.

"Don't stand on ceremony. I treat Leena as my sister, and I'll try my best to get her out of danger. You have to be careful in the first three months of pregnancy, Belinda." Having observed her for some time, Tom was sure that Belinda was pregnant. Sometimes she unconsciously touched her belly, but he felt that she was hiding it.

"Take care on the way home, Belinda," Kevin cautioned. Since he knew that Mark would be waiting for Daisy outside, he wasn't worried about her. Instead, he was worried about Belinda.

"I will. Take care of Leena." Belinda patted Kevin on the shoulder and looked at Tom. An embarrassing look appeared on her face. Then she reluctantly left with Daisy.

I have to go back to my office. Let me know at once if anything happens to Leena." Feeling a little tired, Tom had to take a nap now, to keep his mind clear in an emergency.

"Okay. Get your things done first." For coming to Leena's rescue, Kevin was much obliged to Tom.

"Are you all right, Kevin?" A worried Claire asked as soon as Tom left. The usually flamboyant Kevin appeared wholly drained of color.

"I'm fine. Rest assured! Now tell me what happened," Kevin inquired. As far as he knew, Claire was in the villa. Why did she stay with Leena and Louisa?

"I'm really sorry. If it hadn't been for me, Leena wouldn't have quarreled with Louisa." Bit by bit, Claire told Kevin the whole story, her eyes looking downcast. Her voice was shaky, on the verge of tears. She was really frightened.

"Don't cry. God protects the good. Leena will be okay." With a tired, sad expression, Kevin let out a sigh, wondering how little he knew about his wife. It had surprised him to learn that she was such a famous fashion designer abroad. Now he kicked himself for not having known it when he saw her stuff in the workshop. Genuinely, he felt sorry for not having paid attention. How could he be so uncaring?

"I don't understand, Kevin. Mr. Mu said that Leena could swim, but why did she drown?" Claire had been listening to their talk, so she wondered why.

"Maybe she was bitterly disappointed in me, so she chose to escape," sighed Kevin. It was clear that Leena always dressed following the latest trends. She always had a great sense of fashion. No wonder she even had her own opinions and taste about his clothes. To discover that Leena majored in fashion design and most of the times she wore her own handiwork was quite out of the blue.

"Did you quarrel with each other?" Hesitatingly Claire asked. It had caught her unawares that they would quarrel. Never had she ever seen them angry at each other, let alone quarrel.

"No. Don't think much about it. Go back. I can stay here alone. I want to calm myself down." There was need to rethink the problems between him and Leena, Kevin thought. He genuinely loved Leena, although she still had some doubts, and somehow misunderstood his true feelings towards her.

"I don't want to. I want to be here with you." Even if she went back home, Claire thought she'd have a sleepless night, so she wanted to stay around and talk with Kevin. At least he'd have company to comfort him in this difficult hour.

"No need. I want to be alone. Drive Claire back, Lee," Cautious not to get distracted by Claire's presence, Kevin called on Lee who had been standing at the distance.

"Okay, Major General. Let's go, Miss Gu." As Lee glanced at the intensive care unit, he was shocked to discover that it was Kevin's wife lying in bed. Despite his sadness, he was worried about Kevin. Lately Kevin hadn't been resting enough, so he might be unable to stand fatigue.

"Kevin..." Claire tried to persuade her brother as she didn't want to leave.

"You heard me." But Kevin, determined on staying alone waved his hand, dismissing Claire's insistence on staying around any longer.

The winter nights were chilling. Eventually, everyone was gone. Only cold lights and a man with a worried look were left in the corridor. He sat on the bench, listless and pale. Sometimes he really envied Edward and the others who could do whatever they liked. Different from them, he was a military officer, tasked with great responsibilities for the country and the people. At every turn, he had to keep his will in check.

The Security Department of FX International Group was very bustling tonight. From time to time a woman's foul oaths could be heard. Although the security guards were fed up with her shouts, they dared not do anything to her before Edward and Luke gave any orders.

"Let me go! Don't you know what you do is against the law? How dare you detain me? Do you know who my father is? As the commander of the army base in this city, I can assure he'll ruthlessly deal with you if he knows what you're doing to me!" Never before had Louisa suffered like this. She kept shouting, trying to attract some attention, but it was quiet outside. On realizing it was futile, and no one would come to her rescue, she felt an intensely gnarly fear gripped her. She was terrified. As if a violent gale raged within her, her heart pumped and beat like it would explode if there was no escape. For that, she shouted even louder. You'd think there was a ferocious beast caged and feeling threatened within her.

"Oh? I wonder how you'll make us suffer." Edward's face fell. He walked in with a mocking, arrogant smile.

"It's you, Edward. Why do you detain me here?" At the sight of Edward, Louisa was taken aback. This man was so noble and extraordinary that she could only look at him from a distance.

"Why? Do you think I brought you here for sex because you're pretty? Look at you. I wouldn't even take a hopeless jackass like you for a housekeeper!" The man grinned wickedly. As Daisy said, he couldn't lash this woman, but he could torture her in other ways.

"You... You're contemptible, Edward!" Frustrated and fully aware there wasn't much she could do, Louisa looked at Edward with conflicted emotions. She didn't know whether to keep on with threats, hoping somehow he'd back down or if playing to his bloated ego would help. But both options were improbable, given the gravity of her offense. With this in mind, she was only left to gaze on with resignation and apathy.

Chapter 1265: Chapter 1263: Evil Is Rewarded With Evil (part three)

Don't be rude to a girl, Edward. You know what? Girls are delicate. We must be gentle to them. Moreover, we have to satisfy their vanity. How about asking some men to serve her?" Rain followed Edward behind, but not as fast. No one could ignore a conspicuous figure like him. As soon as he was quiet, Louisa felt completely deflated. Her arrogance was gone.

