Chapter 1431 Even Death Cant Part Us (Part Three)

"Really? That is great!" Kevin was glad to hear the news, but he was puzzled. 'If this is not the reason why Leena is upset, then what could have happened to bother her so much?' he wondered.

"Yes, it really is. I'm so happy for her," Leena said and smiled. She truly loved this moment — strolling together through the beautiful park in peace, when no one was around.

"Nana, do you have something you want to tell me?" Kevin stopped and looked at Leena in the eye.

"No, I don't. I just want to go for a walk with you after dinner," Leena said, dodging his eyes. She didn't think it was the right time to tell him the truth — that she could not get pregnant.

"I wish this moment could last forever. We could walk hand in hand to the end of the world," Kevin said as he started walking again. He had thought she would tell him what she had been hiding this evening, but it seemed she was still not prepared for it. He'd have to be more patient with her.

"I feel the same way. What a coincidence." Leena turned to look at Kevin with a smirk. She decided not to look so dejected in front of Kevin, otherwise, he would grow concerned.

"Yes, it is a coincidence," Kevin said. He rubbed her hands together to warm them up. Suddenly, a thought popped into his head — that Leena would leave him. 'What am I thinking?' Kevin shook his head.

"Kevin, I've made a prepayment for the utilities and gas. The water and electricity as well as the gas won't get cut off in a long time," Leena told him casually. She looked calm, but deep down, her heart was breaking into pieces. The pain seemed to spread through her veins.

"Why are you saying that?" Kevin stopped in his footsteps once again. He stared at Leena, trying to figure out but he could not force Leena to tell him. Her sweet smile was ripping his soul apart as a sharp dagger would. She was laughing in his arms but crying on the inside. It was painstaking.

Leena met Dorothy once again. This time, they met at the promotion party for a TV show. Leena had gone there as Rain's companion.

"Leena Leng, you look stunning tonight," Dorothy told her with a smile. She was wearing a purple dress that accentuated her perfect body.

"Thank you, Miss Lu. You look good too," Leena answered politely. To most people, she was a sight to behold. She had fair skin and brown hair that emphasized her bright eyes. She was fond of white, so she chose to wear a white dress tonight. She looked like a fairy out of a tale with her light make-up and jacinth lipstick.

"Why isn't Major General Gu with you tonight?" Dorothy asked her when she noticed that Kevin was not around.

"Oh, well, he never comes to this kind of parties," Leena explained casually as her eyes followed Rain. She saw him flirting with the actresses. Leena felt sorry for him. She wondered how long it would take for him to finally move on and find love again.

Chapter 1432 A Drunken Rain (Part One)

"Oh, well, I can understand it. After all, he is a Major General," Dorothy said politely, by way of explanation. Passersby greeted her from time to time; she was after all a popular actress.

"Excuse me," Leena said, "but, I must be leaving now." Leena frowned as she noticed Rain, surrounded by a group of women fawning over him. She quickly trotted over. He really was going too far.

Dorothy drank some more wine and stared at Leena, licking her red lips. The woman who had used her photos to blackmail her was pressing her again, and Dorothy must do something about it this evening.

"Enough, Rain! Stop drinking!" Leena instructed firmly, taking his glass and setting it on the table next to them.

"I just had a few glasses," Rain explained. 'I shouldn't have asked Leena to be my companion to this party, she is being a bore, ' he thought.

"It doesn't matter how much you drank. You are going too far this evening. You are acting like a fuckboy!" Leena gritted her teeth in suppressed anger. Leena hated this kind of behavior, especially in men, so she was quick to stop him.

"Oh no, look, our little princess has gotten angry," Rain teased in an animated voice, avoiding Leena's disapproving eye.

"I'm not angry. I just don't want you to be taken advantage of by a group of shameless women," Leena said with a frown. She just didn't understand how women could act so shamelessly, and without honor. They pretended to be the purest and most innocent women, but under the magnifying glass they were revealed as willing to sleep with anyone who was rich and powerful.

"So what? If I have sex with them, I'm not the one on the loose," Rain said, arching one eyebrow. Rain found that Leena had changed a lot since she got married. In the past she would not have involved herself in his affairs.

