

MY WIFE IS AN ALOOF BEAUTY

Chapter 1541 The Operation Was Very Successful (Part Four)

"Leena, I have to tell you the truth. Major General hasn't been eating well and barely had any sleep when you left. He has been working so hard to get the pain off his mind. He used his job to numb himself. Besides, he has lost so much weight that this is the thinnest he has ever been. I am not sure if you have already seen him. So when you do, please don't be too shocked." Lee was not exaggerating at all. Kevin had lost a lot of weight as he lost his appetite and didn't sleep well, having been used to having Leena by his side. He was constantly worried about Leena's well-being and spared no efforts to find her. Only the blind would not notice that it had taken a huge toll on him.

"Really? Why was he so silly? He should have taken good care of himself! If he didn't want to do it for himself, he should have at least done it for me." Leena immediately burst into tears after hearing Lee's words. She was heartbroken by what she had just heard. She didn't expect that her sudden leaving would hurt Kevin that much. She knew it would stress him out a bit but she never thought that it would be this bad. If she had known that this would happen, she would never have left at all. Now she had only herself to blame.

"Major General said that as long as he waited for you, you would definitely come back. And he was right. You are back now. I believed the Major General when he said it. He completely trusted and believed in you." Lee had never been in love. That was why he couldn't understand how love would affect Kevin so much. Love was indeed a very strange thing that could cheer one person up and completely destroy another at the same time. Now he knew that he had to be cautious when it came to love.

"I am really sorry, Lee! I didn' he is in a coma." Tom was being honest and didn't want to hide anything from Leena. After all, he could never hide something as important as her husband's chances of survival and recovery. And Leena must know about this already.

"Yeah. I know that." Leena tried her best to smile, but to Tom, it was just a grimace. She was still worried that Kevin would not wake up soon.

"Don't worry. He will be okay," Tom comforted her. He didn't want to see his sister so sad and worried. He would try his best to help Kevin recover from his injuries. He would never let anything happen to him, even if it was just for Leena's sake.

Just as Tom predicted, Kevin had a fever later. Maybe it was because he had been caught in the rain for a period of time and his immune system was weak. That was the most probable reason why his temperature would not go down.

Tom tried everything he could think of to make his fever go away. But nothing really worked. But still, to his relief, Kevin's condition didn't get worse, and his situation was way past the danger zone. That was something that they all wanted to see. He just hoped that Kevin could get through all of this.

Chapter 1542 The Operation Was Very Successful (Part Five)

"Leena, here you go. Eat something first. Don't worry so much. You already know that Tom is a very good doctor. He can surely take good care of Kevin for you. Right now you should look after yourself." Rain trusted Tom with his life. He believed that he would definitely be able to help Kevin recover. He was a great doctor after all. If there was only one person who could save Kevin, then it would be Tom.

"But my stomach really can not handle anything right now." Leena's eyebrows knitted into a tight frown. She really didn't have any appetite now. They had been in the hospital room for so long, and she was dying to know Kevin's condition. She wanted to know if he was getting better or not.

"Do you want Kevin to see you like this when he wakes up? If you do, then suit yourself and not eat anything." Tom raised one of his eyebrows and looked at Leena in a way that would pressure her a little. He knew that he was trying to make Leena feel guilty so she would eat, but he was just being honest. She would not stay healthy if she kept missing her meals, considering that she already had a very weak body.

"Fine. You are right. I will try to eat something," Leena finally agreed, though she really didn't have the appetite. But Rain was right. She had to be healthy and strong for Kevin. Now was not the time to fall ill. So she'd better have some food.

"That's good. Come on, you can start with some soup." Rain had gone to the Kate Hotel. The food they served there was delicious and thanks to the nice packaging, the food was k tiful smile appeared on her face all of a sudden.

"Have I ever told you that I really love you. I love you so much. Even when I was away, I never stopped thinking about you. You were constantly in my mind. I have been to so many places during the past few months. I have been to some beautiful small towns, and also heard of many beautiful love stories. They all reminded me of you. I thought that I would slowly forget about you as time went by, but I was awfully wrong. I love you too much to be able to do that. The more I told myself to let you go, the more I missed you. Are you happy to hear my words? I want to spend the rest of my life with you. I love you so much, Kevin." Leena's lips curled into a bitter smile. She looked at her badly injured husband with pained eyes. She couldn't bear seeing him like this, so thin and so fragile, lying unconscious on the hospital bed. If she could, she would take all the pain away from him. She would rather be the one who was lying there, instead of the one she deeply loved.