"What do you want to do? My father is a commander. How dare you take such liberties!" Horrified, Louisa shrank back against the wall. She looked at Rain in a panic, fearing that he would act on his threat and let men violate her. She wasn't stupid. She certainly knew what Rain meant.

"Do you hear what she said? Her father is a commander," asked Edward, lightly shaking his head accompanied by exaggerated gestures. But even so, he still looked handsome.

"So what? That's none of my business! Bring me a bucket of water. Fill it with ice cubes, please," said Rain, wearing a mischievous smile. He could be as scheming as Edward if he wanted to.

Come on, Rain. You just said I was rude to her. What do you want to do? Do you want to give her a cool shower?" Edward sneered. It was a good idea. His wife had only warned them not to hurt Louisa, but that didn't bar them from giving her a cool shower, if they wanted.

"You have no idea, Edward. It's a very comfortable shower. Leena can't enjoy it alone. It has to be shared. Miss Ye should enjoy it too." At his words, Rain extended his hand to cup Louisa hard at the chin. The dark, expressionless face he wore looked as if it was carved of stone, his smile bone-chilling. He withdrew his hand and took out a tissue to wipe it as if he just touched something dirty.

"How dare you! Leave me alone! Give me back my phone. I want to call my father. You two bastards!" A shiver ran through Louisa as she heard what Edward and Rain said. It was hard to imagine the bone-chilling feeling of ice cubes being poured on her body.

"You're right. We're bastards. It's just the beginning. There's something gratifying in our twisted way waiting for you," Edward said indifferently. Seeing Louisa grapple in the claws of fear delighted him.

"Why, why do you do this to me? I'm not your enemy." It scared Louisa stiff, especially when she saw someone really brought a bucket in. Fear eating at her guts made her stomach churn in intense cramps. The terror running through her body made her feet twitch, her whole body trembling as if she was already dying of hypothermia.

"Why? Don't you know why? Then let me tell you. You shouldn't have offended our beloved girl. What's more, you shouldn't have pushed her into the icy pool. Why did you do that to her? How has she wronged you to deserve that?" Rain shot a glance at the plastic bucket brought in by the security guard. It was filled with ice cubes. Did Louisa offend him too? He was so cruel to her. Even to him, the bucket sent a chill down the spine.

"It's Leena again. What's good about that woman? All of you like her so much. She is dead, right? So you vent your anger on me. Ha ha! Good to hear that! Kevin will be mine then." Obsessed by jealousy, Louisa relished the thought of seeing Leena dead.

Even in mortal danger, at the hands of Leena's brothers, she sarcastically remarked as if she was beside herself. For that biting remark, Edward, no longer able to contain himself, gave her a stinging slap.

Louisa, you should be grateful that your father is a commander; otherwise you'd be dead by now! But you can rest assured. We'll tolerate your overstepping due bounds just on account of your dad's position. That alone does not guarantee that we'll be lenient on you, especially if you keep pulling more knucklehead antics. You better watch!" 'She'd better stop bitching around,' Edward cursed within. 'Whichever way, she'll still pay a heavy price for messing with Leena.'

"How dare you slap me! Listen, Edward, I know you like that bitch very much. I'll make her suffer what I suffer from you some other day! Just wait and see!" Louisa touched her painful cheek. Her ears were tingling. Even so, she stubbornly talked back to Edward.

"Forget it, Louisa. You won't have such a chance." Laughing softly, Rain tipped the security guard next to him a wink. And without hesitation, the security guard grabbed the plastic bucket and poured the cold water and ice cubes along Louisa's neck, doing it leisurely slow, as if it was a special moment to savor.

"Ah! Damn! Help! Help me! You're trying to kill me! Bad ass!" It shocked Louisa that they weren't bluffing. She screamed out, shivering with cold and jumping about like a cat on a hot tin roof, as she tried to shake out the ice cubes inside her clothes.

Have you prepared a camera or something for this sexy scene, Edward?" With wicked thoughts, Rain proposed.

Don't you have a phone? You can take some pictures with your phone." Edward rolled his eyes at Rain. It was what Rain wanted. He ordered to pour ice cubes into Louisa's clothes, and then he could take some pictures. Only a shameless man like him could come up with such a mean trick.

You're right. Such amazing photos will be an instant hit on the Internet." Eagerly, Rain took out his phone and took pictures of Louisa's messy clothes. It was known to all that women's curvy body could often arouse men's desire. The click-through rate would certainly be high.

Chapter 1266: Chapter 1264: Edward's Tricks (part one)

"No, you can't do that to me! It's...it's...inhuman!" Louisa's voice trembled as she shivered in the cold. But even though she was humiliated like this, she still felt she did nothing wrong. She kept her chin up and shot daggers at them. She still had her dignity, even as water dripped off of her and puddled on the floor.

"Huh! Now you finally realized what inhuman is. But did you think about that when you tried to get off with Leena's husband?" Rain sneered. It was taking all of his willpower not to beat this woman who hurt Leena. Leena was still in a coma, and it was Louisa's fault.

"Kevin was always mine. Leena stole him from me, using all her tricks. And she's just a ho! You people are too much! What made you think that you have the right to accuse me here?" Louisa shouted indignantly. Why did everyone always side with Leena? Was she wrong to love a man with all her heart? Louisa wondered.