"Come on! You were acting like a man-whore, with those women touching you all over. And to act so in public! I hate seeing you like this, so I interceded. But, if that's how you want to act and be seen, then go ahead, I'm tired of caring." Leena was really pissed off with Rain now as he was making a mockery of himself.

"Ha! Why should I deny myself some pleasure? No one truly loves me, so if so many women are interested in spending time with me, why should I turn them down?" Rain said bitterly. Sorrow had crept into his voice, breaking Leena's heart.

been blue recently, and wanted to vent her sorrow by yelling at the KTV. She thought that it might help Rain too.

"Just the two of us? That's hardly funny." He was not in the mood for antics. Actually, he had not been in the mood to do anything since Annie left. He felt like a zombie, a walking dead in his own life.

"You think that I can't be fun?" Leena cast a challenging glance at him.

"Look at what you are wearing! You are in a formal dress. Have you seen anyone go to a KTV in a formal dress?" Rain glanced pointedly at Leena's dress and added, "You're being silly."

"Oh, no, well I guess not. I didn't consider that," she admitted, deflated by his attitude. "So, where do you want to go then?" she added and shivered in the freezing cold outside. Leena wanted to go home now, but she was worried about Rain, and didn't want to leave him alone.

"Let me drive you home. We can't go anywhere with you dressed like that, in any case." He had noticed her discomfort, and draped his coat over her shoulders.

"Okay, let's hang out next time, then," she suggested, grateful for the warmth of his coat.

"You'll owe me one." Rain agreed, walking her towards his car.

Arriving at Grand Apartment, they saw Kevin, who had just returned from out of the city. Kevin, however, didn't see them, and walked briskly towards the elevator.

"Kevin, wait!" Leena called out to him. She recognized her husband, even though his broad back was towards them. She was thrilled to see him.

On hearing her familiar voice, Kevin turned, and was stunned to see Leena and Rain.

Chapter 1433 A Drunken Rain (Part Two)

"Nana, Rain, were you out together?" Kevin asked. "It's none of your concern!" Rain blurted out. He still held hostility towards Kevin.

"Rain!" Leena rebuked him, furrowing her brow. She pinched him hard on the side. She was angered by Rain's attitude.

"Hey, would you stop pinching me? What an ungrateful woman you are! I've been so nice to you, but instead, you hurt me for another," Rain said bitterly, rubbing at his bruised skin. He felt heart broken; the reason why he had always held hostility towards Kevin was that Kevin was now more important in her eyes.

Amused by Leena's move, Kevin tried his best to hold back his laughter. He felt great having such a sweet and loyal wife.

"Rain!" Leena coughed dryly, embarrassed by Rain's statement. She hadn't expected Rain to say it out loud, and Kevin must now think her a rude woman.

"Stop coughing, okay? Kevin already saw your true colors now," Rain said, walking to the elevator, and leaving them behind.

"Rain, where are you going?" Leena called in confusion. She couldn't understand why he was going to the elevator, and not back home.

"Aren't you going to invite me in? How rude? I'm so disappointed in you!" Rain said coldly, looking Leena in the eye.

"Uh...sorry. I thought that you would be going back home now." Leena apologized, rubbing at her nose in embarrassment, concerned that she had gone too far and offended Rain.

"Let's go in," Kevin said, indifferent to the sudden tension. Leena had been in low spirits recently, and he thought it was not a bad idea to have Rain for company to cheer her up.

Rain didn't want to go back home now. There would be no one waiting for him, and he would be alone and bored there. So, he decided to stay at Leena and Kevin's house instead. They entered the house. Rain walked towards the couch, and leaned casually against it, while Leena went upstairs to change her clothes.

"What would you like to drink, coffee or tea?" Kevin offered from the kitchen.

"Is there a third option?" Rain asked spitefully, intending to make things difficult for Kevin.

"Yes, there is. So, you want water?" Kevin replied seriously, as if he didn't realize Rain's intention.

