Chapter 1301 An Unexpected Situation (Part Two)

Now that action got Edward puzzled as he touched his nose. What was wrong with her? He didn't do anything! Why did she stare at him that way? It was good that he didn't mind it. Lucky her that he loved her. He didn't think that he could endure her acts if she was someone else. Edward shook his head helplessly. It was obvious that there was nothing he could do anyway but go upstairs as well.

On the other hand, Kevin got up early this morning but didn't want to wake Leena up. Thus he was moving very carefully. However, he forgot what his initial goal was when he saw Leena's cute lips. He couldn't help but kiss her softly despite the fact that she was still sound asleep. It was to his great surprise when Leena's arms suddenly reached out to him and embraced his neck. Then she opened her eyes and looked at him slyly.

"I got you! How dare you kiss the sleeping princess?" said Leena as she blinked her eyes. She was still sleepy and it was obvious that Kevin's kiss woke her up.

"Oh? Well if that is the case, then I must be the prince... Yes. That one who woke Sleeping Beauty from her slumber." Kevin lowered his head and put his forehead against Leena's. His voice was full of tenderness for his wife.

"Are you leaving now? I think it's still too early." Leena took a look at the clock. It was only six in the morning and it must still be dark outside.

"Yes! I should go now. You can sleep some more, Nana. Cover yourself nicely since it's raining outside. Don't get cold," said Kevin gently as he kissed her lips one more time. He then tucked her comfortably so she wouldn't feel cold.

"Okay. Be careful." Happiness flooded Leena upon seeing what Kevin did for her. She was so touched by his action that she ended up smiling at him sweetly.

"I'll come back soon." Kevin took a look at her and then walked out quickly. Little did he know about how his gentleness made Leena feel. Compared with sweet words, she liked this kind of tender actions a lot more. She knew that they were a family and she would be waiting for him to come home.

The Blue Enchantress was far from its usual tonight. Something special was going on as there were several noisy and young wom

, she quickly reached out and tickled Leena under her arms. Leena immediately lost all her defense. She couldn't help but laugh out loud. She laughed so hard that she bent over to protect herself from Patricia's sneak attacks. Michelle took the opportunity and slipped away to open the door. When she managed it, she turned around and gave Patricia a thumb up to praise her.

"Oh! Wait! I'm going with you!" Now that the two crazy women had done these things, Leena was left with no choice but to run after them. She had to be with them together in case of emergencies since the two were simply out of their mind right now.

Noisy music, dazzling dance floor and dancing people. These were probably the most common elements of a bar! Truth be told, Leena did not like this kind of place that much. It was just that the two drunk women were enjoying everything and she couldn't do anything about it.

Women with beautiful faces and nice figures were always the targets of men in this place. So the moment Patricia and Michelle went to the dancing floor, they were greeted by oohs and ahhs from the crowd. It was the alcohol that was making the two dance sexily and voluptuously. Series of whistles suddenly filled the place for the two as they moved to the beat. On the other hand, Leena chose not to join them. She was left standing outside the dance floor while massaging her temples. She was so worried and couldn't think of anything to control the two.

Chapter 1302 An Unexpected Situation (Part Three)

The alcohol, plus the hot atmosphere of the dance floor made the two women more excited. They kept dancing and even sped up shaking their bodies. Their bolder actions aroused crazier screams from the crowd.

"Don't just stand there, Leena! Come and join us!" Patricia said and pulled her into the dance floor. Leena instantly felt lost and anxious since she got no clue about how to deal with the situation. She was in full panic!

"Alright, Patricia. Let's get out of here and go back to the room!" The multitude of men surrounding her made Leena least comfortable. However, Patricia and Michelle seemed to enjoy themselves a lot now. They were acting like they couldn't even hear Leena's advice.

