

"Okay, let's go." With these words Michelle started leaving. She didn't look at his face, thus she didn't notice the complicated emotions warring there.

"Um. About that thing you said last time. Do you still mean it?" Luke hesitantly asked Michelle in a small voice, after a few seconds of pondering in stride next to her.

"What thing?" Michelle's face remained emotionless. Luke had no visual clues as to what she was thinking right now, and it bothered him. Luke helplessly furrowed his eyebrows. It was a taste of his own medicine. Now, after being treated coldly by Michelle, he finally realized how she must have felt all this time, while being constantly rejected by him. He had hurt her badly. Thinking of this, his heart began throbbing in his chest. Was there any chance that he could fix this? He had no idea. In fact, he still had very mixed feelings about Michelle. He had been so sure that he could never love her, but finally seeing the pain he had caused her made his icy heart thaw. And now, he wasn't so sure about his previous decisions.

"Nothing. Just forget it." Michelle's indifference was like cold water being poured over him. Only now, did he realize that sometimes, being treated coldly hurt even more than being the object of anger. He didn't know what to say to Michelle anymore. It felt like they were slowly drifting apart.

The way back home was filled with an uncomfortable silence. Both of them were in deep, but different thoughts. The atmosphere was a bit awkward.

They had become complete strangers, not a couple. Luke wanted to change it, but he just didn't know how.

"Are you still sleeping here tonight?" Michelle asked with a surprised look. She really couldn't understand his recent actions. She had originally hoped that maybe elf-respect.

Then there was silence. The two of them stared at each other, not saying a word. Neither of them was willing to look away. It seemed that they were both trying to penetrate the empty look on each other's face, and see what the other was thinking. Michelle was wondering what Luke really wanted. He had possessed all of her once, but he didn't cherish what he had. All Michelle wanted now was to avoid more heartbreak. Across the room, Luke was also wondering what Michelle wanted. He wanted so badly to know if he could ever hold a special place in her heart again.

Unfortunately, they were not the only ones who were hurting. On the other side of the globe, Leena was also suffering, having left her family and friends behind. Surprisingly, it had already been a full month. She hadn't expected that she could make it this far when she first left the country. But time flew by swiftly, and she kept busy. She was constantly drawing and working, trying so hard to avoid thinking about Kevin and the rest of the people she missed. But now, she had finished all her work. Unoccupied by work, all the thoughts about Kevin suddenly rushed back. She missed him so badly.

She picked up a photo of him. Seeing his beautiful smile in the photo, she couldn't help but drop a light kiss on his face. She hadn't made contact with him for a month, and she didn't know if he was doing well or not. Was he still the same? Was he still worried about her? Or had he already given up on her and moved on? She had no idea, because she refused to know anything about what happened back in the S City. Only now had she begun realizing how cruel she could be, punishing herself and the ones that she loved so deeply. She had left those who cared for her; her husband, her faithful friends and her brothers.

She was still taking her medicine everyday. Even when she was extremely busy with her work, she had never forgotten to take her medicine for even one day. She was being really harsh on herself. Else, she wouldn't have chosen this way to torture herself. She knew that her actions must have hurt the ones who loved her. But she saw no other choice. She just had to leave that city.

The sun was beaming, and the weather was very pleasant. The Leena of a year ago would surely have enjoyed walking along the river Seine under such agreeable conditions, drinking in the fresh air that belonged only to this beautiful city which she loved. The city was still delightful, and the people here hadn't changed. However, she was not the same. She couldn't enjoy the beautiful scenery surrounding her, because her mind was constantly fixated on a certain man.

She missed Kevin constantly. She thought about him often, especially when she was not keeping herself busy. He was constantly in her mind here earlier.

"Kevin, here!" Claire shouted, waving her hand to catch Kevin's attention. During the time while Leena was away, she had been helping her brother search for Leena, and keeping this a secret from their parents. But now, it seemed that they could no longer hide the troubling news from their parents anymore. They were already getting suspicious, and lying to them made her very anxious. She really hoped that they could find Leena as soon as possible.

"Claire, you look different. You're all grown up now." Kevin was a lot thinner than he was the last time Claire saw him. Maybe he just missed Leena too much. In missing her he couldn't sleep or eat well without the one he loved beside him.

"Of course I had to grow up. I'm more mature now. I can't let you down, can I? Come on! Let's go. Gerard is outside, he's waiting for us." Claire linked with his arm, walking arm in arm to the airport exit. She had missed her brother very much and was happy to see him, even though the situation was not ideal. She knew that he was here to look for Leena.

