

When their parents learned that Leena was pregnant, they were all ecstatic. Shannon was so happy that she shed a few tears of joy. They all looked forward to becoming grandparents. In her happiness, Shannon went to the temple to thank Buddha for granting her wish of a precious grandchild. Now, all they wanted was for Leena and the baby to be healthy.

On the other hand, Nathan was all smiles after hearing the good news. He was not one to easily show his emotions, regardless if he was happy or sad. But he called Leena to say a few words to her, mainly telling the mother-to-be to take good care of herself, but in his usual stern and strict way. It seemed that he did not dislike his daughter-in-law after all.

"What did dad say to you?" Kevin inquired. He saw Leena hang up the phone after speaking to his father. He was curious because it was surprising for Nathan to call Leena. As far as he knew, his father never called Leena, not even once. Usually, it was their mother who called.

"He told me to eat more and eat healthy now that I'm pregnant. He also told me to be careful and take care of myself and the baby. He said I should not act childish and go away when I want to, because I am no longer alone," Leena recounted Nathan's words. Biting her lip, Leena thought about her conversation with Kevin's father. As he spoke, Leena didn't feel like it was a scolding. He might have sounded stern as if admonishing Leena for a wrong she had done, but the girl felt her father-in-law's concern for her and the baby. Leena decided it was Nathan's way of showing that he cared for her.

"His tone isn't nice, is it? But that's just how he is. He talks that way even with me, so don't mind him," Kevin comforted his wife. He was worried that Leena would be upset if she felt his father was berating her, so Kevin immediately sought to assure her. He didn't want to see his wife become depressed over something that was due to misinterpretation.

It was Leena's turn to assure Kevin. "I'm fine, don't worry. I'm not upset. Besides, I think that he cares more about me now than he did before. He used to be so indifferent to me in the past. But now, he even called me himself. That's a huge step forward, don't you think so? So I am not going to be upset with his manner of speaking." She had put on a pretty smile. The doctor told her it Drugged one night by her ex-boyfriend, a mysterious man took advantage of her in an ecstatic night filled with sex.

To take her revenge, she married the man, and used him.

"As long as I'm alive, I'm still his legal wife, while all of you are just his mistresses."

She remained adamant even when he was involved in scandals with other women.

Eventually she stormed off after she learned that he had betrayed her again. But life brought her back to him a few years later, to his astonishment.

She behaved like a child. He liked this cute Leena, whom he found adorable.

"Of course, all men are like this," Leena mumbled to herself. Her brows remained furrowed. When she first heard Patricia and Michelle complaining to her about their husbands' overprotectiveness, Leena thought they were only exaggerating. Now, she understood they were telling the truth. Men were all like this. They would force you to eat something they thought was good for the baby in the name of caring about the child's health.

"What do you mean by that?" Kevin stopped in his tracks when he heard her words. He turned around and looked at Leena with curious eyes. He wanted to know why his wife said this.

"You care so much about the baby's well-being that you forget your own wife's feelings," she pouted. Leena knew she was acting childish, but couldn't help it. She was not jealous of the baby. But she did feel it was unfair when her husband thought of the baby first.

"Nana, you're wrong. Let me tell you why. If a man doesn't love the woman who's carrying his child, he'll never embrace the baby in her womb. He won't care about them. You know I love you, that's why I also love our baby," Kevin explained. He was aware there were men who only cared for the child, not their wife. But Kevin wasn't like that. He was a husband first. The only way for him to be a good father was to be a good husband. Yes, he cared about the baby's well-being very much, but it didn't mean he cared less about Leena. The truth was, he cared about the baby's mother very much.

Chapter 1592 Youre Going To Be A Father (Part Four)

Frustrated with herself, Leena admitted, "I'm just being childish. Don't think too much into it. I'm fine." Honestly, she had no doubt that Kevin loved her, but she didn't know why she blurted out what she said without a second thought. Even Leena could not explain what made her say things that would upset her husband. But she couldn't help herself then. Her hormones were probably on overdrive because she was pregnant.