"Excuse me, did you say that Kevin was yours? That's odd. He didn't marry you. Why not?" Nowadays there were too many egotistical women. From Jessica, to Rachel, and now Louisa, they were all great examples. And it all came down to men. Men really didn't stand up for themselves and say once and for all that they were married to someone, or not interested in someone else. Men would just string them along, not wanting to hurt their feelings. That was why women flew off the handle when their dreams were shattered.

"It is all because Leena got in my way, otherwise I would be Mrs. Gu." Even when their relationship began to sour, she still believed Kevin belonged to her. And no one knew how she came to believe her own delusions.

"Want some advice? Cut it out. If you keep believing this, you'll drive yourself nuts. Maybe you're not the sharpest knife on the block, but that doesn't mean you should be stupid. Even if Kevin hadn't met Leena, you'd still be outclassed," Rain mocked disdainfully. Although he had some issues with Kevin, he knew the man was still a pretty good guy. Louisa was a naggy bitch. If Kevin married her, she'd drive him to an early grave.

"You're not Kevin, how do you know that he wouldn't choose me?" Louisa curled up and tried massaging some heat into her body. Her clothes, drenched in icy water, made her shiver. Fortunately the heat was on in the room, otherwise she would be frozen and unable to even speak, let alone argue with them so loudly. She was trying desperately to hold on to her pride, but that was evaporating quickly.

"Because you're not as hot as Leena. You're not as nice as she is. You're a jealous woman and that is never, ever a good look for anyone. When it comes down to it, you're not even worthy to be mentioned in the same breath as her. You're not in her league. So what do you think you have to make Kevin favor you?" Edward sneered. As a man, he didn't believe that Kevin would be so shallow to have the hots for Louisa. He didn't really like him, but Edward still reluctantly acknowledged that Kevin had his own charm, and was not an average guy. He was a leader of men, and knew what he wanted. And what he wanted couldn't be found in Louisa.

"Huh! You say Leena's like a sister to you, but that's only an excuse. You just want to fuck her and don't have the guts to say it!" Obviously, Louisa was playing with fire. If she just copped to her mistakes and apologized, Edward might have given her a pass. No matter what, she was a woman, so they wouldn't get too out of hand. But she crossed the line and pissed Edward off. 'What you plant is what you get!' as the saying went, Louisa was doomed to suffer.

Edward caught her by her lower chin. He pressed his fingers harder as his fury rose within him. His usually handsome face grew darker, more menacing. There was no compassion left in him. She really took him past his limit.

"First off, watch your language," Edward said. "Second, you pissed me off. Don't ever say anything like that again," he growled. "You are risking your neck. Don't make yourself a mouse, or the cat will eat you. You dirty gut, you just made the air foul here. You just don't know when to quit, do you? Do you?"

"Ah... let go. I..."

"I can't breathe." Louisa struggled to pry his fingers from her throat. She finally figured out that someone like Edward who was handsome and fascinating could be so horrible when he got angry. The thought never occurred to her before. She wouldn't make that mistake again.

"I let you off easy. You'd better pray that our little princess ends up safe and sound. Otherwise I'll beat you to death no matter who you are," Edward said before he flung her away. The worst women in the world fell into one of two categories. The pretentious, artificial women, and the sightless fools who didn't know where they stood. Louisa was a combination of both. And that just made her even more hateful.

"It's a shame. Your dad's a great guy. How did he end up with a daughter like you—a shallow and shameless woman?" Rain said as he sighed and shook his head. He found he didn't even want to do anything to this woman even to avenge Leena. Had he touched her, it would only make his hands dirty.

"If you're so high and mighty, why are you torturing me? Why did you kidnap me? And keep me locked up? You think that's somehow noble?" As soon as Louisa was able to breathe again, she went back on the attack. She never knew when to stop.

My Wife is a beautiful Officer Chapter 1267 - Chapter 1265: Edward's Tricks (part two)

Chapter 1267: Chapter 1265: Edward's Tricks (part two)

Yeah, you're right, we're not noble. So watch your mouth," Edward said with a cunning smile. Since he couldn't torture her physically, he would like to change the tactic and torture her psychologically. He liked seeing his foes cowering in fear of what he might do. He hoped later she would be as tough as she used to be. If she really went crazy with what she would suffer next, he was not the one to blame anyway.

"Edward, any ideas of what you want to do with her?" Rain asked blissfully. Truth to be told, he had never seen a woman so pretentious and arrogant. He was anticipating what came next. Edward knew a lot about punishing people.

"Luke, bring all the home theater equipment in here. Find some horror movies, any old one will do. Put 'em on repeat, so they just play 24/7. Crank up the volume as high as it will go. And get her a blanket, if you feel sorry for her." Edward left the room as soon as he gave his orders, leaving no room for her to negotiate. She pissed him off, and had to pay the piper.

"No, Edward, you bastard! You can't treat me like this! My father will hear about this, and you'll pay, believe me!" Louisa cried out and cursed in fright of the unknown looming danger. Louisa never expected that Edward would resort to such a terrible means to deal with her. But all she could do was scream at blank walls that had no answer for her.

"Save it!" Luke shot her a cold look. If she'd just kept her mouth shut, Edward wouldn't have been driven to this point. She wouldn't be treated like this. But she decided to insult him, and Edward never took that well. She had to pay.

"What a great idea! You are a genius!" Rain followed Edward and jogged to catch up to him. Watching thrillers might be fun for some people. It was fun to be scared sometimes. And binge watching horror movies was always a joy to those who wanted to scare themselves. But for a woman locked up alone here and drenched to the bone by ice-water, it was a torture to both mind and body. And the movies would be playing all day, all night, with the volume at max. Of course she could choose not to look at the screen, but the horrible sounds would haunt her for the whole night. It was daunting even for an ordinary person. For Louisa, sheer torture.