"You and Gerard, huh? Are you guys serious about it?" When Kevin first heard that she was together with Gerard, he was a bit hesitant. He wasn't sure whether he should be glad about it or not. After all, he knew clearly who was really in Gerard's heart. Being a protective brother, he was concerned that his little sister would get hurt.

"Yes, we are serious. We are doing really well together right now." Claire had a sweet smile on her face. Clearly she was happy with her life at the moment. She knew what Kevin was worried about. But Gerard had promised her that he was definitely over Leena and she chose to believe him. She knew that Gerard was a really good guy, and he would never hurt her intentionally. Though she understood that Leena was a great woman who deserved to be loved by someone like Gerard, she knew that she was also good enough for him. She was confident that she would make Gerard fall in love with her one day.

Standing in the same house that Leena had lived in, Kevin felt her everywhere. It seemed that he could glimpse Leena in every corner of this house. But when he looked closely, she vanished in the blink of an eye. He was slowly losing his mind.

Leena had told him that she liked taking a walk along the river Seine under the warm sunlight. She always enjoyed the beautiful scenery, and it freed her mind from everything that was bothering her. There, she could let herself go for once. That was also why he had spent a whole day strolling along the river Seine, hoping to God that he would meet her here. But, much to his disappointment, he had not seen her by the time the sun set.

He had also heard that the Eiffel Tower was a place that lovers frequented, so he went there to try his luck too. But he had no luck. There were a lot of couples there, making Drugged one night by her ex-boyfriend, a mysterious man took advantage of her in an ecstatic night filled with sex.

To take her revenge, she married the man, and used him.

"As long as I'm alive, I'm still his legal wife, while all of you are just his mistresses."

She remained adamant even when he was involved in scandals with other women.

Eventually she stormed off after she learned that he had betrayed her again. But life brought her back to him a few years later, to his astonishment.

He knew that she wouldn't leave him for good. He trusted their deep love. They had been through so much, and he was sure that Leena wouldn't give up on their love so easily. It was just that he was impatient. He wanted so badly to see Leena's face. As long as he kept waiting for her, she would surely return one day.

"Of course I won't give up on him. It's time for you to get on the plane. Take care, Kevin." Claire couldn't help but become emotional. She could tell how exhausted her brother was right now. His eyes were red. She knew that he was worried sick about his wife, in fact, they all were. When did he become like this? She felt sorry for her brother. 'Leena, where the hell are you? Kevin is about to lose his mind. Please come back.' she silently prayed.

"I know. You take care of yourself too." Kevin hugged his sister tightly one last time, and then he looked around them with disappointed eyes. He still hadn't found Leena, yet. This city was where Leena had lived. Though he had to leave right now, he would surely come back again one day. He would not rest until he knew where Leena was and brought her home. He couldn't live without her, and he had to make sure she knew it.

"How was your trip to Paris?" Leaning on the railings of the corridor outside her office, Daisy looked at Kevin with a playful smile. She wondered since when the iron soldier had become so infatuated with a girl. Love was indeed a magical thing, deep, mysterious and unfathomable.

"I knew this would happen even before I went there. I just wanted to have a try. I was prepared for this so it was not that disappointing." Kevin smiled helplessly. He knew that she would make fun of him. She had told him before he set out that as long as Jonathan was involved, he would never let anyone find her. So it would only be a waste of time for him to go to Paris. But he insisted. Even though the chances of him finding her was next to zero, he still wanted to take a walk on the place she once set foot in.

"Don't worry! My father-in-law wouldn't really keep her away forever. Since he said that she was safe, then everything is okay with her. You don't have to feel uneasy with regards to her safety." Daisy also missed her. She always felt something was missing without Leena being around her. And sometimes she also felt empty.

"I know. Yeah, I'm not that worried anymore. I just miss her a little." Was it really a little? Kevin smiled with melancholy. In all honesty, he was missing her wholeheartedly. She completed him and each day that he did not get to spend with her was just torture and agony.

"Missing someone is like tasting a glass of bitter wine, just enjoy! In fact, it is also quite a common knowledge, and you have to devote yourself to mastering it." They had been apart for only one month. What could be more torturing than the six years that she had spent w er talk with him first. I don't want you to quarrel with each other just because of my issues. That would be really bad." While being apart from Leena, Kevin had learnt a lot of things. He thought that any trouble between a couple would not be a problem to him because he knew what to do and could easily handle it. The biggest issue he had now was that he didn't even have the one who would cause trouble for him. Now that she had gone, he could do nothing but wallow in regret.