"Hey, beautiful lady. Let's be friends!" A man took the opportunity and danced close to Leena. He touched her with his body while dancing and Leena was inexplicably disgusted. Her feet immediately stepped backward to avoid body contact with him. Unfortunately, another man was behind her and hugged her in his arms. Leena was so scared that she could not help but scream out. Both Patricia and Michelle were unable to hear her since they were too drunk to care and were also surrounded by crowds of men. Leena was left alone.

Meanwhile, Kevin was already on his way back home. He could feel his heart getting softer the closer he was to the downtown. There was only half an hour left before he could see his cute wife again and just the thought of it excited him beyond control. He was filled with thoughts of Leena when his phone suddenly rang.

"Hello. What's the matter? If you are calling me to have a drink with you, I'm sorry but I have to say no. I'm not available today," answered Kevin in a cold tone as he looked outside the window.

"Oh? Really? What if I tell you that your wife is in the bar right now? Are you not gonna come here? Furthermore, from what I see, she seems to be surrounded by a legion of men now." Hoyle was standing before a glass window as he looked at Drugged one night by her ex-boyfriend, a mysterious man took advantage of her in an ecstatic night filled with sex.

To take her revenge, she married the man, and used him.

"As long as I'm alive, I'm still his legal wife, while all of you are just his mistresses."

She remained adamant even when he was involved in scandals with other women.

Eventually she stormed off after she learned that he had betrayed her again. But life brought her back to him a few years later, to his astonishment.

r but those men surrounding them were already too hyped and excited. They just couldn't let the ladies go! The group of men surrounded them too firmly.

Thus the two weren't able to make a move no matter how hard they tried. That was when some random guy suddenly hit another and a fight exploded on the place.

"Patricia, Michelle!" Seeing that something went wrong, Leena tried to rush to them and give her friends a hand. She forgot about the man who had been harassing her until a pair of disgusting arms hugged her from behind. She was struggling and doing everything she could to escape when another set of arms grabbed her from nowhere. Everything happened so fast that the next thing she saw was how the shameless man crawled to the floor. He was kicked!

"Get out of here. I'll get your friends out of here soon." It was Hoyle! He protectively pulled out Leena from the commotion and pushed her away quickly. Leena was his friend's wife and he just couldn't let her get into this kind of trouble. Of course, he would save her!

Leena was left dumbfounded and puzzled as he stared at the man. It took her a few seconds before she realized who the guy was. If she guessed it right, the mysterious man who suddenly appeared must be Kevin's friend! Otherwise, she really had no clue why he helped her and her friends.

Chapter 1303 Fight In The Bar (Part One)

Both Patricia and Michelle were actually quite good at fighting. But they couldn't muster their actual strength and abilities since they were drunk. Besides, the muscle head they met seemed to also be good at it. That was why they got trapped in the crowd and were unable to get out of there. But the root cause was because these two women were too willful. So basically they brought it upon themselves.

"What the hell! Who did that? Who the fuck hit me? How dare you do that?! No one is allowed to leave here. There are consequences if you hit me," shouted Michelle loudly. After all the tension and chaos, she had become less and less drunk. Plus, she danced fiercely earlier and that helped her sober up a bit. She could finally figure out what was happening around them in the bar.

"Forget it, Michelle. Where is Leena? Let's go find her," Patricia suggested as she shook her heavy head a bit. For a moment she had forgotten about Leena. Thank goodness! At least she did not forget her completely.

"Oh, right! I forgot that she is still here. Look around and check where she is now, Patricia. She might have been hurt by these sons of bitches," Michelle said to Patricia and kicked off a man who began to cling to her. She was an expert at fighting, having some practice almost every day.

"Ok, I'll go find her! You be careful. Why is there so much trouble? We just came here for fun! I hope that she is fine. Otherwise, her brothers will definitely hold us responsible!" Speaking of this, Patricia thought of Tom. His gentle face flashed in her head. No, not a gentle face, but a demon's face! He was gentle in front of other people but not to her! She had seen his evil face several times.