"No, I understand. All right, stay here. I'll be right back," Kevin said kindly. He remembered Tom saying that pregnant women were likely to have mood swings quite often. So no matter what unreasonable things Leena said to him, he should not take them seriously. Kevin now knew she was not able to control herself during certain instances.

Smiling sheepishly, Leena nodded at her husband. She was grateful that Kevin was very understanding. If there was one thing she was sure of, it was that he would make a good father in the future. Leena, for now, was only being dramatic.

Since Kevin did very well during his two-month training, he was given a week off from work. The break allowed him to stay home and rest. More importantly, it gave him a chance to take good care of Leena. He did everything to make his wife's life more convenient and happier, and she didn't even have to lift a finger. If she wanted a certain kind of food, Kevin would either make it or buy it for her. He didn't allow his wife to do any housework, and he treated Leena like a queen at home. Kevin had never been this careful and considerate before.

"Why do I feel like you have more scars now than before? Did you get hurt again?" Leena asked worriedly one day. He had removed his shirt in front of her and Leena saw fresh scars all over his body. Her heart broke thinking that Kevin got badly hurt during training.

"I ran into some wild animals in the rain forest and got scratched trying to escape them," he answered. What Kevin said was only partly true. He didn't dare tell his wife how ferocious those wild animals were because he did not want to scare Leena and make her worry.

"What? Wild animals? How did you run into them? I thought there weren't any wild animals where you were training," she said looking terrified. The whole time her husband was away, ing will ever happen to me. I will always be by your side, and our baby's, like the rings you're wearing around your neck. I promise I will never leave you." He pulled her into his arms and gently held her. Kevin regretted ever telling her things about his training. At that moment, he decided it was better to avoid such subjects in the future.

Her voice muffled, Leena said, "Kevin, if... If something bad should ever happen to you, please don't let them tell me. I can't take it, and I mean that. Just let me think that you're at some place that's far, far away, and that you're not really gone." Suddenly, she felt like crying. Leena was having difficulty in controlling her feelings now. For the first time, she had been bothered by Kevin's occupation. Right this moment, Leena wished her husband was not a soldier. She realized it was a very selfish thought knowing how much Kevin loved what he did. But she didn't want him to get hurt.

"Silly girl. That day will never come, I promise. My work can be dangerous sometimes, I admit. But I will definitely take care of myself for you and our baby. Besides, we're in a peaceful age. It's not like I'm going to war," Kevin assured her. He was aware that accidents happened every day, but Kevin was confident he would be able to take care of himself and stay out of danger. He didn't want Leena to worry about him, especially because anxiety was not good for the baby's well-being. He vowed to protect himself and his family, so Leena had nothing to worry about.

Chapter 1593 Youre Just Edward Mus Dog (Part One)

Rain's return to the Ke family did nothing to ease the fight within the KD Group. He became the common enemy of the members of the Ke family, and all eyes were hot on him.

"Why did you cancel my bonus for this quarter?" Cyrus asked with a raised voice as he stormed into the CEO's office. "You're using your position to get back at me for a personal grudge?"

"The money you have filled your own pocket with is much more than that bonus you're demanding." Rain answered him indifferently, unaffected by the outburst. He continued burying himself in the documents as if Cyrus weren't even in the office.

"What did you just say? I stole money from the company? Don't be so quick to accuse me of anything you don't have proof of," he scoffed angrily.

"Ridiculous!" With his hands on his hips, he looked down at Rain expectantly. He was positive that Rain was acting solely on a grudge, and had no real proof.

The CEO raised a brow without looking at the other man. "Do you want to see it with your own two eyes, then?" The Ke family thought too much of their cleverness for their own good. They did their business sure that they wouldn't possibly leave any evidence behind, but Rain dug up some dirt quite easily. They had done some significant damage to the company.

"You're bluffing," Cyrus accused as his eyes narrowed. "If you do have proof, show me!" He was in a sour mood because he and his wife had a fight that morning. Rain's attitude was only provoking him, and he let himself vent out all his anger on the bastard.