MY WIFE IS AN ALOOF BEAUTY

Chapter 1543 I Cant Lose You (Part One)

"Kevin, you can't just leave me like this. Wake up! Please! I can't lose you. Please wake up." Kevin was lying right there in the hospital bed in front of her, but she felt he was a million miles away. It was the first time she ever felt this way. She just looked at him, but he gave no response, not even a smile. Nothing in the world could be more painful than this.

"Why are you doing this? Is it because I left you? I came back. Do you hear me? Oh God, please wake up!" Leena's tears fell on his hands. At that moment she realized that when she left, it hurt him as well as herself.

"I'll never leave you this time. I won't leave you again, even if you drive me away with a stick. Maybe I can't have kids, but that's okay. It's really okay. I don't want anything. I only want to be with you." She decided that after the accident, she was going to go after what she wanted. As for Kevin's family, she would work really hard to earn their understanding.

"I'm sorry Leena. We need to fix his intubation. I need to boot you out." Tom entered the room again. Kevin was still under observation, so Leena couldn't stay in the ward for too long.

"OK." Leena nodded and let go of Kevin's hand. She knew it was about Kevin's life, so she had to listen to Tom. As she left the room, she couldn't help looking back at Kevin in his bed.

"It's all right. Just go back home and get some rest. I promise when you wake up, Kevin will be out of danger." Tom wiped away her tears. She had been here a long time, and Tom was afraid she might get exhausted.

"No. Tom, don't ask me to go home. I want to be with him." Leena shook her head, not wanting to leave the man she loved. Even leaving him for a second, she felt that her heart was broken into tiny pieces.

"Don't do that. We don't need you sick too," Tom insisted. In Tom's opinion, Leena stressed herself out too much. If she was ill right now, he might not Patricia fully understood her friend's mood. If she were Leena, she would do the same.

The next time when they saw Kevin, a lot of the equipment had been removed from the room. He was off life support, and the cadre professional doctors who had been with him left. The room was quiet except for the machine that monitored his blood oxygen and his vitals, and Lee was alone with Kevin. Seeing Leena and Patricia, Lee quickly stood up.

"Leena, sleep well?" Lee stayed up all last night. As a soldier, he was used to going days and nights without sleep during field exercises, so this was nothing for him. Meditation kept him sane and energized.

"Yeah I did. How is he? Did he ever wake up?" Leena touched Kevin's cheek carefully, feeling he was much thinner than before.

"No. Dr. Qin said there was no head trauma, so he should come around any time now." Lee asked a few more questions because he was worried about Kevin.

"Good, good. You have the key to our house, right? Lee, go back to our place, take a shower, and get some sleep. He needs someone to take care of him. We'll do it in shifts. We can't all be here at the same time, or we'll all be screwed." After her nap, Leena was thinking much more clearly and she was now able to organize things properly.

MY WIFE IS AN ALOOF BEAUTY

Chapter 1544 I Cant Lose You (Part Two)

"Yeah. You're right. I have the key, so I'll head out. Be right back." Lee thought she was right and did not oppose her proposal.

"No Lee, you've done too much already. I'll hold things down here, come back tomorrow." Leena turned him down in a hurry, because she wanted to spend more time alone with Kevin. She had a lot of things that she hadn't had the chance to say to Kevin.

"Why?" Puzzled, Lee frowned at her.

"Stop asking. Do what Leena says. She's not gonna hurt Kevin. Don't you worry." Patricia knew what Leena was thinking, so she pulled Lee out.

Leena blushed watching Patricia do this, knowing she must have read her mind.

Patricia took Lee out of the room. Her recklessness made Lee, who had never touched a girl before, extremely embarrassed.

"You big dummy! Leena wants to be alone with Kevin for a while. Don't you understand?" Patricia didn't know why Lee was acting so strangely, so she scolded him sarcastically as soon as she let go.

"I'm sorry. I didn't know." Lee scratched his head in embarrassment. He really didn't get it until now. He realized how foolish he had been.

"You're all good. Now swerve!" Patricia suddenly had a feeling about Lee. He seemed like a great guy, a cut above most of the people she had met so far.

"Then I'll go now. Good-bye, Mrs. Qin." Patricia was no stranger to Lee. As for the people and things related to Kevin, he would find a chance to know them in advance.