Hoyle was a soldier once. So it was a piece of cake to deal with those good for nothing punks. He did not expect that these two women could handle them quite well without any help. That was such a surprise.

ome faces. That was how she made her final choice between the two men. Well, that was a common scene nowadays. A handsome or beautiful face would be much more preferred and welcomed. How cruel this world had become!

"Bitch! What did you say? I am strong and heroic. How could it possible that he, a macaroni-like boy toy, is more preferred than me?" The stranger glared at Patricia. Her comments had insulted him.

"Pfft! Your reasoning doesn't stand at all, okay? A butcher is much stronger than you. Am I supposed to like him? That's totally different, understand? Well, that is if you are also smart, which I doubt, because you are still here!" Michelle pursed her lips disdainfully. She wondered who this big guy was. She had never seen such a rude and stupid man in all the gangs she had met in S city.

"Bitch! You are asking for death! How dare you mention me and a butcher in the same breath?" The big man was outraged and reached out to attack Michelle. But he was stopped immediately by Hoyle. Hoyle had no way but to twist the corners of his mouth. Why couldn't the two be quiet for just one bit? Why did they have to irritate each other with shallow yet hurtful words? Fighting was tiring. Especially if it was with this guy who was big and surely powerful.

Chapter 1304 Fight In The Bar (Part Two)

"Patricia, Michelle! Stop talking!" Leena finally made her way towards her two friends. She could not help but knit her beautiful eyebrows worriedly at such a confrontation.

"Are you okay, Leena?" Patricia felt relieved, seeing Leena appear safely in front of her.

"I'm okay. But look at you two. What have you done? Now we are in trouble. Oh, God! What should I do?" Leena sniffed. She could still smell the stench of alcohol on Patricia.

"Trouble? What trouble? They came and bothered us first. We were just fighting back to protect ourselves." Michelle was born and raised up in a gang family. This kind of situation was quite familiar to her. So she did not take Leena's words seriously at all.

Leena twisted her mouth a bit and froze immediately. She always acted properly and hardly went to a bar because she did not want to cause unnecessary troubles for her husband, a military man. Now, her two female friends had gotten involved in a bar fight and Kevin would definitely find out about it. His friend came out to help them, after all. This meant that Kevin must have already known by now.

"Nana, watch out!" The moment Kevin walked to the dance floor, he saw someone throw a chair and it was about to hit Leena. He rushed towards her and turned around to hold her in his arms to protect her from being hit. The chair crashed on his back with a heavy thud.

"Kevin, why are you here? Oh, wait... No, that's not the point! Are you hurt?" Leena struggled out from his arms. She was worried so much, turning him around to check his back.

"I'm okay. It stings a little. Get yourself out of this area and stay out of more trouble. I'm gonna take care of this situation." Kevin smiled at his wife to comfort her. Nothing in him wanted to blame her at all.

"Okay, you be careful!" Leena replied obediently. She was indeed worried about him. But she also knew that it would be endless troubles waiting for him.

"Now that you are willing to admit your mistake, I can let go of it this time. But don't forget to pay the bill and all the damages you caused tonight." Kevin said this, not to make it easy on him, but because it was not appropriate to punish him. A fight was common in such places like the bar, after all. What was more, no one got hurt or worse, ended up dead. A warning to him was enough in principle. Besides, he did not come here as an officer on duty. Therefore, he might get into another set of troubles if he showed any abuse of power. He didn't want to find himself in a viral video about that.

"Thank you, thank you. We will pay the bill and will be on our way." The muscle head walked away quickly as soon as he finished his words as if he was afraid that Kevin might pull him back. His men also followed him like chickens to a farmer with feed.

"Kevin, you just let them go like that?" Patricia still reeked of alcohol. She turned her arm which still hurt a bit, unsatisfied.

"What would you have preferred? Call the police here? And then the police take you to the station for questioning?" Kevin frowned tightly. He did not want to experience it with them. It would be extremely troublesome.