"Ha ha! Kevin, can you stop being so serious? Never mind, give me coffee, please." Rain was upset that Kevin had avoided his plan, and he was unable to be difficult any further.

beloved sworn sister, and he shouldn't do that.

"No, I want Leena to cook for me," Rain insisted. His eyes had gone a little red, like he was about to cry.

"Fine, I'll cook. But, I have to warn you first, I'm not a good cook." Entering the kitchen, Leena winked at Kevin, silently asking him not to argue with Rain.

"Hey, Kevin. Do you have any wine? Let's drink together," Rain said, rubbing his nose to cover his emotions. Rain didn't know why he missed a sense of home, when seeing Leena and Kevin together. He anguished and almost lost control.

"Yes, we have," Kevin said, but made no move to fetch any. Rain had drunk enough. Leena had told him about the story of Rain and Annie, but he hadn't met the mystery woman.

"Kevin, you know what? You are so lucky to have married Leena. But, you had better promise to never hurt her, otherwise I'll not spare you," Rain stammered, the liquor he had consumed catching up to him now.

"I know. I'll always thank god that I met her." Kevin smiled, unavoidably happy. Seeing Kevin's joy made Rain feel even more dejected.

"What a lucky dog you are! She is our little princess, but you stole her away!" Rain said darkly. Rain took a sip of his coffee. It was bitter, but he liked it, for his heart was filled with bitterness. He had met the detective this afternoon; he had said that they had tried their best to look for Annie, but had failed, finding no sign of her. They guessed that Annie might have left the world. Rain had had a tantrum upon hearing the news, and had almost thrown the detective out of the window.

MY WIFE IS AN ALOOF BEAUTY

Chapter 1434 Got Drunk (Part One)

"Sorry for this," Kevin smiled and said apologetically. Even though they had held grudges against him because of his sudden marriage with Leena, he would not complain. Because in this regard, he actually owed them. He admitted that he did not really take their feelings into consideration when he married her.

"Just forget it. The rice is already cooked. What is done cannot be undone. What else could we do now?" Rain smiled helplessly. The talk concerning marriage made Rain become very emotional as he suddenly thought of Annie. Although they had already slept with each other, Annie still left him without so much as a note or goodbye.

"Have there been any problems in your work recently?" Kevin asked casually. This was a mission from Leena. Rain hadn't come around yet from his emotional issues, so Leena asked Kevin to straighten him out. But in Kevin's eyes, he himself was the one who needed to be straightened out. He also had a lot on his mind recently.

"Work will never be the reason that bothers me. Work problems are not real problems for me. Moreover, even if the sky falls, Edward is the one to bear the brunt." This was the first time that Rain had been willing to spend time with Kevin as friends. Probably because he was down and depressed today, and he really needed to let off some steam. Unlike on other days, he had become less overbearing.

"Then it is love that you are troubled by." Kevin frowned, feeling that Leena had given him a very daunting task.

"What do you think?" Rain pursed his lips and lay back on the sofa lazily. He was always like this, idle and carefree.

"It's beyond me," Kevin acknowledged. He was not a person who was good at reading people's minds.

"Then don't try to pry into my personal affairs." Rain was a man who liked to showcase his individuality, that he was different from most people, but he turned out to be very reserved when it came to matters of the heart.

"I'm sorry if I crossed the line," Kevin sa

. Otherwise, it'll be a social media viral party with you in the spotlight, understand? I will go upstairs to handle my emails." Leena thought that it was better for her to keep them out of her sight. If they wanted to get drunk, then just let them be! At least they were not out in a bar or somewhere else, doing something they might regret. Probably they would feel better this way. She knew they would not cause any commotion here even if they got too drunk.

"Okay! Go then!" Kevin agreed. He didn't want her to stay here and nag him all night.

"Come on, cheers!" Rain was eager to gulp the whole glass of wine down. He really wanted to get drunk.

"Hey, come on, take it slow!" Kevin reached out his hand and tried to stop him. If he continued to drink like this, he'd be drunk and unable to control himself way before midnight.

"Huh! You are probably worried that I would drink up the good wine you have collected here at your home, right? Well don't worry about that. I will give you a truckload of your favorite wines tomorrow." Rain said impulsively. He had started to get a little tipsy now.

