

He sat idly on the rock for a very long time, as if he was part of a painting which blended perfectly with the blue sky and the indigo ocean in the back. Big waves lashed onto the shore, one after another. White foams splashed onto his shirt, some of them wet his mouth. He licked the foam; the bitterness of the sea made him smirk. His heart was more bitter than the ocean.

His life was a show he put up for people around him. He was a funny, cool gentleman in front of others. But as soon as the lights went out, he had to return to his little dark corner. There, he had to clean up his unseen wounds and amend his own broken heart all by himself. He was like an artist-performing and faking emotions. He knew how to distract people with his unique laughter. He never revealed his real self to anyone. The people around him thought of him as a funny, positive and generally happy person. But they couldn't be more wrong. He was torn, beaten, and wounded by his harsh life. He had to live with his mask on. His life was merely a show for others.

The sunset over the horizon was simply breathtaking, but Rain was not paying any attention to it. Nothing seemed beautiful or wholesome to him anymore. Waves nosily hit the rocks underneath his feet one after another and then faded away. Occasionally, a seagull would fly across the sky, hovering above the ocean not far from where he sat. Rain watched the view in front of him, his mind galloping wildly. Time seemed frozen at some point. He couldn't control his emotions any longer.

His past haunted him like a vengeful ghost. So many scenes flashed in front of his eyes, messing up his mind. No matter how desperately he tried, he couldn't break the shackles of his nightmares. They were everywhere. There was no escape. Rain buried his face into his palms and moaned in agony. Depression soon overwhelmed him. He was the one who had chosen to place all his burdens on his own shoulders. Now, he had to face the consequence with his remaining courage.

When the sun finally disappeared into the sea, Rain dragged himself back to the car. He closed his tired eyes and took a few minutes' nap. He picked up the phone by his side and was sur ell hit him. Rain sniggered. She was right. He did smell unpleasant. But it wasn't that horrible.

Inside the bathroom, Leena bent over the toilet and puked everything out. With trembling legs, she came back to Rain's side and gave him a weak smile. With a baby growing inside her, she couldn't stand any strong smell. Rain, with his trip to the ocean, caused her to have that crazy pregnancy reaction.

"You poor little thing, are you all right? Do I really smell like rotten fish to you?" Rain patted her softly on the shoulder, trying to help her feel better. Then he went to the kitchen and fetched a glass of water for her to wash away the smell in her mouth. As they sat down on the sofa, he looked at her and said, "I do smell like seaweed, I suppose. But boy, you are over-reacting!"

Leena rinsed her mouth and pulled herself together. Then she said weakly, "I am not over-reacting! I'm pregnant, you know. I'm sensitive to scent, especially unpleasant ones like this. Even the slightest odor makes me vomit."

"Oh! I almost forgot that you are pregnant. Now I understand. For a moment, I thought that I was so stinky that the mere sight of me sent you straight into the bathroom!" His casual joke made her laugh. She gave him a friendly nudge and giggled. Rain had the magical power to cheer others up. Despite the fact that he was a broken man inside, he never showed his vulnerability to others. He armed himself with the most gorgeous smile.

"Were you on the beach?" Leena asked, daintily wiping her mouth with a napkin. 'No wonder he didn't answer my calls. He needed time away in a pure environment to heal himself. I just hope that it worked.' She thought.

"Um! I realized just how dirty the atmosphere in the downtown area has become, so I needed the ocean breeze and some freedom, to clear my mind." Rain said, smiling dazzlingly. The smile appeared strange on his normally melancholy features, and it revealed how handsome and elegant his face could be. Clearly, he had inherited his attractive attributes from his mother, not his father.

"Dig in! Eat! I have prepared all this yummy food, they're all your favorite dishes." Leena encouraged. She had been greatly concerned about him and had spent the whole afternoon preparing his favorite foods to make him feel at home with the comfort of wholesome dishes to enjoy.

"Girl, why are you suddenly so nice to me?" Rain was moved by Leena's efforts, but he asked the question off handedly, trying to hide how affected he felt. Over the years, he had often spoiled her, because of her beauty and kindness; he had nursed a secret desire to see their relationship reach fruition.