MY WIFE IS AN ALOOF BEAUTY

Chapter 1305 Fight In The Bar (Part Three)

"No, of course not! But I think you should have at least hit them heavily and given them something to remember," Patricia muttered. Obviously, she was not satisfied with the way Kevin dealt with those guys.

"And then? People would have the opportunity to gossip that the military bullies people at a bar and takes advantage of his power? Is that what you want?" Kevin said coldly. It was not that he was afraid of that man, but he did not want to be the one to create a bad name for the military. The last thing he needed was another case for disciplinary action.

"Is that really so terrible?" Patricia was confused. She heard that soldiers always threw their weight around and disrespected the rights of civilians. Was that not the case?

"You tell me!" Kevin replied to make her think. The reason why there was sometimes disharmony between the army and the ordinary people was because many people thought of the military the way Patricia did.

"How could I know? Why do you ask me that?" Patricia glared back at Kevin. She knew he wasn't in a good mood now because Leena was almost hit by a chair.

"Alright! Why don't we take this to another room, please! We can continue this discussion there peacefully and with a few drinks and some food. What do you guys say?" Hoyle led the way to a private room. He did not think it was wise for Kevin to stay in the public area with his military uniform on.

"Let's go, Nana." Kevin reached out to hold Leena's hand and talked to her in a careful tone, which was totally different from the cold and distant tone he used to talk to other people.

"Hey, what's their relationship?" Michelle was confused and asked Patricia following them closely behind.

"Obviously, they are a couple. Can't you think a bit?" Patricia replied hel ice to meet you. I am Leena Leng. Thank you so much, especially, for your kindness and hospitality." Leena reached out politely to Hoyle for a handshake. Her face blushed immediately at the thought that he always saw her in awkward situations.

"I'm Hoyle Yi. Nice to meet you, too. Probably my parents were quite confident about their son, so they gave me such an uncommon name. Also, don't thank me for the bill last time. It's on Kevin. You can thank him," Hoyle told a joke about his name to relax the atmosphere. At the same time he reached out to shake her hand.

"No way! You know each other?" Patricia said and took a look at Leena with blaming eyes. Now she understood why Leena was so concerned when they invited her to this bar. The boss and Kevin were friends!

"It's not her fault. It's her first time to see me today." Hoyle smiled broadly. Actually he saw her before. He was also present that night when she was drunk. But Kevin was still there with her, so Hoyle did not sit close to her. Despite this, he saw everything, except, of course, what happened inside the private room. He was not a person who liked to talk about what other people did behind closed doors.

Chapter 1306 The Appointment With The Obstetrician (Part One)

"Now is not the time to talk about this. You know the bar is a complicated place. Why weren't you more careful?" Kevin didn't mean to blame anybody. It was just that he thought girls nowadays didn't know how to take care of themselves. Leena was a good example of it. Back then, if she had decided to approach someone who was not Kevin, she might have run into a creep. That would have been a big possibility. How would Leena's life have turned out then?

"Who knew that all men were creeps?" Patricia mumbled, a bit reluctant. They didn't face such a situation every time they went out to a pub. Besides, they were not as reckless today. How could they have known that this would happen?

"Wait a minute. Not all men are creeps. I appreciate beautiful women, that's true. But I am definitely not a creep," Hoyle was quick to explain himself. At a pub, he could meet all kinds of beautiful girls every day. However, he still couldn't find a girl who truly caught his eyes. Maybe there were just too many choices so he couldn't decide. He had already forgotten what he had been searching for in the first place. He knew that every woman had her own special qualities. Every woman he met was proof of it. They also shared a lot in common, and it confused Hoyle quite a bit.

"All right, everybody. I know you must be very tired. Let's call it a night. Hoyle, can you help me drive them home? We should get going now." Kevin looked at his watch. It was already one o'clock in the morning. For some people, this was the beginning of nightlife. But Kevin had had a tough day. He was already tired. It was obvious from the tired expression on his face.