"It's not the matter of the wine. Leena would be worried." Although Kevin also drank much wine, he was still very much clear headed. He could hold his wine well and few people could beat him in this aspect.

Chapter 1435 Got Drunk (Part Two)

"It surprises me and makes me very happy that you care very much for our little princess. I hope that you can always be this good to her. Even if you know that she may never be pregnant, you should always love her and treasure her. Because she is the most precious person in our hearts, and no one else could replace her." Rain probably had already gotten drunk, otherwise he wouldn't be so negligent and spill the beans to Kevin. His tongue got too loose too soon.

"Huh? Wait...What did you say? Who may never be pregnant?" The alcohol had started to kick in and Kevin was a little dazed. He was already zoning out at the moment, that was why he didn't hear it clearly.

"What pregnant? I never said pregnant. I said that Leena was very precious to us. Come on, let's drink some more." Rain momentarily became sober as he accidentally blurted out Leena's secret. Fortunately, Kevin didn't clearly understand because of the alcohol and Rain was quick enough to rebound and cover it up. But in his own honest opinion, he believed that Kevin should be informed of such an important thing. But Leena insisted that they help her hide it from her husband. She just wasn't ready to ruin Kevin's happiness and bliss with such bad news, choosing to keep the pains and sorrows to herself.

"No, that's not right. I know you said 'precious', But I know that I heard you say something like pregnant as well." Kevin frowned and tried to remember what Rain said exactly but he couldn't. Was he really drunk? The alcohol might have blanked his memory and that was why he might have misheard Rain.

"Aww, Come on! Let's just keep drinking. Any way, thank you for taking care of our precious Leena," Rain hurriedly tried to steer the conversation away from a potential disaster. He couldn't let Kevin sense that something was amiss.

The drinking session ended with both men so drunk that they almost couldn't get up from the couch. Leena couldn't let Rain go home like this, so she made him stay in the guest room for the night.

"Annie..." Rain mumbled. One could feel how much he loved her in the endearing only ordered her.

"Oh! Out here in the hallway?" Leena was stunned. She glanced at the stairs and looked hesitantly. Although Rain was drunk, she still worried that he might suddenly appear.

"What else do you think?" Kevin suddenly became sulky and stubborn just like a child. No one knew what was on his mind now. He was just making a fuss.

"Let's go to our room first, okay?" Leena frowned and refused subconsciously. He never behaved aggressively like this before. Leena wondered what happened to him tonight.

"No, I just want to do it here, right here," Kevin insisted, unwilling to compromise. He looked intensely at her with his blurry eyes and rested his gaze firmly on her luscious lips.

"Haha! Kevin, what happened to you tonight? You are acting like a kid!" Leena laughed. The Kevin before her now was not the one she knew. He was confronting her with raised eyebrows, together with a tinge of charm and childishness. This was not like him at all. .

"Don't try to distract me. I will not fall into your trap of manipulation." Kevin firmed his grasp and pulled her closer to him. He looked deep into her eyes, his face becoming red and hot and his eyes flashing with passion and fire.

Leena exhaled deeply and took a look at the downstairs again. Then she tiptoed and timidly planted a quick kiss on his thin lips, the way a dragonfly would skim the surface of the water.

Chapter 1436 Got Drunk (Part Three)

"There, are you satisfied now?" Leena bit her lips and lowered her head, looking at her toes. She felt a bit embarrassed at the unfamiliar thing she just did. Kevin was making her do little shameless things bit by bit. What was going to be next?

"Just so so," Kevin replied. He stopped messing around because he felt a little more dizzy now. The alcohol was really starting to have its full effect.

"Okay, okay, let's go into the room now." Relieved, Leena helped him into the room. They could finally rest. With that much alcohol, she saw how her husband could turn into a giant baby.

"Nana, you are good at taking advantage of loopholes." Lying on the bed, Kevin gazed at her lazily.

"Me? You are so wrong! Stay there, I will go to prepare the bath water for you." Leena hurriedly ran into the bathroom, happy that she managed to muddle through this situation but she wouldn't admit it. Wasn't he the one who said it? She only needed to kiss him. He didn't require how long she should do the kiss. Therefore it was up to her to decide how long it was going to be.