"Don't worry about me! You'd better think how to cover it up when your parents start asking about her. I will go to the training ground now." Daisy snapped and stared at him. She felt bad that he worried too much.

Alas! It was indeed a big headache for Kevin. It wouldn't be a problem for his father because in that household, he cared for Leena the least. But what was he supposed to say to his mother? Leena used to often call her. Now a month had passed, but there was not even a message from her. It wouldn't be a surprise if his mother started wondering why. He needed to take some time to talk to his mother about this matter.

Chapter 1515 Classmate Gathering (Part Two)

In the beginning, Michelle was reluctant to join the classmate gathering. But she finally nodded in agreement as Hilda kept pestering her to go. In the whole class, no one wanted to be friends with Hilda, but she really wanted to join the party. So she had no choice but to persuade Michelle to go with her.

At the party, Bradley especially went over to Michelle and sat beside her, which attracted the attention of many people around them, mostly feeling jealous and angry. Erin was especially mad. Michelle could feel her sinister eyes boring into her, and that made her very annoyed.

"Later, put this into the drink of that bitch, Michelle. But make sure that no one sees you." Erin handed a small bottle to a girl beside her stealthily, her menacing eyes glinting with sinister pleasure.

"Huh? What is this? Will it kill her?" The girl asked in fear. It was true that she also hated Michelle, because she had Bradley spellbound. But she dared not involve herself in a murder plot.

"It's nothing serious. It is a kind of medicine that can make her have delusions which will spin her out of control. It's not fatal. You're actually gonna enjoy it! I will find a way to make her move away from her drink later, and you can do it at that time. Remember not to let anyone see you," Erin explained her plan to the girl calmly, thinking of how to make Michelle temporarily leave her seat so they could get the chance to carry out the plan.

"Don't lie to me." The girl was so cowardly that her hand trembled while holding the bottle. She had never done this before.

"What are you afraid of? I'm here and I will bear all the consequences to save Michelle from the awkward situation.

"You? Forget it. You know what? I don't have to go right now." Erin looked at Hilda with contempt. She'd rather give up the plan than go to the toilet with this fat loser.

Michelle sneered. She knew why Erin didn't want Hilda to go with her. Erin simply felt ashamed to be seen and associated with someone like her. But it was impossible for Michelle to go with her. First of all, they were not friends. They actually had skirmishes almost every day. And most importantly, she hated having others boss her around, especially someone like Erin. There was still a bit of gangster in her. She should be the one bossing people around.

"Hurry up! We will be going to the karaoke after dinner." Feeling embarrassed, Erin ground her teeth and hurriedly changed the topic. It seemed that it was not a good time to carry out her plan and she would have to wait for another chance, if that ever came along.

"Huh? Wait, are you going with them to the karaoke, Hilda?" Michelle frowned. She had no interest in entertainment places like karaokes.

Chapter 1516 Classmate Gathering (Part Three)

. "Yes, of course! I seldom have the chance to go out and have fun. C'mon, go with me, please! I know you don't like it much, but come with us, just for tonight! Please, please, please!" Hilda knew Michelle didn't like boisterous events, so she begged and pleaded relentlessly.

"C'mon Michelle, Join us! Give it a chance. Maybe you'll like it this time," Bradley also tried to persuade her. A ray of hope glinted in his eyes, and everyone could see how much he was looking forward to hanging out with Michelle.

"Michelle, go with us, please!" Hilda kept begging, gently shaking her cuffs and pulling on her sleeves.

"Okay, okay, I'll go with you, just to keep you company." Michelle finally compromised. She couldn't bear Hilda's pitiful eyes. Deep down, she was really softhearted. She could bicker with Erin and fight off Bradley all day, but she would easily yield when people like Hilda looked at her expectantly with big puppy eyes.

There were not many people in her class, so a big private room could accommodate them. Michelle sat and leaned back in one of the sofas lazily, regretting why she agreed to come. She wondered why Hilda insisted her going with her. There was nothing fun nor interesting here. She could only sit and watch others get drunk and scream into the microphone with horrible voices and make fun of themselves. She just didn't fit in. For all she knew, they all came so that they could say they hung out with Bradley.

"Michelle, let's sing a song together!" Bradley asked loudly into her ears. It was too noisy around.