"So you won't believe me until you see irrefutable evidence, I see?" Rain asked as he slowly stood up with both hands on the table, giving a menacing aura. "I thought I'd let you save face, but it doesn't look like you're learning a lesson." He finally lifted his gaze, cold and straight into Cyrus' eyes. "You want evidence? I'll give it to you." He grabbed a thick stack of documents and threw it haphazardly on the desk with a loud thump. "Here you are. Take a close look." He wanted to see how Cyrus would react when he saw the result of his crimes.

"Rain Xia, are you kidding me? This has nothing to do with me." Cyrus shuffled through the papers in a rattled state. Luckily, he had been smart enough to never sign the documents himself.

"What comes next, hmm? You'll tell me you don't know this person who signed the documents? He was a classmate of yours, wasn't he?" Rain's demeanor was calm, but his tone was almost sneering as he leaned back on his chair and waited for Cyrus' response.

"What? Is it illegal now to hire an old classmate? Does that make me a criminal?" Cyrus' teeth were g t come to my office again if you're going to bother me about these trivial matters. I'm too busy for that." Rain dismissed him coldly.

Cyrus pursed his lips and clenched his jaw, restraining himself. "I'm warning you. Do not provoke me again, or I'll expose your identity as a bastard," Cyrus threatened with a point of his finger. He thought that if the people in the company knew about Rain's true background, he wouldn't have anyone on his side. He would be too busy controlling the public opinion to even care about the business. If that was the case, he would never be able to make the necessary changes within three months, Cyrus schemed in his head.

"Do you really think you can simply threaten me like that? I was wondering if your wife knows that you're having an affair with the young model?" Rain threatened back. He was not afraid of the other's threats in the least. Before he took over KD Group, he made sure to prepare for everything, and anything. He had all the dirt on the company's seniors.

"You had me investigated? You bastard!" Cyrus had an image to uphold. If his wife knew that he had an affair, that image would crumble to dust.

"I didn't need to investigate you. Your opponent told me easily enough. If you don't want your own affairs exposed, you'd better stay away from me, and quit trying to provoke me." It was Luke who had investigated them and given Rain the little tip. He was a capable man, and one of the few that Rain trusted.

Cyrus groaned, "Okay, you got me! This doesn't mean you can stay in the company for long. Just you wait and see." He was in no mood to demand for his bonus anymore. He stormed out of the office and banged the door behind him. He had to find a real way to get Rain out of the company.

MY WIFE IS AN ALOOF BEAUTY

Chapter 1594 Youre Just Edward Mus Dog (Part Two)

"Arrogant bastard!" Rain could hear the petty man's yelling from inside his office, and scoffed. He adjusted his chair and continued studying the current status of KD Group. The more he learned about the company, the more he wanted to give up. To save the group was far more complicated than he had expected.

Time flew by in a blink, and the Spring Festival was coming up soon. Patricia's due date was in a mere couple of days. She had been on tenterhooks lately, and didn't dare visit anyone for fear that she would go into labor at any moment.

"Tom, I just want to have a painless labor, okay?" Patricia sat on the couch, and looked at Tom with a hopeful gaze.

"The painless labor doesn't actually mean you won't feel any pain. It just significantly reduces the pain. Although it won't affect the baby, the anesthetic will possibly affect the mother. I still suggest that you go through with natural labor. Don't worry, Patricia. I'll be right here the whole time." Tom held her hand and stroked it gently in consolation.

"I'm so scared," she admitted to him with a pitiful look. 'You're not the one giving birth. Easy for you to say that, ' she thought to herself as she looked at Tom.

"Relax, you have me. I'm a doctor, you can feel safe with me. After all, you want to meet our baby as soon as possible, don't you? You're strong, and you have to deliver the baby successfully." Tom's words didn't do much to ease Patricia's anxiousness as her due date was approaching. Although Tom had consoled her everyday, she was still under immense pressure.

"Can I trust you?" Patricia asked carefully and grabbed his hands as tightly as if she were just about to give birth.

Tom sighed, "I'm your husband, and the father of our baby. Why can't you trust me?" He frowned at her. He loved her with his whole heart, he thought. Why couldn't she relax with him around?