Kevin smiled with self-mockery. It was true that he was a little drunk, but he was still conscious. He then remembered and dwelled on the thing that slipped out of Rain's mouth earlier when they were drinking. He felt that he hadn't misheard anything. The feeling in his gut that they were deliberately hiding something from him was getting stronger.

The next day when Leena woke up and opened her eyes, she found herself in the arms of Kevin, who was still in a deep sound sleep. She felt so warm as Kevin wrapped her by the waist with his muscular arms. And she found that he would subconsciously tighten his grip at her slightest movement, as if he was afraid that she would go away at any time. She carefully and quietly slid out of his embrace and got out of bed. There were now two men in the house who would need breakfast soon.

Coming downstairs, Leena found that Rain was still asleep. He drank too much last night. He was so drunk that he didn't even have any reaction when she walked into his room and tucked him in.

Thinking that they would feel like crap after they got up because of the hangover, she went into the kitchen and cooked some millet porridge. She added some c es especially for you. Have a try! I know they're your favorite," Leena hurriedly interrupted the two and came to the rescue. She could no longer sit and watch, as the situation might spin out of control.

"Specially made for me? Look at that! Just for me, right? Surely I will have a try." Rain looked at Kevin with a smug face, as if saying, 'Look, these dishes are specially made for me by Leena. You can only watch me eat, huh!'

"Is it good?" Leena kicked Kevin under the table, ordering him to shut up. She was happy to see that Rain and Kevin had just started getting along, and she couldn't let the newly built and still fragile relationship go back to being cold and abrasive.

"Yes! It's very tasty. I'm very proud to have such a sister, who is always the best in everything." Rain beamed. He was happy to see Kevin's face become sullen.

Kevin frowned but he said nothing. He thought, 'Huh! Your sister? She is my wife now! If it were not for Leena who asked me to keep quiet, I would definitely strike back!'

The breakfast ended in an awkward atmosphere. Seeing that they stopped wrangling with each other, Leena felt relieved. She really thought that her life on earth would be shortened if they kept quibbling.

Rain soon bid good bye to them and left. He didn't believe that Annie would really disappear from his life easily and once and for all. So he decided to go to a more competent detective agency to find her. He would not easily give up until he was left with no other options.

MY WIFE IS AN ALOOF BEAUTY

"Kevin, do you know what's wrong with him?" Leena asked. Watching Rain's car pull out into the street made her hug herself worriedly.

"Only love can hurt him that much," Kevin replied in a low voice. He remembered what Rain said to him last night, thus, he sighed.

"Love can be tiring sometimes," said Leena with a disapproving frown. She then gently leaned against Kevin's shoulder as if wanting him to comfort her.

"You're right, Nana! By the way, It's cold here. Let's get inside." Kevin wrapped his arms around Leena as he spoke. He had always cared about her health, thus, he protected her from the cold wind.

"Aren't you going to the army base today?" inquired Leena as she looked up at Kevin. Spending some quality time with him wasn't something she could easily get due to his career.

"I'm free today. Would you like us to go somewhere and do something together?" Kevin lowered his head and kissed his wife's forehead gently. Leena had been excessively stressed recently. Heaven knew that he would do everything to comfort her mind.

"I'm too familiar with S City and we don't have much time to enjoy some out-of-town trips. Just forget it, Kevin. Let's just stay at home." These days, Leena had spent most of her time at home as she was rushing her designs. She would love to go out and travel. However, she wasn't ready to do that with Kevin emotionally yet.

"How about we go shopping? Don't girls like that? Just walking around the mall with their boyfriends or husbands?" He was trying his best. Nonetheless, Kevin felt as though Leena was getting out of his control. He really couldn't stop himself from getting illusions that she would leave him soon. He was wondering i im. His mind was reeling whether the driver was an enemy. He knew deep down that he might have pissed off some gangsters in the past. This could be an act of revenge against him.