"Sorry! I can't sing." Michelle moved her face away from him and didn't even blink her eyes when she told the lie. In fact, s lassmates, but why hadn't she come back yet?" She hadn't even given him a call yet or a simple message. How hard could it be to inform a spouse of one's whereabouts? It seemed that she really didn't take him seriously and looked at him as dispensable. And that was probably why she turned a blind eye to the recent changes in him.

He also knew that it was nobody's fault but his own. He had no one else to blame. But wasn't this woman too casual with love? How could she have a change of heart so quickly? Was love really such a fleeting thing in her eyes? Luke thought, feeling uncomfortable by the minute.

Time ticked by. When the phone rang, he immediately answered it without even taking a look at who was calling.

"Luke, come to pick me up at Star KTV right now. Right now! I may have been drugged by someone. Please, hurry!" Michelle was breathing hard as she supported herself with her hands against the wash basin. Her head felt so heavy that she had no choice but to droop down. Her forehead was sweating heavily and everything looked blurry. She regretted being too careless, falling into someone's trap.

"Stay there, don't move. I'll be there right away. Don't hang up." Luke immediately grabbed the car keys and rushed out, without even putting on his coat.

"Okay, I'll stay on the line." Michelle turned the tap on and continuously splashed cold water on her face. As soon as she found something was amiss, she immediately walked out of the box and came to this washroom. She didn't tell Hilda and chose to call Luke first. One could see that Luke was always her first priority in her heart and in everything she did.

"Didn't you go out to attend a gathering with your classmates? How would you get drugged?" Luke put on his Bluetooth earpiece and started the engine. The car ran just like an arrow that left its bow. Fortunately by that time, there were fewer cars on the street so he was able to go very fast.

"I don't know. Maybe someone put the drug in my drink while I was away." Michelle replied faintly. If she was right, it was Erin who added something into her drink when she went to the toilet just a few minutes earlier. As she didn't have any way to prove it now, she couldn't make any clear accusations.

"How do you feel now? Do you feel hot in your body or weak in your limbs?" Luke was a man with a lot of experiences in a lot of things. He knew how dangerous society could get and how sinister people could be. He wondered who drugged Michelle. It might be a jealous classmate or implacable foe. If it was her classmate, that would be too horrible. They were still a group of students, and it was almost unthinkable that a young stud

Luke didn't say anything. His eyes narrowed into slits. If he was right, Michelle's drugged drink had something to do with the woman speaking to her.

"Erin, don't walk on air. Do you think that I will yield so easily? You are too naive!" Michelle said while splashing a handful of cold water on her face without hesitation. The cooling sensation immediately made her feel better.

"It doesn't matter. We have plenty of time. As long as you are here, we can wait until you are ready to strip and dance around naked." Erin was also a woman, she knew how it would feel if she were in Michelle's shoes now. But she seemed to have lost her mind. It was all because Michelle despised her and had an ambiguous relationship with Bradley. Otherwise, how could Erin possibly have resorted to such extreme means to deal with her? This was what insecurity, jealousy and envy could do to a person.

"You're violating the law. You know that?" Michelle said, gritting her teeth and managing to fight against the warm stream running inside her. Her face was wet but no one could tell the thing rolling on her face was sweat or water. Her clothes were torn, exposing her bra, making her look even more wild and enchanting. All the girls standing around her whipped out their cellphones and began snapping pics.

"Don't you know? Everything is decided by the rich, and you're just a poor girl. You think that you could enter their world, just by being a mistress to one of them? Every inch of you screams poverty. I can't believe that you are able to sacrifice your body to have a rich life, but I have to admit at least you're working hard at something." Every word came out of Erin's mouth was harsh and sarcastic. It seemed like that she would do anything to crush Michelle under her feet for letting her anger out.

"What makes you think I'm poor? Or a mistress?" Michelle said. She would have slapped Erin except that she felt like she was being eaten by ants. The drug was having its intended effect. 'Bitch! I shouldn't have let you go last time, otherwise we wouldn't be doing this now, ' Michelle thought.

"Don't BS me. You were picked up by a guy in an expensive car. So if you aren't his mistress, do you really think you could be his girlfriend? Just look at yourself. You think a girl like you could nab a man like that?" Erin said, winking at the other girls to bring some boy there.

"She has more of a chance than you," Luke said breathlessly. His tone was cold enough to freeze the air around them.

"Who are you? How did you get in here?" Erin asked angrily, looking in the direction of the doorway. The two girls who were supposed to be lookouts hung their heads in shame.

"I'm Mr. Right. You know, the guy with the car? I'm Michelle's husband," Luke said. For the first time, he volunteered that information. He sounded bold and decisive.