"Why do you think?" Leena asked, batting her eyelashes seductively. Then she vanished in to the kitchen, wrapped in an air of innocence.

"You want my body, right?" Rain called after her with a teasing smile and raised eyebrow. It seemed that he had finally banished his bad mood. It was pleasant to tease and joke with Leena.

"Sure, Rain, you're pretty handsome. But, sorry, no! I like a man full of vigor. You're just not my type." Leena said laughing at their game of tease. She settled at the table next to him, an elegant blush spreading on her beautifully rounded face.

"How am I not your type? Look at this perfectly triangular figure. Don't underestimate me." Rain argued seriously, lifting up his shirt to show off his lean, muscular frame. He was a perfect example of "Being skinny with clothes on and muscular without them."

"Puff! Rain, I was talking about the spirit, not the body!" Leena laughed so hard that she spewed some soup out into the hastily raised napkin.

"Wow. Girl, you obviously take me for a pig, right? Look at all this food! Are you serious? You're jealous of my sexy figure, and now you are trying to fatten me up like a pig, right?" Honestly though, Rain was deeply touched by Lee you have the might and power of the FX International Group at your back." Edward said with an evil smile. Daisy was right; Edward was a devious businessman.

"In this way I would take KD Group back to it's former glory indirectly, won't I?" Rain sat up as insight dawned, looking at Edward. "What a holy-shit idea from him? He must have known that I've been looking forward to seeing KD Group's downfall. It would be very kind and merciful of me not to take advantage of the situation and give them a further hit. Why did he think I would turn the tide in their favor?' He thought.

"Have you thought this through? You could manipulate the situation and establish your own dominance in KD Group, then everybody there would be at your beck and call." Edward said, revealing his ultimate goal. He wanted the people, who all used to look down upon Rain, to rely on him for their living. This was not an easy strategy, but in the long run a much more satisfying way to get back at them.

"Let me think about it." Rain said, his mental gears grinding at Edward's idea. If this succeeded he would finally win respect for his mother! He hesitantly considered the complicated dynamics of the Ke family's network.

"Let me know your answer, once you've made up your mind. We're not short of investment opportunities, but KD group is ripe for the taking, why not do it? Besides, the Ke family owes you, doesn't it? I know you don't give a shit about them, but there's no reason for you not to profit from the people who mistreated you." This was Edward. He would find a way to take advantage of someone who owed him.

"Got it. I'll sleep on it." Rain said, deep in thought. He had thought that the more isolated he could be from that family, the better he would feel. But Edward's idea made him uncertain what to do next. According to Edward, he should consider taking their money by manipulating the situation, why should he decline it if they offered the opportunity to him?

Edward observed Rain thoughtfully. He hadn't asked Rain to defend his position before, because it wasn't good timing then. But, now everything was ready. He just hoped Rain could fight for himself, not for the sake of the family property, but for his standing with the Ke family.

In the following days, Rain continued pondering his options. He had previously made lots of assumptions, but they were being overturned now. He hadn't wanted to communicate with anyone in the Ke family.

His hesitation was ended by an incident which finally made up his mind.

Rain was always making public appearances as the Vice President of FX International Group. This wine party was no exception. Unexpectedly, he was confronted by one of the Ke family members, the eldest son of the Ke family, who had voiced the biggest disapproval of Rain.

"Since when are they inviting anyone to a high-end wine party?" Cyrus Ke said with a sarcastic smile. He regarded Rain proudly, his eyes full of contempt.

"I couldn't agree with you more. Why, I can hear dog's barking in this very place?" Rain fought back lightly. He hadn't sought trouble, but Cyrus had launched the first assault. 'You wanna do it the hard way, right?' He thought.

"Who's the dog?" Cyrus ground his teeth, staring hard at Rain. If his father hadn't asked this rogue to take over the company, he would not have bothered himself to pick a fight with Rain.