"Feeling sorry for her already?" Edward asked as he paused. In all honesty, he'd been pretty lenient, as he saw it. If she said that in the past, he'd probably have killed her. He had such a hot temper. But now, he had a family to attend to, and he had to shoulder the responsibility as a husband and father. He couldn't be like that anymore.

"Huh! You kidding? The day I feel sorry for her is the day hell freezes over." Rain laughed. How could he feel sympathy for that bitch? There was no way. He thought Edward showed remarkable restraint.

"So why are we still talking about it?" Edward said as he left the office. He completely ignored Rain, and that pissed the effeminate man off. But what else could he do? He could only get in the car and leave, sulking.

Sitting on the bench alone, Kevin had some time to think. Memories flashed through his mind, from the moment when he first met Leena in the bar till now he saw her lying in the ward, fighting for her life. He realized what a cold, cruel man he was! He only selfishly used Leena as a way to stay in the city at first. Then, he largely ignored her after they got married. He never really cared about how she felt or what was on her mind. He resolved to do better, if she ever woke up.

"Here." Tom handed Kevin a cup of coffee. "You look like you need it," said the doctor. He didn't look as tired as he usually did, probably because he had a good night's sleep.

"Thanks!" Kevin took the coffee without hesitation. He thought Tom was right, he truly needed something piping hot to keep his spirits up. It wasn't Café del Volcán, but it still was nice and aromatic. And strong.

"I'm going to check on Leena. Take as much time as you like." Several hours had passed and there was still no news. No news was good news. So Kevin was pretty optimistic about the outcome. He was still worried, but less so now than at the start.

"Thanks, man," said Kevin. He was still in uniform, but covered with an extra military coat. Lee insisted. After Lee sent Claire home, he brought the coat for Kevin and intended to stay with him in the hospital. But Kevin insisted that he should go back to the base. So Lee left in the end. He didn't like it, but he obeyed orders.

Tom glanced at him, but finally said nothing. What was there to say? He turned around and walked into the ward. He knew that Kevin was facing something he never had to worry about before. He was a young and talented Major General, but behind his shining appearance, he had to taste the bitterness of life alone.

The winter night was biting cold, especially at four or five in the morning. Frost glittered on the buildings and the grass. Looking outside through the window, Kevin could see the trunk of the tree had been sheathed in ice -- like it had melted and frozen just as quickly. He could imagine how cold it was outside. He had been sitting here for hours. Although sometimes he stood up and walked here and there out of uneasiness, he still felt stiff all over.

He took a small sip of coffee. His cold body was warmed as soon as the hot liquid streamed down his throat. The hot coffee relaxed him, making him feel a bit comfortable. But fatigue still got the better of him. He didn't get a nap before. But as time passed, he felt drained of energy. It was hard to feel good now, and the only thing he wanted was a bed.

My Wife is a beautiful Officer Chapter 1268 - Chapter 1266: Edward's Tricks (part three)

Chapter 1268: Chapter 1266: Edward's Tricks (part three)

Hey. Why don't you catch some zzz's? I can stay here, and make sure she's okay," Tom suggested, when he walked out of the ward and saw Kevin's tired face.

"Naw. I'm good.. How's Leena? Is she alright?" Kevin asked eagerly. He was still deeply concerned, and that eclipsed his need for sleep. Leena's condition was what worried him most.

"Currently, her vital signs are normal. I'd like to keep her under observation for a few hours. If she stays stable, we can transfer her to a normal bed." Tom felt delighted to tell Kevin this. More importantly, he could see clearly that Leena had the will to survive now. That was some serious progress. He wanted to see everything be okay again, which was why he became a doctor in the first place.

"Really? Great. It's all thanks to you." Kevin got very excited when he heard Tom's words. He really wanted to hold Tom's hands to show his thanks. But he gave up when he found that he had that cup of coffee in his hand. Even so, he couldn't help feeling overjoyed. He hadn't felt like this in awhile.

"Hey, no need to thank me, thank yourself. You lit that spark in her. She improved as soon as you started talking to her. Whatever you said did the trick. " Tom didn't really want to know what Kevin said to Leena. In his eyes, as long as it worked, the process was not that important.

"I didn't help that much. You're the hero who saved the day." Kevin smiled. The past several hours were torturing to him. So he would keep this lesson in his mind and never let any situation deteriorate again.

"You're too kind. No matter what, Leena's my sister. So don't worry about it. And don't pay any attention to Edward and the gang. They said what they said because they were worried about Leena," Tom said after he sat down beside Kevin. The white gown he wore made him look all the more gentle. Maybe he wasn't as drop-dead gorgeous as Edward, Duke, and all them. But he was the nicest out of all of them.

"I know, it already rolled off my back." Kevin knew they were good to Leena, so he never paid much attention. Besides, he knew who he was, and didn't care what they thought.

"I'm glad you get it. But keep in mind that I'm a good guy doesn't mean I don't have issues with you. I'm just more rational than them, because I'm a doctor. My duty is to heal the wounded and save the dying, and there's nothing personal. We're a lot alike, soldier boy. We both serve the people." Tom narrowed his eyes and glanced at him. Truthfully, the more time he spent with Kevin, the more he felt that the man was a pretty good guy overall. That might be why Leena married him.

"Someday, you guys will trust me that I can take good care of Leena. We'll probably end up in an old folk's home by then, but at least you'll trust me." Kevin said firmly. He thought about it for awhile -- he had a long time to do nothing but think. And he finally figured out how he could be a good husband to Leena. He couldn't follow her around all day, but he could love her wholeheartedly. His love was the only thing he could offer, because she was so rich and lacked for nothing, except his love. He aimed to change that.