"What? Husband? Are you kidding? How? When?" Erin was bold, with so many people to back her up. Still, she was frightened by this man before her, like he was some devil spawned from Hell.

"She doesn't have anything to prove, and neither do I. The only thing that I know is I'm about to knock that crown off your head, princess," Luke said, walking over to Michelle and folding her into his arms. Fortunately, he grabbed the coat out of his car. That was perfect for him to wrap it ness." Luke sniffed. 'You're just a kid. Who do you think you are? Don't get in my way, ' he thought to himself.

"Michelle! What happened to her?" Hilda asked in amazement. Before rushing out, Michelle just told her that she went to the washroom. She didn't think this could happen in thirty minutes.

"Sorry. I need to get her back home," Luke said. He knew Hilda because he'd met her before. Knowing she was Michelle's friend, he talked to her politely.

"Wait. Looks like she's high as a kite. Wouldn't a hospital be better?" Bradley said, gritting his teeth. He really didn't want to see Michelle taken away by Luke like this. Moreover, he didn't want to see her loved by someone else.

"This is between me and my wife. Don't worry. Tell Erin she'll be punished. She has my word on that," Luke said. He figured he'd have a leg up if he let people know they were married. He was right.

"What? Your wife? So you and Michelle are --" Bradley asked. He was too devastated to finish his question or step back.

"Yeah. Got a problem with that?" Luke asked. He was jealous of this young boy who had the guts to love and hate. Luke couldn't do that.

"No," Bradley replied, stepping aside. He knew he had no chance with Michelle, especially since she was married.

Michelle had no interest in anything but Luke. She let her guard down and totally counted on him to take care of her since Luke got there. While she was nestling closely with Luke, her hands were moving constantly over him.

Luke sneered and then hurried away with his hands holding Michelle. If he stayed there too long, she would have his shirt off.

Chapter 1519 One Step Closer (Part Two)

"Don't worry, we'll be home in no time," Luke said softly, turning to fasten Michelle's seat belt. He started the engine and drove away from that place. This might be his most tender act yet. About whether he had caused a stir or what it might lead to, Luke didn't consider at all. His thoughts were consumed by getting Michelle home as fast as possible.

Bradley stood there, still stunned. He didn't come back to reality until Erin and the other girls came out of the washroom.

"Erin, this has you written all over it," Bradley said, smiling coldly. At first, he did look down upon Luke as he thought Luke was just a bodyguard and he couldn't compete with him. Then his father told him that Luke wasn't just a bodyguard but also Edward's father's adopted son. In other words, there was no way he could compete with that.

"So what? I just taught her a lesson." Erin replied, biting her lip. Although she felt restless inside, she didn't care about it too much.

"Anyway, I just want to let you know that you're barking up the wrong tree. Remember what Luke said? I wouldn't wanna be you, right now!" Bradley mocked with a smile. He had a feeling that Luke's revenge would not be simple or swift.

"Trying to scare me?" Erin asked. 'He was pretty big, though. And he looked thoroughly pissed. But surely he wouldn't go that far...' she thought.

"Humph! Just wait and see! You can ask your father about FX International Group. I'm sure he can fill you in." Bradley glanced at her with sympathetic eyes and left quickly. He blamed himself for what had happened just now. He was too careless to let things get this out of hand. He was the class president, and it was his responsibility.

"Ah! FX International Group, the leading business in S city! What should we do, Erin? The CEO doesn't know the meaning of forgive and forget!" one girl said. All of these girls lived here, how could they not know about FX International Group? They were frightened. Edward had a reputation for ruthlessness.

"So what? I've met the president of FX International Group and I know what he looks like. I'm sure that man isn't the president. So you don't need to worry," Erin said, though fear still gnawed at her. 'It can't be true! If it's true, my dad will skin me alive, ' she thought.

"Maybe he's connected with FX. I don't think Bradley would have just to see that would either hurt him, or could be used against him.

Michelle woke up, and her body was sore. Looking at the other side of the bed when she opened her eyes, she found nobody there, which made her feel lost.

She thought back on their night of passion and blushed. Then she screamed loudly and blundered into the washroom after glancing at the clock on the table. 'Not again! I'll be late, ' she thought.

But she looked in the mirror. She was ratchet. 'Screw it! I'll stay home today. I can't show up like this. Everyone would talk, ' she thought. 'And that's the last thing I need.'