"The one who barked at my question." Rain replied, behaving like a punk as usual. He was calmly making fun of the eldest son of the Ke family.

"Humph! Do not deceive yourself into believing that you could come back to our home, just because my dad suddenly thinks highly of you. Let me tell you straight, it's impossible. Don't forget that my mom is still there!" Cyrus said with a sinister smile. As long as his mom was in the Ke family, the bastard would never have any chance at setting foot into that house.

"Let me clarify something: In your n, but he had no release for his anger when Rain left him so proudly. All he could do was clench his teeth and ball his fists. He wanted to slap the smile off of Rain's handsome face. His father had been attracted to Rain's mother because of the same enchanting features. Then she gave birth to the bastard Rain, who now fought over the fortune with him. He had been squabbling with every last one in his family already. Now, there was another unexpected contender. With enemies inside and outside, how could Cyrus not feel exasperated?

Compared to Cyrus, Rain felt more cheerful. He had just won the first round of the game. The sense of achievement was more fulfilling than securing a lucrative tender. Cyrus now paid attention to him, which meant he possessed something that scared Cyrus. So, Cyrus tried to scare him off with intimidation.

He had previously felt insulted and cursed by them, because of his inferiority complex. But today, he would not let history repeat. 'So, Cyrus, get ready, because I have a huge surprise for you! I promise, you will not like it.' Rain thought.

The Ke family, with a long history, was one of the noblest families in S City. It was Cyrus's father who had taken KD Group to the top and turned it into a business empire. But the company had sadly begun to back slide over the past two or three years, because Cyrus's father stepped down. Even so, the company wouldn't be closed down that easily, since it possessed a firm foundation. But it was just no longer as steady as before, when in it's full glory.

Chapter 1584 The King Of S City (Part One)

Polished leather dress shoes landed on the concrete ground in front of a tall, imposing glass building. It was not as grand as FX International Group, but it was still as famous in S City. The handsomely dressed man walked to the entrance and stepped inside. The opulent crystals of the chandelier glittered when the sunlight hit them as they cast beautiful patterned shadows on the glossy granite tiles of the floor. The man, Rain, didn't expect to enter KD Group so easily, yet less than a week after the wine party, here he was.

The conference room was littered with the company's key people in a heated discussion about something. Although everyone knew that Rain would become the CEO of KD Group, Sanford's family still came to the company to change his mind and persuade him from letting Rain be the acting president of KD Group.

"Daddy, why? Why do you want that little bastard to be CEO of KD Group?" Vance Ke said. He was Sanford's second son. He looked rather arrogant with his hands folded across his chest as he huffed in annoyance.

"Watch your tongue. He is not a bastard. He is your brother." Sanford glared at him as he thought, 'If you guys were as capable as Rain, then I wouldn't have to do this.'

"My brother? He is not my brother!" Vance sneered and his nostrils flared in irritation.

"Vance is right. There's no way Rain will be my brother." An elegantly dressed lady in a red wrap dress beside Vance echoed his sentiments with contempt. She was Tiana, Vance's sister.

An older, yet just as sharp voice added fuel to the fire. "I'm still alive. If that little bastard wants to get into the KD Group, he'll step over my dead body." After all these years, Sheena was still shrewd as ever. Although time had left its mark on her face, her character and attitude were still as fiery.

"Nonsense! I'm not asking for your opinion. I'm telling you that if you have a problem with it, you can leave the house or the company." Sanford glared at them. They all lapsed into silence as he looked so commanding that his presence made the atmosphere in the room tense.

"Dad, we're not against him entering our company. We just think it's too risky for you to let a vice president of another company run our own." A calm but confident voice echoed throughout the room. It was Hannah, Cyrus' wife. As a smart and capable businesswoman, she held a high position at KD Group.

"I agree with Hannah. Dad, everything is fine in our company. Why are you making

He thought, 'Do you think you're still that same rich lady?' He knew that ever since her eldest brother took over their family business, he had never given her any help or assistance.

After being exposed by this little revelation from Sanford, Sheena suddenly blanched. He was right. Before KD Group encountered any difficulties, her brother was generous to her. However since that misfortune, he had turned his back on her.