"Bye!" Patricia waved to him and watched him leave. Although she did not know Lee well, she was polite to him.

"What are you looking at?" Tom, in his white coat, had just finished a meeting and wanted to come and see Kevin.

"Oh! Are you off work?" Patricia was so pleased to see Tom that she put her arms around him and did not care who could see them.

"No. It's a while before my shift ends. Where's Leena? She awake?" Tom didn't push her away. Though he was not used to it, he forced himself to adapt. He knew they were husband and wife, so that kind of intimacy was normal to them.

"Yeah. She's awake. In Kevin's room. You going in?" Patricia smiled brightly. Although Tom was absent-minded most of the time, he had changed a lot. She was happ Drugged one night by her ex-boyfriend, a mysterious man took advantage of her in an ecstatic night filled with sex.

To take her revenge, she married the man, and used him.

"As long as I'm alive, I'm still his legal wife, while all of you are just his mistresses."

She remained adamant even when he was involved in scandals with other women.

Eventually she stormed off after she learned that he had betrayed her again. But life brought her back to him a few years later, to his astonishment.

. Because he loved her heart, he could never find her ugly.

"Don't flatter yourself too much. I am still very much my own woman," Belinda said smugly. Her stomach was much larger than before, but the rest of it had not changed much. She was now a beautiful pregnant woman.

Leena never spoke and just ate in silence. Now that the topic had finally shifted from her to Belinda, she didn't want to catch any more flack. Belinda, however, did not intend to let things go that easily.

"You've only been away a few months. How did you get so thin? Are you trying to lose weight?" complained Belinda. Compared to Leena's slim figure, Belinda looked fat, which depressed her.

"You kidding me? I haven't lost any weight!" Leena almost choked. She put down her fork and tried to recover.

"Leave her alone. She's just jealous of your figure." As Belinda's husband, Duke certainly knew what she was thinking. She was jealous of Leena. If Belinda hadn't said a word, no one would have noticed anything, because Leena was the same size as she always was.

"Ganging up on me now?" Belinda was frustrated by Duke's constant taunts. This was how pregnant women were.

"Belinda, do you want a reason to complain?" Duke said playfully, a hint of danger in his eyes. Belinda, overwhelmed by Duke's words, thought, 'Damn it. I made him angry again.' For his part, Belinda had a lot of leeway, but he wouldn't allow her to be too independent. That was his bottom line.

"Hey! Get a room, willya?" Leena cracked a joke to try to calm things down. She knew Duke liked wrangling with Belinda, but some words were hurtful.

"Just eat, and mind your own business," Belinda said, giving Leena a grateful wink. Leena winked back, meaning "no problem."

Duke noticed the secret interaction between the two women, but didn't say anything. At least they got along with each other. That made him happy, because they were the two most important women in his life.

"Did Tom say when the dude would wake up?" Duke asked with a frown, staring at Kevin who was still in a coma.

"Don't call him dude. He has a name!" Leena pouted.

"Chill, alright? I call everyone dude." Duke was a little uncomfortable when he heard Leena defend Kevin. He had always done his best for her, and he thought he would always be her "go to" person. But now, it seemed that he was wrong.

"Come on! If Kevin calls you dude, will you get angry?" Belinda snapped. She just couldn't understand why Duke always had to make trouble. When Kevin had been in the operating room, Duke had been scared to death. Now that Kevin was out of danger, Duke changed back to Mr. Cold.

"Do you always have to argue with me?" Duke rolled his eyes at Belinda. Other wives would always stand by their husbands' side, but it seemed like Belinda was always finding fault.

"I always believe in justice," Belinda said with a proud expression. Duke's anger meant nothing to her.

"Oh really? Then I'm Justice Leng from now on." Even though he was really frustrated by Belinda's attitude, he could do nothing but glare at her. He really wished the baby could pop out right now, and then he could spend the whole night teaching her a lesson.

Leena sighed, rubbing her temples. 'Can't they just get along with each other like normal couples? They love each other so much, but they always argue. They're so weird!' Leena thought to herself.

After bidding goodbye to Leena, Duke and Belinda walked to their car in pain. On the one hand, she was looking forward to meeting her baby. On the other hand, she was really scared of the pain. And would she be able to tell the difference between contractions and bad food? She was both physically and mentally under pressure.