"Yes, of course. But before we go, could you at least introduce us to one another?" Hoyle's mouth twitched in amusement. He didn't even know the names of these girls, for God's sake. Kevin had forgotten to tell him.

"Oh! Right. Sorry. The tall one's name is Patricia Bai. And the short one is Michelle Mi. They are both Leena's friends." Kevin didn't want to he asked his sister to accompany Belinda. And Leena, being her kind and caring self, gladly agreed.

"Wow. Is this the heartbeat of the baby, doctor? It is amazing!" Leena said, the surprise evident in her voice. She couldn't tell where was the baby on the dark screen, but the heartbeat was there and easy to hear. She had never accompanied a pregnant woman to her appointment, so she felt everything to be magical and surprising.

"Yes, it is. The baby is quite small right now so the heartbeat is not that strong, as you may hear. Don't worry about it though, it will get stronger as the baby grows," the doctor explained in a patient voice. Belinda was a friend of the head of this hospital, so the doctor was aware that she had to treat the patient carefully.

"Is the baby healthy, doctor?" Just like every pregnant woman in the world, what concerned Belinda the most was her baby's health.

"Yes. From what I can tell, the baby is quite healthy. As a pregnant woman, you should be careful about what you eat. Eat more fruits and vegetables. Protein is important, too. Eat healthy and nutritious food, but also be careful of your dietary intake," the doctor said as she wrote something down on her medical chart. She was glad that Belinda's baby was healthy. As long as Belinda followed her instructions, she should be fine.

Chapter 1307 The Appointment With The Obstetrician (Part Two)

"Okay, I see. Thank you, doctor." Belinda put her hands on her abdomen, touching it gently. One could tell that she already loved her baby. The look on her face was the look that only a mother could have for her child.

"Besides, you should also walk more. Go for a walk each day. Do adequate exercises every day, but don't tire yourself out. Don't have sexual intercourse with your husband during the first three months and the last three months of your pregnancy. The former one may lead to miscarriage and the latter one may cause premature birth. You can have sex in the middle stage of your pregnancy, but please be extremely careful. You don't want to hurt the baby. That's all you need to remember," the doctor continued, instructing Belinda about everything she should be aware of. She didn't notice that Belinda's face immediately turned red at the words.

"You could do some antenatal training if you like. Listen to soft music, talk to the baby, etc. Keep yourself in a good mood. Do not exhaust yourself. Sleep is important for both you and the baby. Keep what I said in mind and you would be fine with your pregnancy. You will have a beautiful and healthy baby in the end." The doctor finally finished writing and raised her head to look at Belinda, hoping that her patient kept the instructions in mind.

"Doctor, the baby is still so small right now. Can it hear our voices if we talk to it?" Leena asked out of curiosity. She had never been pregnant nor met a pregnant woman before. Naturally, she was curious about this and was full of all kinds of questions.

"Of course. The baby is in her abdomen but it can still hear all kinds of sounds, including your voice. The baby gets the energy from the mother's food, so it's important for the mother to eat healthy." The doctor glanced at Leena, thinking t

, now that we are already at the hospital? The doctor told me that if you are ready to have a baby and want a healthy one, you should thoroughly prepare for it. It's good for both the mother and the baby." Belinda didn't expect to be pregnant so soon. If there was one thing she regretted, it was that she didn't plan for the pregnancy in advance so that she was in her best possible health when conceiving the baby. She couldn't forget what the doctor said to her. She hoped that Leena would pay attention to the instructions if she wanted to have a child.

"No. I don't think there's any need for me to have a check-up right now. Every child is an angel gifted to us by God. I think I will just wait for it to happen." Leena shook her head. She was still too young to have kids. Besides, Kevin was not of age to want a child either. They should wait a bit longer. Right now, the two of them alone were enough.

"That's up to you. You and Kevin are still young anyway. I guess you don't want a child right now." Belinda smiled at Leena. Ever since she got pregnant, she had become more gentle towards others. There was a glow to her that only pregnant women had. It made others feel more comfortable around her.