Meanwhile, downstairs at the building's lobby, Rain had entered KD Group's premises. As soon as he stepped inside, a middle-aged man walked towards him.

"Mr. Xia, nice to meet you. I am Lawrence, the legal adviser of your Dad. I've been working for him for many years. He told me to wait here for you," Lawrence greeted him. When Lawrence saw Rain, his eyes went a little red and he suddenly remembered Rain's mother. They looked so much alike.

"Nice to meet you, too. Lawrence. Just call me Rain, if you don't mind. By the way, he is not my father," Rain said back. Rain wore a piercing dark navy blue suit for this day. From the suit's design, to its craftsmanship and intricate details, it was not difficult to see that his suit was tailored by a famous designer. It was actually a suit from LN FASHION, a stylish and dapper label especially chosen for him by Leena.

"No, no, no. I can't call you like that. You're the new CEO of KD Group after all," said Lawrence in slight trepidation. It was rumored that Rain was an incompetent fellow, but when Lawrence saw him, he found him to be quite charming and impressive in the way he carried himself, which was totally different from what the reports claimed.

"I will take that as a yes," Rain said with a smile. He knew what he was going to face without a moment's thought.

Lawrence frowned, but he didn't say anything. He just led him to the elevator. 'Rain looks smarter and more capable than his two brothers, ' Lawrence thought to himself in silence.

The short trip was quiet. Lawrence bowed to him respectfully and left when they reached the designated floor. Rain walked to the doors of the conference room and when he entered, everyone's heads turned to look at him with resentful gazes. He felt a shiver run down his spine.

"Hello, everyone. You didn't expect us to meet so soon, did you?" Rain addressed everyone happily. He smirked mischievously and at the back of his mind he thought, 'Just wait, you bastards. I will treat you "well.'"

"No one wants to see you, you little bastard. You don't deserve to sit here!" Sheena sneered at Rain and glared at him. She was furious because when she looked at Rain, she remembered how her husband betrayed her.

"Mrs. Ke, you just called me a bastard in front of Mr. Ke. Aren't you afraid he'll get mad?" Rain said ironically as he scanned the people present in the room. He knew all of them except two women.

"Don't try to ruin my relationship with Sanford. Even if you can get into KD Group, you can't go back to our house. As long as I'm alive, you can't get what you want." Sheena hissed at him like he was an annoying little shrew. A cunning woman like her would still be pissed off at Rain.

"Don't worry, I never wanted anything to do with your family. Your house is too dirty for a noble man like me." He had only agreed to help Sanford run the company, but he had no intentions of returning to their home at all.

"Since you despise us so much, then why did you come to KD Group? If I were you, I won't ask for trouble," Vance said haughtily. He thought he was handsome, but when he stood in front of Rain it was as if he was overshadowed by his brother's presence.

"You should ask Mr. Ke that question. You should ask him why he wants me to run your company. Is it because you are all too incompetent to do the job?" When it came to arguments, no one faced off with Rain except Edward. That man was a sophist after all.

"Don't be so arrogant. Do you really think you can save KD Group?" Cyrus said as he scowled at Rain and thought, 'Damn it! Didn't he say he wasn't coming to KD Group? Why is o take a picture with him, she could show off in front of her classmates.

"Wait for me!" Tiana hollered. If Leena had called him, he would have stopped walking to wait for her at once; but it was Tiana who did, so he hastened his pace to get in the car.

Tiana honestly did not expect Rain to do that to her, so there was nothing she could do but watch him drive away. She felt annoyed at this but she didn't give up the idea of taking a picture with him.

Rain glanced at the receding figure of Tiana through the rear view mirror. He smiled coldly and thought, 'Tiana, though you didn't actually hurt me, you are still Sheena's daughter. You deserved that.'

The car soon turned to a building complex and stopped at the parking space. Rain got out of the car to go inside and made a beeline for the executive lounge. Being back at FX International Group made Rain feel relaxed. The silence and people at KD Group smothered him.