Thinking about the things Erin had done to her, Michelle squinted her eyes and took on a sinister cast. 'You bitch. You won't get away with this, ' she thought. In this case, she would like to make fun of Erin so that she could understand the feeling of being drugged. Anyway, she always had somebody who would like to do something for her. Wasn't it right?

But Luke was already on it.

"Mr. Mu, how long would it take to devastate Tosca Corporation?" Luke asked seriously in front of Edward.

"Tosca Corporation? That upstart company? What? Someone there pissed you off?" Edward asked out of curiosity, because he had never known Luke to ask him for anything like this.

"You could say that," Luke replied in a matter-of-fact tone. He was totally serious now.

"All right! Give me some time and you'll have your answer. By the way, what happened? This has to be good," Edward said with a teasing smile. He really wanted to know what drove Luke to this point.

MY WIFE IS AN ALOOF BEAUTY

Chapter 1520 A Crush On Her (Part One)

"Do I have to tell you the reason?" Luke asked with a frown. He was too proud to admit that he was enraged because someone tried to hurt Michelle.

"Of course. I need to know the reason. Otherwise, I can't just overthrow a company out of nowhere." Edward leaned back and laced his fingers together smugly. He then shot Luke a teasing glare. He was really interested in what the CEO of Tosca Corporation had done to offend Luke. He had known Luke for many years, but this was the first time Edward heard his friend ask him to overthrow a company.

"Uh... Here's the thing. Last night, Michelle was poisoned by her classmate." Luke bowed his gaze and scratched the back of his head. It was obvious how embarrassed he was.

"What? Are you kidding me? Are the students now that unruly? Oh, let me guess. You detoxified Michelle last night, didn't you? How did the third base feel like?" A cunning smile cracked on Edward's lips. He could easily guess what kind of poison Michelle's classmate had used on her based on Luke's embarrassment. Moreover, he also could tell that Luke had a thing for Michelle now.

"What's worse, the girl who poisoned Michelle doesn't regret what she has done at all. I must teach her a good lesson. Otherwise, she might hurt others in the future." Luke furrowed his brows as he felt that Edward had become more and more interested in asking about others' secrets. Edward wasn't like this before.

"Okay, I'll do as you say. Can you tell me why she poisoned Michelle? Is it out of jealousy or something else?" Edward asked. He also realized that he really liked gossiping about others recently. It wasn't a bad hobby at all. Was he really this bored with his own life?

"Why don't you ask the girl out to have a cup of coffee? I believe she will be glad to share it with you." Luke's face twitched. The situation had been really urgent last night. Thus, he never got the chance to know the whole thing.

"Hey, are you suggesting me ask a girl out? I'll tell Daisy about it and you'll be screwed." Edward cracked a joke with Luke.

"I believe that I'm not the one who will be screwed. If you don't need me for anything else, I'll take my leave." Luke gave him a sly smile. He was happy to see Daisy give Edward a lesson.

"You brat!" Edward cursed through gritted teeth. Since when did Luke dare to make fun of him?

"I've learned that from you, my dear master," replied Luke with a grin.

"Get out!" demanded Edward in frustration. For some reason, he really missed the honest and upright Luke he used to know.

Turning around, Luke curled his lips in satis

He frowned. She didn't even notice any changes with Luke these days, thus, she really couldn't tell if he did something. Furthermore, he wasn't even talking about the accident anymore. Had he really used the power of FX International Group to overthrow Erin's father's company? Michelle wondered if she should ask Luke about it.

"I will go ask him about it! Let me tell you this, you cannot overthrow my father's company. Not even a chance! Let's wait and see!" The commotion between them had collected attention from their other classmates. They were now staring at them. Erin didn't want them to know that her father's company had a problem. So she decided to let Michelle go for now. Nevertheless, her withdrawal from this argument didn't mean that she admitted her defeat.

"The nerves of her!" Michelle snorted while looking at Erin's receding figure. She wondered whether Erin would really go to Luke. If Erin really did it, she would be definitely screwed as Luke was by no means a gentleman.

"Michelle, your husband looks like a big shot. I heard him say that he would teach Erin a lesson that night. Was it possible that he did something to her father's company?" Hilda asked. She was dying to know Michelle's husband's real identity.

"I have no clue. But I think he's a man of his word." Michelle knew that Luke would not easily change his mind once he decided to do something. She was kind of convinced now that Luke had done something to Erin's father's company for her.

Hilda's eyes widened in shock. She was wondering if Michelle's husband was a rich second generation. However, she seldom had the chance to learn about the upper class circle. Thus, she immediately shook her head to dismiss the thought.