The international airport of the city was as grand and spectacular as it ever was. Although there was still some time before dawn, the place was as busy as it was in the day. The people who had to run around for a living filled the place, running helter skelter, going about their daily tasks, checking flight info, etc. Duke embraced the first morning ray in the city as he arrived.

Because his flight taxied in at dawn, Duke didn't ask Belinda to meet him at the airport. But when he saw the familiar figure waiting for him, he still felt moved.

"Why are you here? I told you you didn't have to come. I can just grab a taxi," Duke said with a frown, his face as cold as ever. But when he looked straight at Belinda, his eyes were full of tenderness and affection.

"It's okay. I was up anyway," Belinda said with a smile. If anybody knew that the CEO of Leng Group had to take a taxi home, it would make him a laughingstock.

"How are you? Are you alright?" She told him over and over again that she wasn't pregnant, but Duke still couldn't believe her. So from the moment he saw her, he checked her out from head to toe.

"Huh! Right in front of you, safe and sound. You can see for yourself I'm okay." Belinda couldn't help laughing. Before she went out to pick Duke up, she had called Tom to confirm that Leena was doing better. She felt relieved after she got the good news and that was why she was so happy now.

"I'm gonna get you to a hospital. I worry about you, you know," Duke said as he reached out his arm and circled her waist. They walked out of the airport holding each other. What a loving couple!

"Where are we going? Don't we need to go home first?" Duke asked doubtfully when he saw that Belinda missed the turnoff for the highway.

"Didn't you say that you want me to get a checkup at the hospital? Let's drop by there now. We can save time and energy," Belinda said with evasive eyes. She didn't tell him now that Leena was fighting with death. She didn't want him to lose his mind. That was probably not what he wanted to hear right when he got home.

"But we don't have to do it so early. I just got in. And it's probably too early for a nurse practitioner." Duke looked at her with doubt in his eyes. Didn't she say that she was alright? But why did she seem like she wanted to rush to the hospital?

"Don't worry. I just called Tom. He's there now. He'll get everything set up," It was hard to keep lying. Belinda now regretted that she came up with such a lame excuse.

"Okay, it's all you. But wasn't Tom pissed? I know he likes his beauty sleep." Duke didn't have any reason not to believe Belinda. But subconsciously he had a hunch that something was wrong. He just didn't know what it was.

Chapter 1269: Chapter 1267: Duke Wrath (part one)

Belinda just smiled, not saying a word to Duke. It confused him. He had no idea what was up until he got dragged to the ICU. All of a sudden, he felt a bad feeling creep up on him. He looked at Kevin. Why was he here? Who was in the ICU? Why did Belinda get him to this place? Duke had an answer to all the questions in his head, but he refused to believe it.

"What the hell is going on? Why am I here?" Duke didn't want to assume the worst, but he had a terrible feeling. He lost his usual cool, afraid of hearing their reply. The panic in his heart rose.

Kevin and Belinda looked at each other. They wondered how to break the bad news to Duke without making him go crazy. Neither of them opened their mouths. They didn't know how to explain the situation.

"Duke? I thought you were still abroad? When did you come back?" Tom, who had just gotten out of the ICU, asked in surprise when he saw Duke. He had come out to tell Kevin that Leena was finally stable and not in dangerous condition.

"I am the one being kept in the dark! Why are you all here so early in the morning? Who's in there?" Duke looked from one person to another. His heart pounded faster in his chest as he got more and more anxious.

"Okay, let me explain the situation to you," Tom said, slightly furrowing his eyebrows. Fortunately, Leena was out of the dangerous condition now, so there was no need to hide this from her brother. To be honest, they couldn't hide something this big from Duke anyway, even if they wanted to. The real problem here was how to tell him.

Belinda and Kevin looked at him with grateful eyes as he said this. As Leena's doctor, Tom was the most appropriate person to explain Leena's condition to Duke.

"Then tell me! I'm still waiting!" Duke urged. He didn't understand what Tom was so hesitant about.

"Last night, Leena fell in the water. She inhaled too much of it. Plus, she had not fully recovered from her cold, so she nearly lost her life. But don't worry, all is well now. I just checked on her. She is out of the emergency situation. We can put her in a private ward now." Tom tried his best to be crystal clear, but he left out an important thing. He himself didn't know when Leena would wake up.

"What? How did Leena fall into the water? How did it even happen? Kevin, explain yourself!" Duke demanded angrily, suddenly grabbing Kevin by the collar. Leena was Kevin's wife but he didn't take good care of her. Instead, he let her fall into the water and endangered her life. He was not a capable husband! This was unforgivable!

"I am sorry!" Kevin's lips thinned into a grim line. He didn't want to explain himself, nor did he think he deserved to. What Duke was implying was right. He didn't protect Leena well enough. This was partly his fault.

"Screw you! I don't want to hear your apology! I should have never let you come near Leena!" Duke smashed his fist in Kevin's face before anyone could react and blackened his eye. Kevin didn't strike back. He could have surely dodged Duke's fist, but he didn't move, not even a bit. He let Duke punch him because he thought he deserved it. Truthfully, he felt a little better because of it.

"Stop it, Duke! It was not Kevin's fault! He was in a conference at the army base when Leena fell into the water!" Belinda grabbed Duke's hand abruptly, in case he wanted to punch Kevin again. She had heard from Daisy that Kevin hadn't been sleeping well for two days because of a complication with the army. That was why he looked so exhausted.

"I don't give a damn! It's his fault that he didn't protect Leena!" Duke fumed but because of Belinda, he didn't try to punch Kevin again. He was afraid he would hurt her unintentionally. He remembered that Belinda might be pregnant and grew cautious.