"So, how's it going?" A man in a charcoal gray suit sauntered to him. For the first time, Edward offered him a drink and sat down beside him.

"Everything is fine," Rain said confidently. He knew that this was only the beginning, and he had a lot of things on his plate to face next.

"That's great! You're so awesome! Let's toast to your victory!" Edward said approvingly as he raised his glass of cogniac and made a celebratory toast to him. What they really wanted was not Sanford's property or assets, it was the feeling of superiority that would come from defeating them. They wanted all those who ever looked down at him to know that he was the king of S City.

"Thank you!" exclaimed Rain in exasperation. "In my opinion, the situation in KD Group has become rather complicated!" It was a rare sight to see the man so frustrated. The chaos in KD Group must have really agitated him.

"Well, what else do you think?" questioned Edward. Rain threw him an expectant look. Rolling his eyes, Edward explained, "KD Group is a family business. If you want to have it under control in a short period of time, you'll need to take down nepotism in the office first." As Edward rubbed his chin thoughtfully, Rain snorted at the proposal.

"In that case, I guess they'll just tear me up," said Rain sarcastically. The Ke family's attitude didn't go undetected by him. So he could only imagine what trap and challenges lay in wait at the KD Group. If there was anything to be learned from his past encounters with them, it was that working there would usher in a regular dose of distress and pressure. What fun!

"Well, are you going to cower in fear just because of a challenge?" Smirking, Edward turned his head sideways and glanced at Rain.

"You can't pull back an arrow once it's shot," Rain scoffed, "Do you think I'd quickly get knocked down?" Before entering the KD Group, he was smart enough to make a detailed investigation on the Ke family's existing personnel. A man with a plan, Rain was more than well-equipped to deal with them.

"Good," Edward said, "You've really got some guts there with you." Grabbing his drink on the table, Edward clinked glasses with Rain. A big plan seemed to be in order. And all they needed to do now was patiently wait for the perfect time to set it in motion. The Ke family was about to taste the kiss of betrayal. And they wouldn't know what would hit them.

"Of course, I'm Rain the Invincible," said Rain smugly. Hearing a compliment from Edward himself, Rain couldn't help but feel a bit complacent.

"Just because I praised you, though, doesn't mean you should be overconfident with yourself. You shouldn't underestimate the Ke family!" Then he sniffed and shook his head.

t angry because of private interests. The decision just seemed unjustifiable, and she needed people to accomplish her delegation. Under those circumstances, anyone would be just as enraged. So Hannah's reaction was definitely normal.

"The reason why your person lost his position was that, instead of trying to focus on his work, he was too busy provoking me," responded Rain calmly. "As the president of KD Group, should I have no punishment to him as a warning to anyone who wishes to follow his footsteps?" Playing with his signature pen at the tip of his fingers, he gave the woman enough time to let his words sink in. It was a habit that grew more difficult to change.

"Okay, Rain Xia," said Hannah, finally. She glared at him. "Let's see how long you can keep up with this charade of yours." A part of her believed that she was at fault for forgetting to remind her people to follow the rules during this transitional period. And as a result of her negligence, their careless mouths dragged them directly before the muzzle of the gun, becoming the first to be dismissed.

"Why don't we just wait and see then!" Rain said unblinkingly. As she was only a woman who came from a slightly rich family, Rain was impervious to her threats. Did she really think that she could run around and demand things just because she was married to a member of the Ke family?

Chapter 1587 Kevins Return (Part Two)

"Hmp!" Hannah stomped her foot and left his office. On her way out, she met Eugenia who seemed to be on the way to meet with Rain as well.

"Hey!" greeted Eugenia in surprise. She glanced at Rain's office door before turning to her. "What's the matter, Hannah? Did you know someone who got fired?" Secretly, the two women had been competing to one-up the other. And after butting heads too often, both of them had agreed that it was best to keep their distance as much as they could.

"Eugenia, shouldn't you be more anxious than me?" Hannah asked politely. "With the things you've done, I'm not surprised you're here." Never underestimate a woman's envy, for even if it were over a trivial matter, they could hold a grudge for a very long time.