"Don't worry, Belinda. You won't hurt your baby by sleeping on your belly. Believe me, you won't want to. Really, if you sleep on your left side it's better for the kid. And relax. It's important to be happier." Daisy hadn't thought about all these when Justin had been growing in her belly. She had been a single mother at that time, and she could only depend on herself. She had been so busy to support herself every day that she had had no time to think too much.

"I know you're right, but I just can't help thinking about all of it." Belinda stroked her belly softly. Maybe the baby got bored because they had stayed here too long, so it began to give Belinda some hard kicks.

"I think you need a way to kill time, to stop you from overthinking everything. It's late. You should go head home. I need to check on Kevin." Daisy rolled her eyes at Belinda. After Belinda had gotten pregnant, Duke stepped in and essentially took over her company. As a result, Belinda had nothing to do. If she had been still busy like before, she wouldn't have had the time to worry.

Chapter 1546 The Quickening (Part Two)

"Sure. We need to get together for tea soon." Belinda decided to learn more about labor from Daisy. She was really scared of it. When did it start? What should she do? How much did it hurt?

"Okay. Have a safe drive." Daisy turned to Duke and urged him to drive slowly, as there was a pregnant woman in his car. She was always thinking of others, but paid less attention to herself.

"Got it. Bye, Belinda." Duke nodded as he got in and left.

Daisy watched the car leave the car park. Then she turned and walked to the elevator. She was stunned to see Leena sitting at Kevin's bedside. Nobody had told her Leena was back.

"Leena?" Daisy said hesitantly when she saw the woman clean Kevin's lips with a Q-tip.

"Daisy!" Leena didn't know why, but the moment she saw Daisy, she felt hurt and threw herself into her arms.

"You're finally back. We missed you so much." Daisy patted Leena's back to comfort her. She knew how sad Leena felt, so she was not willing to blame her for anything.

"I missed all of you, every day." Leena sniffed. Somehow she felt like Daisy was like her mother, and that was why she was unable to hold back her tears when she saw her.

"Since you missed us so much, you should have come back earlier. We were so worried about you." Daisy released her and took out a tissue to wipe her tears.

"I'm so sorry. I won't leave you guys again." Leena turned tears into smiles. She had her time alone, and realized that she couldn't live without her friends and family.

"All right. How's Kevin? When will he wake up?" Daisy asked with a frown when she looked at Kevin's unconscious form. She had gotten wind of Kevin's injury on the third day of her assignment to the capital city. She came back home as soon as she finished her test.

"I don't know. Tom didn't say. But he did say Kevin was going to be okay." Leena cast a worried glance at Kevin. She had spoken to him almost constantly since she got to him, but he hadn't moved so much as a finger.

"Relax. Since Tom said Kevin's fine, he'll recover soon. So don't worry. Maybe now that you're back, he'll start taking better care of himself." Daisy sighed with profound resignation. Love is so painful, and her friends had all suffered because of it. Daisy turned Kevin down when he had confessed to her. But Kevin hadn't acted like this. This meant that Kevin's fe

He looked away slowly as he was still very weak and unable to move his head as quickly as usual. When he saw the familiar figure at his bedside, his eyes widened and his heart stopped. The medical device even made an alarming beep at this moment.

Was it Leena? Did she really come back? It must be a dream! It must be illusion, because he missed her so much. At the thought of it, Kevin forced a bitter smile and closed his eyes again to calm himself down.

But her unique aroma lingered in his nostrils. And his hand was held by another pair of hands, soft and warm. The feeling was so familiar, as she had held his hand countless times in the past.

Kevin moved his body in an attempt to attract her attention, but his whole body was aching and he had to stop doing that. He then tried to call out her name.

"Nana," he croaked. His voice was low and husky, as he had been unconscious for a long time.

Leena had fallen into deep slumber and didn't hear Kevin's voice. However, she held his hand even more tightly, as something told her he was awake.

Kevin was filled with joy, as Leena came back to him. He didn't dare to interrupt this peaceful moment, but tried to turn his head to stare at his beloved wife. As she slept, her face was covered by her long hair. He was unable to see the face that he had missed for such a long time. But as long as she was by his side, he was already satisfied.

Feeling her warm hands, Kevin couldn't help but thank God in his heart that Leena came back to him again. He came back to life, and couldn't be happier.