Chapter 1308 The Appointment With The Obstetrician (Part Three)

"You're right. We will take our time." Leena grinned at Belinda's words. Her face reflected the happiness she felt. She had been over the moon ever since she came to know that Kevin was in love with her. She didn't think she could feel any happier at this moment.

"There is a mall near the hospital that sells baby stuff. How about we go there and shop?" Belinda asked in excitement. When Duke got to know that she was really pregnant, he took over her business and became quite busy. Belinda, as a pregnant woman, had nothing to do, so she suddenly had a lot of free time on her hands. She was not quite used to it. After all, her life had always been busy before.

"Okay. I don't have anything to do anyway." Leena looked up at the sky. The sun was beaming and the weather was nice. It was indeed a good time to go shopping. Besides, she was in a great mood, so she didn't mind accompanying Belinda to shop for her little niece or nephew.

"But before we go, let's grab something to eat first! I don't know if it's because I am pregnant, but I get hungry very easily these days," Belinda said, looking around for a nice place to eat. Her eyes immediately lit up when she saw a bakery nearby. She was craving a delicious cake.

"What do you want to eat? It's my treat! For my little niece or nephew." Leena looked around too. Maybe it was because they were still outside the hospital, but most of the shops here were flower or fruit shops. It was hard to spot a quiet place to get something to eat.

"Haha. All right. If we are going to go shopping later, how about we eat nearby? Um, how about cakes? I am craving a nice cake." Belinda didn't know if it was normal for her to suddenly crave for certain foods. She had never been like this. Ever since she got pregnant though, she always wanted to eat a particular food. The feeling was always strong. She did not rest until she was satisfied.

"Then what are we waiting for? Let's go! We can eat all the cakes you want. How about this omer would be leaving. We really can't do as you say." The waitress had a friendly smile on her face, but secretly, she regretted that she had forgotten to pack up the cake for Leena. It had led to this disaster.

"Are you stupid or what? What are you waiting for? Why don't you go and ask that customer for me? Why did your boss hire a stupid employee like you? I am going to file a complaint against you if you don't do something about it right now!" Louisa raised her voice, furious. It drew the attention of the other people in the bakery, including that of Leena and Belinda. From where they were sitting, they could only see the back of the rude customer. Leena didn't know that it was Louisa, but she did think the voice was quite familiar.

"Okay okay, please wait here. I will go and talk to her." The waitress looked at Louisa with frightened eyes. This woman was scary and demanding. But she was just an employee so she couldn't do anything about it. Besides, she was afraid that the customer would become violent. There were all kinds of people in the world. She had to do as Louisa said and go to ask the other customer.

"Be quick! I don't have all day." Louisa smirked to herself. She knew that she had to be aggressive and tough to make others do as she demanded. It was the only way to get what she wanted.

Chapter 1309 The Worst In Louisa(Part One)

The waitress bit her lower lip and walked uneasily towards Leena's table. She really hoped that the two women were open to persuasion, otherwise she had no idea how to deal with the situation.

"Sorry to trouble you, ladies. I wonder if you'd do me a tiny favor?" she asked while looking at Leena with a hopeful expression. It was Leena who had asked her to pack up the cake.

"What's the matter? Relax. Say it to me." Leena gave her a sweet smile. She had a good temper and always spoke softly.

"Here's the thing. A guest also wants to have a green tea cake, but there's only one available now and you've asked me to pack it up first. If you are not leaving so soon, I wonder if we can give her the cake. The new batch of green tea cakes will be available in half an hour," she said carefully while keeping a close look at Leena's face. She was afraid that Leena might lose her temper on hearing the bad news.

"Oh, I see. That's okay. We're going shopping in the nearby baby store. I don't mind coming back for the cake after that. So yes, go ahead and give the cake to that guest," Leena said as she shrugged. Maybe that person was in a hurry, and Leena could totally understand that.