Kevin wiped the blood from the corner of his mouth. Duke hadn't held back when he punched him. Kevin was in great pain.

"He is not a God for fuck's sake! He can't be by Leena's side 24/7!" Belinda glared at Duke in anger. He didn't have the right to blame Kevin for not protecting Leena enough. Did he forget what had happened to her by the sea? How could he even put the blame on Kevin? Well, in Belinda's opinion, the men here were all unreliable. First, Edward nearly endangered Daisy's life. Then, Rain lost the woman he loved. The two men in front of her were also a handful. They shouldn't blame one another. They were all the same.

"Kevin, I'm warning you. If anything happens to Leena, I will make your life miserable!" Duke gritted his teeth in anger and glared at Kevin. Had he known that Kevin would treat her dear sister like this, he would have broken them up the moment he knew they got married in secret.

"What are you doing, Duke? Didn't you hear Tom? Leena is out of danger now! All she needs right now is rest. She doesn't need you two fighting over this!" Belinda knew Duke would be worried sick over Leena and vexed with Kevin. That was why she didn't tell him the news the minute she got to know it. Now, looking at Duke, she felt she had made the right decision.

"Can I go in and see Leena now?" Duke turned to look at Tom with expectation, trying his best to contain his rage towards Kevin.

"Just wait a minute. Let us run a final test on her and make sure she is really stable. Then we will transfer her to a private ward." Tom could understand how anxious Duke was. After all, everyone knew how much he loved his sister and how he always spoiled her. But still, what was more important right now was Leena's health. Duke would have to wait for a few minutes until the check-up was done.

At this, Duke didn't insist on seeing Leena anymore and glared at Kevin one more time. 'Don't tell me that Leena's accident actually has something to do with you, Kevin, or I will make you pay for it,' Duke thought.

"Kevin, why don't you go and see a nurse for your wounds? We will wait here for Leena," Belinda suggested to Kevin apologetically. She felt bad about Duke's violent behavior, not having expected him to hit Kevin out of the blue.

Chapter 1270: Chapter 1268: Duke Wrath (part two)

That won't be necessary. I'm all right. Thank you for your concern." As a soldier, Kevin was used to being injured, so he didn't care much. Besides, he deserved it for not protecting Leena. He was not a good husband at all and was not as caring and attentive as he should have been.

Duke still glared daggers at Kevin. He didn't think what he had done just now was wrong. Leena had never been hurt before she met Kevin. But ever since she married this guy, all kinds of accidents kept happening to her non-stop. How could Duke not be mad at Kevin?

"Leena, please wake up! I'm here." When Duke finally saw Leena lying on her hospital bed, his heart broke. Her face was extremely pale. She seemed so lackluster and lifeless. When he had seen her in Paris last time, he thought she was at her worst. He had been wrong. Nothing broke his heart more than the pale little face he saw right now. Her breath was shallow, as if she were seconds away from leaving them for good. Duke was heartbroken and afraid at the same time.

Kevin, on the other side of the bed, stared at Leena with pain and affection in his eyes. He wanted to hold her in his arms so badly, but he knew it was not the right time to do so. He knew that Duke was probably even more devastated than him. Leena was the little princess in their family. Duke had watched her grow up into a beautiful and kind young lady. It must be heartbreaking for him to see her like this, so Kevin tried his best to contain his emotions.

"Tom, what's wrong with Leena? Why hasn't she woken up yet?" Duke asked Tom anxiously. Leena was out of her dangerous condition, right? Tom had confirmed it. So why was she still asleep?

"Don't worry about it. She will wake up. It's just a matter of time," Tom said as he carefully checked up on Leena to make sure she was stable. He didn't want to miss anything.

"I want to know exactly how long it would be before she wakes up. And who did this to her?" Duke looked at everyone coldly. He didn't want them to hide this from him.

"Duke, calm down, please. Don't you believe Tom?" Belinda was a bit afraid that Duke knew who had done this to Leena. It was not like the person who did this didn't deserve Duke's wrath, but she thought that if he knew, he would be even more worked up than Edward and act vengefully. All hell would break loose and it wouldn't be good for Leena's recovery. It would only cause more trouble. Besides, she believed that Edward had made Louisa suffer enough for what she did to Leena last night.

It's not that I don't believe him. I just want to know who did this to my precious sister! She was always weaker than the other kids when she was small. For health reasons, I taught her how to swim when she was five years old. How is it possible that she fell into the water and drowned?" If they told him she had frozen in the cold water, he would have believed them. But drowning? How was that possible? Leena had been swimming for years, for God's sake! She was such a good swimmer, even better than him. It was quite strange that she fell in the water and drowned. Duke was clever and put two and two together. He came to the conclusion that this accident was not an accident at all.

"It's all my fault. Before the accident happened, we had an argument. It was a misunderstanding. I wanted to explain things to her, but there was an emergency at the army base and I didn't get the chance. Maybe because of that she lost her will to live and drowned." Kevin didn't want to hide this from Leena's brother. He was indeed responsible for this and was prepared for Duke's wrath.

"I knew it was your fault! Now that I know you don't cherish her at all, I think it won't be necessary that you continue being married to her! Get out! We can take care of Leena ourselves. You don't have to pretend to care about her anymore," Duke's tone was stone cold. He didn't want Kevin near Leena ever again. His precious little sister didn't deserve to be treated like this.

You can shout at me and you can punch me again. But if you want me to break up with Leena, it's impossible. I will not agree to it, not ever!" Kevin glared back at Duke. If Duke had demanded this when they were newly married, Kevin might have considered it. But now, after living with Leena for so long, he had fallen in love with her without even knowing it. He would never allow anyone to take Leena away from him, not even her own brother.