Chapter 1547 Stick To Kevin (Part One)

It was as if time had been put temporarily on hold. The bedroom was in a sea of silence. The sheets rustled as a body adjusted its position. On one side of the bed, the man slept peacefully. Kevin's injury was quite grave so he couldn't hold out for too long, and soon he got tired and fell asleep. When Leena woke up and her groggy eyes adjusted to the darkness, she didn't see any changes in Kevin as he still slept soundly on the bed. She still thought he was unconscious.

She glanced at the digital clock on the nightstand. It was still early before the break of dawn, but she was fully awake now. She remembered what Tom suggested to her--she took a cotton swab from the nightstand drawer and used it to moisturize his lips.

Shortly after that, Leena felt quite bored as she had nothing else to do. She turned back to Kevin again and traced the contours of his face with her fingers as a mischievous smile cracked on her lips and her eyes glinted with mirth. Her fingers danced across his skin as she imagined her love transforming into a kind of magical power that she passed on to him through the tips of her fingers. She really hoped that she could wake her sleeping prince up this way.

"You are having so much fun in it." A hoarse voice broke the stillness of the dawn and startled Leena. Her fingers abruptly stopped in their movement and she looked at him incredulously. However, his eyes were still firmly shut and nothing seemed different from what he was usually like when he slept--heavy snoring and living in his own dream land. It made Leena doubt whether she was just delusional or that she was in a dream w continuing his words. She would feel too ashamed if he wanted to put all the bad things that happened between them on himself.

"Okay, I'll stop. Come closer to me. I want to take a good look at my girl." Kevin hungrily devoured Leena's beautiful face with his hungry eyes. There were still splotches of tears on her cheeks, but that only made her look all the more fascinating to him. Those tears were just like dew drops on a rose's petals on a fine sunny morning.

"Do I look awful now?" Leena wiped her tears with her arm in embarrassment, in a way just like a child did.

"Not at all. You are much thinner than before." Kevin frowned as his heart twisted in realization of this. She was already too thin to begin with and now, she was so skinny to the point that a gentle gust of wind would blow her away.

"Huh! Look at yourself! You are the one who really has become so thin that I could hardly feel your flesh when I touch you," Leena said with an innocent expression painted on her face. She didn't mean anything else as she saw that his face really looked so skinny.

Chapter 1548 Stick To Kevin (Part Two)

"Oh! It turns out that you have already touched me all over!" Kevin laughed wildly, intentionally teasing her.

"Ah! No, I didn't mean that!" Leena said as she bashfully lowered her head in embarrassment to avoid meeting his playful eyes.

"I was joking. Don't take it seriously, my silly girl." Kevin had considerably livened up, but he still didn't dare to move. He still felt painfully sore all over his body.

"Do you feel anything wrong with your body? Are you alright? I'll ask Tom to check on you," Leena asked nervously when she saw his mouth twitch in pain.

"I'm okay, only feeling a little pain on the spot I got injured. Don't bother Tom." Kevin knew it was normal to feel pain after the surgery, so he didn't think it was necessary to send for Tom.

"I'm sorry." Leena felt guilty again. If only he knew how much she hoped that she could bear the pain for him instead!

"I said it had nothing to do with you. Don't take it to heart." He remembered when the aftershock occurred, he really thought that he would just be buried under the debris and lose his life there. However, Leena's sweet smile flashed through his mind and somehow, he was able to subconsciously dodge the falling debris and hide under the concrete slab. That prevented him from suffering any further harm caused by the aftershock.

"I won't feel relieved until you recover." Leena said as a lump formed in her throat. She found it rather easy for her to shed tears tonight.

"It sounded like you are threatening me." Kevin laughed, but soon he let out a strangled cry because the act er until death did them apart.

"Honey, thank you! Thank you for your tolerance and also your unflinching courage. Moreover, thank you for still loving me despite my imperfections," Leena said as her voice was racked with sobs. To her, what Kevin just said was probably the most beautiful whisper of love the world had ever heard.

"My silly girl, when did you suddenly get so emotional?" Kevin said affectionately. He seldom heard her call him honey, so that made him very pleased.

"I'm so lucky to have you around," Leena said with her voice carrying all the tenderness she could hold. She gently planted the softest of kisses on his lips to avoid hurting him.

The unexpected kiss caught Kevin off guard. He looked at her with his eyes wide open in surprise, even forgetting how to react. When he came back to his senses, Leena had already finished the kisses and was looking back at him.

"Tell me, where have you been when you were away?" Kevin said curiously. He really wanted to know what she had been up to when he was not around.