"We shouldn't be at each other's throats right now, you know," said Hannah, walking away slowly and facing her. "We have a common enemy, and it's that little bastard in there," She nodded towards Rain's office. When she had joined the Ke family, she didn't know the existence of the man. Only recently did she hear about him, and she wasn't impressed.

"You provoked me first. Why is it my fault now?" asked Eugenia casually. Somewhat headstrong, she wasn't used to admitting defeat. It was a flaw that developed due to coming from a rich family. And she had always found it convenient against her enemies.

"Okay, okay. It's my fault then," Hannah said, "I'm sorry. Is that enough?" Considering the common interests they shared, Hannah had to let go of her pride to appease Eugenia. At any rate, there was plenty of other opportunities for them to compete in the future. Today's mishap required a truce.

"Well..." Eugenia trailed, "It's not like I'm entirely blameless. Why don't we just forget it? I've got something else to do." Since Hannah threw in the towel first this time around, she concluded it was best not to come too aggressively, and didn't push the conversation further.

Watching her enter the President's room, Hannah's eyes turned dark as she dropped the pretense. Did she really think she was s ng his military uniform, Lee noted that Kevin got a tan. It was likely due to the tropical conditions in the foreign country.

"Well, she's okay! Although," said Lee, thinking carefully. "There was that one time the other day when she vomited so much because of the foul-smelling fish odor." He recalled the time when she was cooking fish. Like a true soldier, Lee followed Kevin's instructions without question. Every weekend, he would drop by to see Leena and accompany her.

"What, she vomited?" asked Kevin, starting to worry immediately. "Has she seen a doctor yet?" Keen to find out if his wife was okay, he wished he could see Leena already. And after finding out about her ailment, he couldn't wait for another minute anymore.

"She said it was just the fishy odor that got to her," explained Lee. As Lee was oblivious to Leena's current sensitive condition, he thought it was just a simple stomach ache.

"I didn't know she hated the smell of seafood," Kevin muttered, as they walked out of the airport. A gust of cold wind blew past them. Sighing, he reveled as the cold wind hit his face.

"Ah, I didn't know either," shrugged Lee. Given the fact that Kevin, the husband, didn't seem to know about it, it was ridiculous to expect Lee to possibly know.

"Did you tell her of my return?" Getting in the car, he turned to look at Lee with an expectant look.

MY WIFE IS AN ALOOF BEAUTY

"Not at all!" answered Lee, proudly. "You said you wanted to surprise her, so I made a mental note not to open my mouth about it." Lee would've been pretty foolish to disobey Kevin's instructions.

"That's good to know," said a satisfied Kevin, "let's go then." Resting his hands into his pockets, he clutched the gift he brought for Leena. During his last training, he asked a friend to help him buy a gift. It was not, however, for Leena. Although he had hurt her plenty of times, he had hoped that the small gesture would be enough for her to forgive him.

When he arrived at the Grand Apartment, the entire house was dead silent. Apparently, Leena wasn't at home yet. So it seemed that it was not a proper time for his wish to give her a surprise.

Even when he was away for a while, nothing much had changed in the house. Everything seemed familiar, and in some cases, he would catch a whiff of Leena's perfume hanging in the air.

After looking around some more, he decided to take a quick bath first while she wasn't home. After his bath, Leena should be back by then.

Meanwhile, at the supermarket, Leena was ambling around aimlessly. She didn't know why, but ever since she became pregnant, her appetite had improved so much. She grew an appreciation for eating all kinds of snacks, and wasn't sure if it would induce an uncontrollable weight gain.

In front of her was a young couple. The woman's belly stuck out and Leena could tell almost immediately that she was expecting too. She was pouting, angry like she was having an argument with her husband. The closer she got, the more convinced she was by her theory. But then, the husband was quick to compromise. Smiling, the man consoled his wife. After a few more hushed exchanges, she stopped being angry. A small smile crept up on her face.