"Really? Thank you so much. You really helped me a lot." The waitress didn't expect Leena to be such an amiable person, and had thought she would be rejected, and even scolded. She was relieved and even a little excited because the problem was easily solved.

"No problem. Just give it to her," Leena said while looking in the direction of the showcase. Meanwhile, Louisa was fed up with waiting and turned to check if the waitress was done. As a result, Louisa and Leena saw each other right re stupid things to ruin his reputation. If you continue to act like this, no one will ever respect you." Leena's frustration crept up to her. She didn't expect to meet Louisa here. And it seemed that Louisa hadn't learned her lesson at all. Leena couldn't help but shake her head, feeling pity for the Commander to have such a waste of a daughter.

"Bah! Did I ask you to do my father a favor? Did I ask you to respect me? Don't act like you are a noble person. You are making me gross." At the mention of her father, Louisa was even angrier. She didn't understand why her father helped outsiders punish her instead of taking her side.

"If it were you who asked us to spare you, we would act as if you didn't exist, okay? You should feel lucky that you have a good father who is willing to entreat our forgiveness for you, otherwise you would have been dead now. Stop yelling and leave us!" Belinda cut in. She finally realized that the shameless woman was Louisa, the Commander's daughter, the one who had pushed Leena into the water. Leena had barely survived that catastrophe, drowning and going into coma for two days.

MY WIFE IS AN ALOOF BEAUTY

"This is between me and her. You have no right to interfere in our affairs!" Louisa glowered at Belinda. Every time she tried to get even with Leena, there was always a person coming forward to protect her. On the contrary, Louisa was always on her own. Even Claire, who Louisa had thought would always side with her, betrayed her and turned against her. This made Louisa both angry and sad.

"Maybe in your eyes, I'm an outsider, but I am not. I'm Leena's sister-in-law. We are family. So I have every right and duty to protect her," Belinda said in a calm voice. She was not angered at all, as it was no use quarreling with a person like Louisa.

"So what? Are you going to fight with me because of her?" Louisa suddenly pulled a chair and sat beside them without their consent. Calm as she looked, she was fuming on the inside. 'Why? Why is everyone taking Leena Leng's side?' she asked herself.

"I'm not going to fight with anyone. But I won't allow anyone to hurt Leena. I have to be more cautious as there's a mad dog here." Belinda had a silver tongue and didn't even yield to Edward in swearing at people.

"Ha! I know you are trying to irritate me. But I won't buy it." Louisa was a clever woman. Even though she was pissed off by the two right now, she forced back the strong urge to kick over the table. Otherwise her father would ground her again.

"Belinda, let's go!" Leena offered as she picked up her purse. She didn't want to waste time on Louisa anymore. They had finished their cakes and there was no reason to stay any longer.

"All right. Go ask the waitress to pack up the cake. Don't give it to her."

Belinda stood up. She was happy to give the cake to anyone other than Louis. Patricia slowed down, pulled over, and got out of her car. She was wearing a red racing suit, which made her look breathtaking, like straight out of a flaming poster. Her helmet covered her ruddy face which gave an aura of mystery and sophistication.

"Michelle, how was it? Did I go faster than the last time?" Taking off her helmet, Patricia tossed back her short hair, stepped across the railing and strode towards Michelle.

"Yes! Ten seconds faster! But my heart also stopped for ten seconds. Patricia, how could you enjoy this? It scared me to death!" Michelle was still stunned, reeling from the shock and awe of the race, which amused Patricia.

"Only ten seconds? That's not enough. I still need to be faster," Patricia said with a frown as she was not satisfied with the result. It was in the middle of winter, but her forehead had grown damp. She had been really focused on driving.

"What do you mean? It's not fast enough? Are you kidding me? I finally realized why you easily overtook me the other day." Michelle shook her head in disbelief. She really admired Patricia for being a highly skilled race driver.