It's not for you to decide that. Don't forget, Leena is the youngest one in our family," Duke hissed, his gaze harsh. No matter what, he would not budge this time.

Don't you forget that Leena is my wife now," Kevin retorted. He wouldn't get backed into a corner either. He had let Duke punch him because he knew he deserved it, but that didn't mean that he would compromise on everything. He was not a Major General for no reason.

"All right, all right. That's enough, you two! Don't you see that Leena is still lying here? You are arguing about something that the two of you don't even have the right to decide! You should know that is Leena's choice." Belinda couldn't help but roll her eyes at them. They were such fools. It was ultimately Leena's decision if she wanted to stay with Kevin or not. Why couldn't they understand such a simple thing?

"Humph!" Duke's eyes did not move from Kevin. He still could not forgive Kevin. Kevin, in turn, stared back defiantly. It seemed that the feud that had always been between them rose again.

"Tom, could you please find a good obstetrician for me? I want to get a check-up done," A deep blush appeared on Belinda's face as she said this. Now that Tom had guessed that she might be pregnant, there was no need to hide it anymore. After all, Tom was their close friend.

"No problem. Do you want to see the obstetrician right now?" Tom looked at his watch. It was almost eight o'clock in the morning. The doctors should be here.

My Wife is a beautiful Officer Chapter 1271 - Chapter 1269: Duke's Wrath (part three)

Chapter 1271: Chapter 1269: Duke's Wrath (part three)

"No rush. I can go and see the obstetrician later. Kevin, why don't you go home and have a shower first? We can watch over Leena. You have been here the entire night." Belinda looked at Kevin's tired face. He was family and she felt sorry for him. She understood how tired and worried he must be feeling right now. He deserved a good shower to freshen up.

"I will wait until after Leena wakes up. I want to be the first one she sees when she opens her eyes. She'd like it too." Kevin smiled a little, but his smile was bitter. When he had suddenly left, it had made Leena think the worst of him. Now he was determined to never disappoint her again.

"You should listen to Belinda. Just go home and freshen up. Leena won't wake up so soon," Tom said to Kevin. From the heavy bags under Kevin's eyes, Tom could tell that he was indeed exhausted. He had heard that Kevin didn't sleep in two days, so Tom was touched that he was willing to watch over Leena in this state.

"Fine, I will be back soon." Kevin glanced at Leena with concern. He was afraid that Leena would wake up in his absence and leaned down to gently kiss her on the lips, in spite of others' presence. As Kevin slowly walked out of the room, he kept turning around to look back at Leena.

Not long after Kevin left, Daisy arrived. She wanted to see Leena before she went back to the army base, but Leena still hadn't woken up. Daisy didn't stay for long as there were still a lot of things at the army base she had to deal with. Besides, she had to visit the injured soldiers before she went back. She didn't have much time.

To the people who loved and cared for Leena, the night was painful. At the same time, it was a suffering to Louisa. She had been forced to listen to all kinds of scary noises from thriller movies. Her clothes were wet and cold, making her shiver all night. She couldn't escape, nor could she sleep. She felt like she was surely about to lose her mind.

Here are your new clothes. Change into them and leave." Luke brought the clothes for Louisa under Daisy's order. If it were Edward, he would never have been kind enough to give Louisa dry clothes.

"Where is my phone? Can I have it back now?" Louisa bit her lower lip, wrapping a blanket around herself tightly. She looked at Luke with cautious eyes. She was on high alert, especially after the long scary night.

"Here. Hope you know what you are doing next time." Luke tossed her phone back at her, his face full of disdain.

Just wait and watch! I will get back at all of you for what you did to me!" Louisa glared. Her tone was full of venom. She still heard the awful voices repeating in her ears but she didn't let it show. She tried to seem threatening and menacing, but in reality, she just felt helpless.

"If you say so." Luke didn't care about her empty threats. He left the room. If she had not hurt Leena intentionally, he would have called her brave for making these threats. But sadly, she did hurt Leena, so her fate was doomed.

As soon as Louisa saw Luke leave, she called her father. Her father was the commander, he would surely be able to help her get back at them. She would take her revenge on all of them, especially Edward. What she didn't know was that Daisy had contacted the commander first and explained everything to him, including what they had done to Louisa. Daisy was hoping that the commander would forgive them for punishing Louisa for what she had done. And yes, they had been forgiven. So when Louisa saw her father, she was shocked when he scolded her harshly.

"Dad! I am your daughter! Why are you making excuses for them? Do you have any idea how they treated me last night? They not only poured freezing cold water on me, but also forced me to listen to scary movies all night! Besides that, they took photos of me and threatened to put them on the Internet! You have to kill them for me, dad! Let's start with Daisy. She is Edward's wife, correct? Let's start with her first!" Louisa was wrapped in her quilt. She lay in her soft and warm bed as she shouted at her father.

Nonsense! Do you have any idea what you have done? Do you even hear yourself right now?" The commander was beyond furious at his daughter. He couldn't help but slap her. He had thought she got better after all those years of studying abroad. But to his disappointment, she hadn't changed a bit. She was still the spoiled brat she used to be! She even talked about killing people! What the hell was she thinking? How did she become like this? He really hadn't raised her up well.

"How dare you slap me? Okay, fine! If you don't help me, I will come up with something myself! I will make them pay for what they have done to me. Just you see." Louisa touched her face where her father had slapped her. It hurt. Her eyes burned like fire as she glared at her father, who was as furious as she was. She refused to back down and admit that what she had done was wrong.