"Let's get out of here," said Leena. Terror quickly ate her up after hearing Kevin's explanation. Moreover, she could read from Kevin's serious face that they were indeed in great danger.

"It's too late. I bet the roads outside have been blocked," Kevin frowned when he saw another car driving towards them. He had always been a brave man, however, an unexplainable fear still made it to his chest. What if these people got desperate and shot him and Leena? They might not survive this if that happened.

"What about now? What should we do?" To be honest, Leena had never been scared of death. However, knowing that Kevin was in danger together with her still frightened her. Kevin's safety was her biggest concern.

"Get on the car right now and call the police," ordered Kevin in a calm tone. His eyes were now focused on the group of men who were getting off the cars. He felt relief washed over him upon seeing no signs of guns anywhere.

MY WIFE IS AN ALOOF BEAUTY

Chapter 1438 I Love Her Only (Part Two)

Leena didn't hesitate and got on the car as quickly as possible. She had faith in Kevin's judgment and never would she dare question him right now.

On the other hand, Kevin took off his coat and threw it into the passenger seat. He could sense that there would be a fight soon and he didn't want his coat to get dirty.

"Nana, close the window," said Kevin, without looking back at his wife. His expression was so dark that even Leena felt terrified just by how dangerous his eyes were.

"Not bad, kid! I have thought you would escape with your wife. However, you didn't do that. You do want to be a hero, don't you?" said the man who appeared to be the leader. He had blond hair and he wore a pair of big earrings. He removed his sunglasses while walking towards Kevin.

"Who are you?" asked Kevin curiously. He wasn't wearing his uniform today. Nonetheless, his sportswear didn't make him look any less dignified than how he usually was.

"No need to introduce ourselves. Regular men shouldn't make friends with us," said the leader arrogantly. He thought that Kevin was just a nobody. His master only wanted Leena dead. However, Kevin was standing between him and his prey, thus, he had to deal with him.

"Don't be a fool. Do you want to do it on your own or together with them?" Kevin scanned the group of men standing behind the leader. There were seven of them and he immediately knew that he was much better than all of them combined. The men might look terrifying but then they weren't soldiers. What did they know about actual and life-threatening combats?

"Be a smart man. Walk away from here while you stil wice whatever the price is," said Leena scornfully. She got off the car and stood beside Kevin. Her sweet face had completely changed from being angelic to looking bloodthirsty.

"Good girl! However, we must follow the rules. You are a dead woman regardless of how much you're offering. It just doesn't work that way," said the man slowly and calmly. The leader's aura was dripping with confidence. He wasn't even worrying about any potential help coming here to rescue his prey. Moreover, he didn't even think that his prey could escape him. He eyed Leena amusedly and felt bad that such a beauty had to die.

"You have to ask for my permission if you want her life." It was then that a cold voice suddenly cut between the conversation. It was from Luke. His young master had ordered him to protect Leena as soon as the incident was reported to them. Thus, he came here as quickly as he could to rescue her.

"Luke, what are you doing here?" asked Leena in surprise as she scanned the number of men that came with Luke. Calmness returned to her and made her smile sweetly again.

MY WIFE IS AN ALOOF BEAUTY

Chapter 1439 I Love Her Only (Part Three)

"How did you come here?" asked the leader in shock. He had ordered several of his men to guard the gates. Had they been killed by this Luke and his people?

"We walked inside without being interrupted. Next time, if you want to do such a job, find yourself better people to work for you. Otherwise, they would be dead even before they know what happens," said Luke in a cold and threatening way. His eyes scanned the killers thoroughly. Had he known that Kevin was with Leena, he would have not come here running like hell. He was almost halted by a policeman because of over-speeding. It was lucky that another car distracted the policeman.

"Impossible. I should have been warned if you tried to break in," said the man in disbelief. The man saw the people standing behind Luke. He couldn't believe how his men were dealt with so easily. It didn't even make a sound!

"Your men are pigs. They don't know how to fight. However, as I can see, you're not smart either. Otherwise, you wouldn't have agreed to kill without doing some pre-work," said Luke. Luke's group closed in on him. Luke controlled S City and he could do whatever he wanted. Besides, the Mayfly would give them enough support.