Chapter 1549 Stick To Kevin (Part Three)

"Well in the first month, I stayed in Paris to work on the garments for the fashion show. The next month I just went around and traveled across Europe. I thought if I did, I could forget you this way--but only to find out that I just couldn't do it. During the day time, I could handle it because I had kept myself busy with work or other things to keep me from thinking of you. But when nighttime came and I was alone, with everything so quiet around me, I just couldn't help but miss you. I missed you so much and it was just like the high tide washed and flooded over me that I couldn't even breathe," Leena said as a smile of self-mockery found its way to her lips. She loved him and she had no reason to hide it from him, especially now.

"No wonder I didn't find you in Paris. It seemed that I was too late because you already left," Kevin said as he briefly recalled that time. If he had known this, he would've gone to Paris a few days earlier. That way he might have come across Leena in Paris and saved both themselves from the torment of love-sickness.

"Have you been to Paris looking for me?" Leena asked, completely surprised. She knew that he was always very busy with his work, and that came with his obligations as a soldier. He even had to work on the weekends and seldom had any free time. How could he possibly fit in his schedule flying to Paris to look for her?

"Yes!" Kevin said. "Because I didn't have much time, I only stayed there for two days," he added. In order to take time from his busy schedule, he had worked overnight for several days to finish the work beforehand. Unfortunately, his feelings into account. He was also their son and he still had to take care of them. He was really a jerk to have thought about giving up in that moment.

"It's your work. It's not something you can choose and we can understand. We never blamed you." There were a lot of soldiers in the family, so she knew that it was very clear that they could not choose their fate. People's interests always went first above their lives.

"Is everything okay with dad?" Kevin asked worriedly. His father had unstable blood pressure. He hoped that his blood pressure would not surge when he got the news of his injury.

"You know how strong he is. Don't worry. He's always fine. And you, you should be good to Leena this time. If you let her go again, I will not forgive you." Shannon stared at him with a warning look. She sided with Leena every time, because she liked her.

"Mom, rest assured. If I miss her again, I know you won't forgive me, and I will not forgive myself either," Kevin said to his mother, but his eyes were fixed on Leena who was talking to Tom at the door.

MY WIFE IS AN ALOOF BEAUTY

Chapter 1550 Stick To Kevin (Part Four)

"I will go back to the Capital City soon. You take care of yourself. I feel relieved that Leena is with you now. Your father needs me and I can't stay here too long," Shannon said. Just like any other old couples who had been with each other for far too long, they constantly complained about each other. However, it was known that their quirks were hardly about to change, so they were already used to each other's habits and were able to live around them. Because of this, now it would feel strange and uncomfortable when they left each other for too long.

"I know. I will bring Leena home to visit you after I recover." Before, Kevin was not the type of man who often felt homesick while he was on duty. 'Ambitious men aim far, ' as the saying went. Because of that mindset, he focused a lot more on his work and ignored his family--but it wasn't until he got married and had his own family that he realized how difficult it was to manage everything well in a family.

"Okay, but all those things should wait until you recover," Shannon said and then cast a few glances at Leena. She thought she needed to talk to her before she left.

"Kevin, I will do a physical check on you," said Tom. Although Kevin woke up later than he had expected, all his vital organs seemed to function well.

"Thanks!" Kevin said politely and sincerely.

"We are family, don't be too polite," Tom snapped chidingly at him as he looked over his body. Then, he began to check on his wounds to see whether they became inflamed.

"Leena, I want to take a walk in the garden, join me?" Shannon's voice cut through Leena's thoughts, and she looked at her with pleading eyes. She d Apartment. It was the first time that she went home after she came back. The first thing she did was to take a good bath. All the things in the house just remained the same as they were before she left. She felt familiar with everything. Yes, it was home.

When she opened the wardrobe to get some clothes, her eyes almost stung with hot tears at the sight of the tags which she hung on the clothes with reminders she left for Kevin. She felt it was like a dream thinking of the several months when she was away. When she woke from the dream, she was still in the home, as if she had never left. Everything was so familiar as things remained just the same as they were.

The credit cards and the car keys she put in the drawer were still there, untouched. However, the Divorce Agreement was nowhere to be seen. She assumed that Kevin must have torn it into pieces. She knew him too well.

Since she had decided to come back, she would not leave again no matter what happened. From now on, she pledged her life to protect this family and stick to the man who loved her dearly, till death did them apart.