From now on, you are not allowed to leave this house! If you do go out, don't ever come back." Commander Ye shook with rage. He couldn't understand why his daughter was behaving like this. Where did he go wrong with her? He could manage soldiers worth an entire army base, but he couldn't manage his own daughter? How ridiculous! He was a failure of a father.

Don't worry, I won't come back! Do you think I give a fuck? What good is being your daughter? I can't have the man I like. My own father wouldn't help me when I'm bullied! You are a coward for a father. You don't want me as your daughter? That's fine. I don't want you to be my father either!" Louisa raised her chin at the commander and raised an eyebrow. She was the same as she had been when she got shipped abroad. She felt there was no place for her in this family anymore.

My Wife is a beautiful Officer Chapter 1272 - Chapter 1270: The Sleeping Beauty (part one)

Chapter 1272: Chapter 1270: The Sleeping Beauty (part one)

"Stop talking nonsense! It's all my fault. I failed to find out that you had a thing for Kevin. Oh my god! I even let you get close to him! From now on, you are forbidden to contact him, meet him, or even look at him. Disobey me and I'll sue you myself for sabotaging a military marriage even though you are my daughter!" The Commander closed his eyes in embarrassment. What a shameless daughter he had! How could he face Kevin now? But he knew that he was at fault too. He had been so busy working all these years that he had neglected his daughter's education. And now she had become a willful person with no morals.

"Ha! You think that I would still have the chance to get close to Kevin? He hates me and won't see me anymore. It's all your fault! When they applied for a marriage license, you should have used your position to turn down their request. Leena wouldn't have become Mrs. Gu!" Louisa's voice teetered on the edge of hysteria. She was such a selfish and spoiled little brat that she still put the blame on others despite what had happened, oblivious to her own mistakes. In her eyes, she had been betrayed by everyone including her father.

"What? You still haven't learned your lesson? Have you got no shame, you woman? I am so humiliated because of what you have done. Look at you! Even if Kevin were not married, he would never choose someone like you. You are a disgrace. Just stop the delusions and come back to reality!" The Commander sighed with profound resignation. He had been so busy at work that he hardly had any time for his family. He now felt much guilt and felt responsible for what became of his daughter. He always met her requests and satisfied her every whim to make up for his absence. He now realized that it was him who had spoiled his daughter rotten.

"You are not him! You don't know whom he would choose! Why do you look down on me like that? I'm your daughter!" Tears streamed down Louisa's cheeks as she lamented her father's lack of support. In her eyes, it was all her father's fault. If her father had considered pairing her and Kevin, then Leena would have had no chance to marry him.

"You brat! I'm your father. How could you talk to me like that? You must reflect on what you've done. I have to fix the situation for you and save your face and mine. If you dare to run away, I swear I will break your legs!" The Commander cast a stern glance at Louisa before leaving and locking her room. She had been punished by Edward the previous night and caught a cold because of it. If it weren't for that, the Commander would have given her a more severe punishment himself, instead of only locking her in her room.

"You have no right to order me around! Fascist!" Louisa's screaming resounded through the house, but the Commander left the house as if he heard nothing. He had loads of things to deal with at the army base.

When he got into the car, his phone rang. It was from Kevin.

"Hello! Major General Gu, how is your wife? It's all my fault. I failed to discipline my daughter and now she has caused you so much trouble. I'm so sorry." The Commander made a sincere apology to Kevin. He had aged ten years since the previous night because of all the stress and shame.

"She is out of immediate danger, but hasn't woken up yet. Doctor Qin has reassured that she'd wake up soon so we have that to look forward to." Kevin held his phone with one hand while grabbing Leena's hand with the other. He was very mad at Louisa, but he wouldn't lose his temper at the Commander. The Commander had treated Kevin like his own son all these years. As a grateful man, Kevin respected and honored him. It would be unfair to put Louisa's blame on the Commander.

"If this is really true, it'll take a load off my mind. Please apologize for me when she wakes up. If it weren't for my unruly daughter, she wouldn't have suffered." The Commander had devoted his whole life to his country, and he thought he was worthy of the heart. He didn't expect his reputation to be ruined by a brat like Louisa who only happened to be his daughter.

"Commander, you don't need to blame yourself. Leena is not an unreasonable person. I am sure that she will not put the slightest condemnation on you." Kevin stroked Leena's face gently. He was with Leena alone. A few moments before, Belinda had a test in the hospital and the doctor confirmed that she was pregnant. Therefore, Duke had to go home with his wife. Otherwise he would force Kevin to leave Leena, and they would have a fight about this.

"Well, anyway, I should also be responsible for this matter. You can take a day off to take care of your wife. As for your tasks, Senior Colonel Ouyang has mentioned it. I'll try my best to persuade the higher authorities to reassign it to Hank." The Commander was not an unreasonable person, albeit an understanding one. He could imagine Kevin being too preoccupied with this crisis to carry out his tasks effectively.

"Thank you, Commander. I was planning to discuss it with you. You are so thoughtful as to give me a break." That was the reason why Kevin respected the Commander very much. The Commander always placed himself in others' position and was kind enough to meet their real needs.

"Don't worry about your work. Just take care of your wife. I'll be responsible for everything in the army base," the Commander offered. He had to do this to make up for his daughter's mistakes. After all, Louisa was his only daughter, and he had to deal with the mess she had created.

"All right. Thank you, Commander." Kevin could imagine what a difficult position the Commander was in right now, and that was why he didn't hold Louisa accountable for what she had done. After all, Edward had already punished Louisa. Kevin decided to let go of it, otherwise the Commander would be in an awkward position. Someday, maybe he and Leena would find a way to forgive her and forget about all this.