"What do you mean?" the man asked. He really loved learning and would ask whenever he had some doubts in his mind. However, he clearly should be considered stupid for not knowing what Luke meant.

"You're making a fool of yourself. Do you have any idea of whom you're threatening? Hurt him and you'll find yourself being hunted down by a whole army. Is that what you want?" Luke seldom teased people. Nevertheless, he was amused by how foolish these people before him were. A huge sigh escaped his chest as he couldn't help but feel sorry for these men's miserable fate.

"Don't try to frighten me. I've been killing people when you were just a kid. Don't you dare talk to that Dorothy might be behind this. However, he had no time to think of why she would do such a thing.

"Do you think I'll tell you that?" The man eyed Kevin in awe. He had never wanted to pick a fight with a soldier, moreover, an elite general! He knew that doing so would be as bad as digging up his own grave.

"Of course, you can keep quiet. However, I have various ways to make you speak," said Kevin with a wicked smile on his face. Nobody was better than Hawkeye when it came to interrogation. However, he didn't expect his skill to be of use today. He wouldn't mind to demonstrate how Hawkeye handled their prisoners. One thing for sure though was that there had never been a prisoner strong enough not to beg for mercy under their brutal trials.

"I'm afraid that you won't have the opportunity! Guys? What're you waiting for? I want him dead right now," shouted the man in a suddenly desperate tone. He rushed to Kevin as he believed that Kevin was young and weak. He was expecting Kevin to surrender as soon as he got punched and kicked. Kevin was too young to be a major general and he might have used influence for him to climb the army ladder. It would be laughable if this weak looking guy knew some combat skills or martial arts.

Chapter 1440 What Jessica Ended Up With (Part One)

Kevin had been in several fights before. He realized his opponent was too strong for him to fight head-to-head. With a strong offense, his target was also too arrogant to let him get away. Fortunately, this worked for Kevin just fine.

As a soldier, Kevin often took a more practical approach to subdue enemies, which was hitting right in the vital parts instead of flaunting his strength. So as the man ran towards him, Kevin didn't evade and grabbed him by the wrist just as the man was about to land a punch on Kevin. Immediately after, Kevin twisted the man's arm behind his back, and a loud agonizing pop was followed by the man screaming in pain.

The pain briefly disabled the man from fighting back, and then he attempted to give a sweeping leg. Unfortunately for him, Kevin noticed his slow move and jerked away from it. While evading the man's attack, Kevin struck him in the stomach with his fist. His counter-attack was so smooth that the man didn't even get the chance to defend himself.

When the boss was defeated, his men fled in confusion with their tails between the legs. It seemed like these men were only good at bragging after all.

After a while, when the commotion finally died down, the police cars raced along with sirens at full blast. They were so late to the party that Leena wouldn't have survived if it weren't for her husband.

After taking all of the fighters to jail, Kevin asked Hawkeye to interrogate them one by one. He really wanted to know the culprit behind all of this. To everyone's surprise, the person turned out to be none other than Jessica.

It didn't, however, make sense. Jessica was one of Edward's ex-girlfriends. 'What did she have against Leena?' thought Kevin.

But he was, by no means, much as she could.

"Jessica, you volunteered to be a part of this game. You've always known that I'm way out of your league. You shouldn't have fallen in love with me," snorted Edward. Their relationship was purely a business deal. Jessica was his sex partner, and in return, Edward gave her money and fame. How could she blame Edward for dumping her when all he did was give her every fancy thing that she wanted?

"But, what is it about Daisy?" asked Jessica, "What's so special about her?" If only Edward had treated all his girls the same, Jessica wouldn't have hated him so much. It was because there was an exception, someone who was treated better than the rest - Daisy, who made jealousy get to Jessica's head.

"Right. I ask myself the same question. Like, why Daisy? What's so special about her? I've been looking for all the reasons, but haven't had much luck finding an answer. All in all, she just ended up becoming part of my life. She just... became someone whom I can't live without," Edward replied, getting lost in his own musings. It was true that he had asked himself the same question plenty of times. The answer just never came to him.