"I'm sorry. I know you get angry," she apologized at once after realizing her question hurt him.

"I didn't get angry. I just don't want you to test me with these kinds of questions in the future. I'm your husband, and if you can't trust me, then who else can you trust?" Tom was rather hurt by it still, and he couldn't believe his wife couldn't trust him. He could imagine how miserable it would be to live in a family full of doubts, and he wasn't sure he wanted to start that kind of life.

"I didn't mean it like that. Please don't get irritated." Patricia got affectionate. She pleaded in a rather charming manner, with her arms snaked around him as shocked by what Leena said, and cursed herself for not calling him earlier.

"Oh, nonsense. You know how much I love to have fun with you guys. Do you want to speak to Kevin? He's pretty free right now." Leena then realized that they were already on the road. She wanted to give Kevin the phone, afraid that Daisy might have some important things to tell him.

"No, it's alright. See you at the base later. Tell Kevin to have a safe drive," Daisy said instead. Kevin had been on duty during the previous Spring Festival, so Daisy felt obliged to go to the army base this year.

"Sure. See you, Daisy." Leena flashed a wide grin at the thought of seeing Daisy soon. They hadn't seen each other in quite a while.

"Daisy is going to the base as well?" Kevin asked her with a frown, his eyes on the road. He planned to let Daisy spend more time with her family, and didn't expect her to be joining the others that day.

"Yeah, she wanted to ask us to stay home. She didn't think we would already be heading off." Leena stared at his face with affection. His fine profile was addicting to her, and she couldn't get enough.

"That's fine. The more the merrier." The soldiers wouldn't expect Kevin and Daisy to celebrate the festival with them. 'It would be a good night, ' he thought.

Daisy put her phone away and stared at the man in front of her.

"Why are you looking at me like that?" she asked. He would always act a little oddly from time to time. No matter how much time they spent together, though, she couldn't get used to it. His eyes were too piercing, too sharp, as if she were completely bare and unguarded, as if she had no hold on her secrets from him at all.

Chapter 1595 Female Soldier (Part One)

"Leena is going with Kevin to the army base? Then I'm also going," Edward said, running a wisp of her hair between his fingers and smelling it.

"Do you really want to go with me?" Daisy beat his hand off with a reproachful glance.

"Yep! Why, can't I?" Edward rubbed his aching hand. 'Ungrateful woman! Why did she have to strike me so hard? It is so cruel of her to treat me, her husband, like this, ' he thought to himself.

"Okay, why not? You can come with me." Daisy agreed after a momentary hesitation.

"Daddy, Mommy, where are you going? Can I also come with you?" Justin suddenly appeared from out of nowhere.

"You little brat! Were you eavesdropping, huh?" Edward pinched his son's chubby face with profound sufferance. It was not always easy having a clever child like Justin.

"Don't you even think of leaving home without me," Justin cajoled, looking back and forth between his parents.

"Have you prepared a talent show? If you have, then you may come with us," Daisy said. She was, at times, fed up of having to deal with the cunning father and son duo.

"What? A talent show? What about daddy? Has he prepared something as well?" Justin grumbled, pouting his lips. He hadn't prepared a talent to show off.

"Well, why don't you ask him yourself?" Daisy said, turning away, so Edward would not see her smile. She didn't want him to realize that she was poking fun at him, or she'd never hear the end of it.

"Daddy!" Justin stared at his father wide eyed in anticipation, trying to win Edward's heart with his innocent gaze. But he forgot that Edward was never a soft-hearted man.

"Don't look at me like that. If you want to come with us, ask your mommy." Edward was changing his clothes. He would never stoop to giving a performance in public, unless it was a company speech.

"Mommy, take me with you, please!" Justin pleaded. He knew his mother would never refuse him.

"Let's make a deal first. When you see Aunt Leena, you must not do anything to provoke her. She's pregnant now." The relationship between Leena and Justin was a constant headache. They just couldn't see eye to eye.