Seeing such a scene made Leena admire them. Her hand instinctively rested on her abdomen. 'Oh baby, your daddy broke his words. He said he'd be back within two months. But it's been two days overdue, and he still hasn't come home, ' Leena thought to herself.

Leena heard from around that as a pregnant woman, she had to eat more fruits and vegetables. With that in mind, she dropped by the fruits section and started grabbing everything she liked. In such a kiss the entire time he was away, she didn't hesitate to give him what he wanted.

"Wait a minute, Kevin," said Leena, realizing something. "Not now." Stopping Kevin's hand just as he was reaching out to lift her shirt, Leena tried to catch her breath. The doctor said that she had to be careful during the first three months of her pregnancy. Thus, she decided she couldn't risk it for a moment of joy.

"Why?" he asked. "Oh! Is it because you have your period?" Kevin wasn't exactly familiar with periods. Although he heard other girls mention it in the past, he so rarely cared about it. Ever since he married Leena, however, he took it upon himself to understand and pay more attention to it.

"That's not the reason," said Leena, shaking her head. "I'll tell you later!" As soon as her hormones calmed down, she began to panic. Leena didn't know how to announce such a big surprise. Staring into his beautiful eyes, she wondered how she could open this to him.

"Why wait for a moment?" questioned Kevin restlessly. "Can't you just say it now?" And for that two months when he was away, he didn't get to have sex with her. Despite the interruption, his enthusiasm didn't waver. He rubbed her earlobe lovingly, teasing her.

"No, it's just that..." Leena's breath hitched at his gesture. Her body was burning with excitement. Closing her eyes, she leaned close against his body. She wanted it just as much as he did. But despite her desire, her compelling reason told her that she couldn't.

"Just what, huh?" Kevin was busy with his lips roaming her neck. "What do you want to tell me?" he moaned. He looked at her with lust-filled eyes as he kept kissing her, and coaxed Leena to return his ministrations. They hadn't seen each other for more than two months, and Kevin missed his wife like hell. He couldn't wait any longer and wanted her right here, right now.

She was trying not to be distracted with what he was doing. "I, ahhh..." Pausing for a few seconds, Leena then stood on tiptoe and leaned towards Kevin. She brought her mouth next to Kevin's ear and whispered, "You're going to be a father soon." Then she stepped back and blinked her eyes in expectation, waiting to see Kevin's reaction. He didn't disappoint her. Kevin pulled back and stood frozen with his mouth agape.

"Whaa... What, Nana? What did you just say? Please say it again!" he asked her hoarsely. After recovering from the initial shock, Kevin tried to contain his excitement. Did he hear Leena correctly? But it couldn't be real! It was impossible for his wife to bear children. So, he couldn't believe the good news he heard.

Slowly, Leena repeated, "You are going to be a father soon." His stunned look amused Leena. She understood the reaction because it was how she felt once she heard the good news herself. Like Kevin, she was in disbelief. Leena never thought it was possible, but here she was now, pregnant! A baby was growing inside her.

"Tell me it's real! You're not kidding?" he asked excitedly. The man couldn't be happier. Leena getting pregnant was something Kevin never expected. He still couldn't believe he was finally going to be a father! And it was so precious because it would be his and Leena's first child.

"No, I am not kidding, Kevin. We are going to be parents soon. It's really happening!" Leena reiterated, excitement evident in her tone. She shared Kevin's happiness and excitement. After her confirmation, Kevin wrapped his arms tightly around her, then lifted her and spun her around. Her husband felt like he was

She remained adamant even when he was involved in scandals with other women.

Eventually she stormed off after she learned that he had betrayed her again. But life brought her back to him a few years later, to his astonishment. she hung her head low.

"So, how is the baby? Is it healthy? Did Tom say anything?" Kevin asked, his brows furrowed. Like many soon-to-be fathers, the first thing he was worried about was the baby's health. It was a normal reaction for first-time fathers, and Leena appreciated his concern.

She sighed in contentment. "Yes, the baby is healthy. The doctor told me everything was fine. I only need to go to the hospital for a check-up every few weeks, for now. Also, I need to eat food high in protein. That is all I need to worry about right now," Leena explained. Gently biting her lower lip, the young woman couldn't contain her smile. Whenever she thought of going to the hospital for check-ups like Patricia, she couldn't help but feel happy and excited. All her hard work had paid off. She had expected that being pregnant with Kevin's child would make them happy, but she had no idea it would be this joyous for her.

"That's good to know," he said, blowing out a breath. Then he put his lips on Leena's and gave her a resounding kiss. Kevin was less worried now that he knew their baby was all right. He was so happy that it made him nearly dizzy.

"By the way, why didn't you let me pick you up?" Leena asked. She puckered her lips and looked at her husband with accusing eyes. She wanted to pick him up herself so she could see him earlier.

He shrugged apologetically. "I wanted to surprise you, but didn't expect I would end up being surprised," Kevin explained. "I prepared a gift for you. Close your eyes first, and no peeking." Checking that she couldn't see anything, Kevin took out a box that had been inside his pocket the entire time. He opened the box, took the necklace out, and put it around Leena's neck.

"What is it?" Leena asked curiously. But she kept her eyes closed as Kevin told her. Leena still had no idea what her husband got her. Still, her heart melted at the thought that Kevin would buy a gift immediately after his two-month training stint.

"You can open your eyes now," Kevin said softly. He examined the necklace he had put on Leena, and took a deep breath as he admired the way it made her look utterly beautiful. The necklace accentuated her gorgeous neck. Her face nearly glowed with the silver chain, which made her skin lighter. Perhaps, it was pure happiness that made Kevin think he had never seen Leena look this lovely. He was hoping his wife would appreciate the gift.

"Is it a necklace?" Leena asked as she opened her eyes. She had felt Kevin's hands around her neck and made the right guess. It pleased her that he thought of her during his training and presented her with such a wonderful surprise. Leena bet it was a gorgeous piece of jewelry.

"It's actually a ring. But I put it on a silver necklace so you won't ever lose it," Kevin said. His thoughtfulness touched Leena. It was a promise Kevin made to his wife before that he would pick rings for them himself, and he remembered to do it.

"But why are there two rings?" Leena asked as she inspected the necklace. She felt two rings on the silver chain, and this confused her. Did Kevin give her two rings? But why?

"You know that I'm a soldier, correct? So, I'm not allowed to wear a ring when I am at the army base or on a mission. That's why I decided to let you keep my ring, too. This way, you can look at it whenever you think of me. Think of it like I'm beside you all the time. Do you like it?" Kevin said. Ther Drugged one night by her ex-boyfriend, a mysterious man took advantage of her in an ecstatic night filled with sex.

To take her revenge, she married the man, and used him.

"As long as I'm alive, I'm still his legal wife, while all of you are just his mistresses."

She remained adamant even when he was involved in scandals with other women.

Eventually she stormed off after she learned that he had betrayed her again. But life brought her back to him a few years later, to his astonishment.

extra careful now because of the baby she was carrying. Kevin didn't want anything to happen to the baby or Leena. He knew this child was priceless, a gift from God. And they were both grateful to have the chance to be parents, so Kevin vowed he would take good care of his wife and child.

"Okay, I promise," Leena told her husband. She knew Kevin was both happy and worried about her condition, so she agreed with everything he said to make him worry less about her. Leena knew she had to be careful, and she too was aware of how blessed they were to have a baby on the way. She would not let anything screw this up. Besides, she was also aware that Kevin rarely had free time, and he would not be able to accompany her every time she went shopping.

"Good, that's settled. I'm going down to get the things now. I'll be back in a bit," Kevin said. He was out the door instantly. Meanwhile, Leena immediately walked to the bathroom inside their bedroom. She wanted to have a close look at the gift Kevin gave her just now through the mirror.

She had never been the type of woman who cared a lot about gifts because she was a practical person. But Leena didn't mind receiving a significant gift from her loving husband. And just like every girl who received a gift from her beloved, she was delighted. Leena wanted to inspect the rings that signified their deep love for each other.