"No problem. I promise, I will stay far away from her," Justin immediately promised. He was eager to go to the army base with his parents, and no matter what conditions Daisy imposed, Justin would agree to them all.

"Really? You are not just saying that?" She had to cement an agreement with Justin in advance, as she didn't want to spend the ni of his formative years in the army base, and knew most of the soldiers. After bidding goodbye to Daisy, he ran towards some of the soldiers whom he knew.

"Son, don't run about. What if they think you're a spy and arrest you?" Edward teased Justin, but Daisy glared at him with burning eyes. She felt Edward was playing the fool today.

"It's you who might get arrested instead. Mr. Mu, are you here to cause trouble?" Daisy asked coldly. She really began doubting his intention for coming here.

"Don't concern yourself about me. I'm not your responsibility," Edward answered coldly.

"As long as you're in this army base, you are my responsibility, and I should discipline you if you step out of line." Daisy looked around, searching for Kevin and Leena. It was difficult to find them in the mass of similarly dressed soldiers.

"Why don't you go discipline Kevin and Leena? They are also here, after all," Edward retorted.

"Seriously? Kevin is my superior. He would be the one to discipline me. Edward, what is wrong with you tonight?" Daisy gnashed. She finally saw Kevin and Leena. Grabbing Edward by his wrist, she hauled him towards them.

Edward stifled some dry coughs in his fist to conceal his laughter. He was afraid that Daisy would realize that he was baiting her, and in rage drop him to the floor right here. The mere thought of the humiliation that would cause, made him tremble.

"Daisy, there you are. Edward, what are you doing here?" Leena greeted them happily, clearly surprised to see him there.

"You're here. So, why can't I be here?" Edward was feeling at odds with Daisy, and now vented his anger on Leena.

MY WIFE IS AN ALOOF BEAUTY

"What is wrong with him?" Leena whispered in Daisy's ear. She was momentarily concerned by Edward's uncharacteristic snappiness.

"Just ignore him. I think it's that time of the month," Daisy quipped with Leena, while they joined Leena and Kevin. The soldiers were enjoying the show and they spoke in muted tones. Kevin looked around, searching for Justin.

"Where's Justin? Didn't you bring him tonight?" Kevin changed the subject, noticing Daisy and Edward's disgruntlement.

"We brought him with us, but he's off playing with his friends," Daisy said with resignation. Her son was so naughty and tried her patience. Luckily, this was an army base; she was not as concerned that he would stir up trouble here.

"Daisy, are you going to partake in the talent show? Did you prepare a speech or something?" Leena asked intrigued, as she had seen such an evening party on TV before, and leaders would usually take this opportunity to make a speech. Kevin had presented a fine speech earlier. Leena wondered whether Daisy would follow suit.

"A speech? I know nothing but army jokes." Daisy was not one for talent shows. In such events, she was happy to participate as part of the audience, instead of performing. She suffered from stage fright and she would rather go into battle, than present a talent in front of an audience.

"Ah, but you have clearly underestimated yourself." Edward's reprise was cold.

'What a mean man! Can he still be angry because I teased him about participating in the talent show?' Daisy brooded.

"Look at Justin! He's on the stage!" Leena cried, pointing out the boy on the stage. He looked quite adorable in the mini-sized camouflage uniform.

"Damn it! What is he doing up there? Oh my god, now all the soldiers know I'm here." Daisy covered her face in embarrassment. Unlike his mother, Justin was always so enthusiastic about performing for an audience.

"Are you afraid Justin will make you lose face?" Edward asked excitedly, curious now as to what talent Justin would present to them.

"The following act will be a solo titled: Female Soldier. And the singer is our own little soldier, Justin Mu." Even before the host had finished his announcement, applause cracked out like spring thunder. Many soldiers knew Justin.

"Good evening, everyone! I'm Justin Mu and I dedicate this song to my mother, as a token of my affection and grat ntaining her anger anymore. This was the army base, not FX International Group; and here, she was the boss!

"Who do you think is acting like a spoiled child?" Edward demanded coldly, narrowing his eyes like a cat about to pounce.

"Daisy, let's hurry up. Otherwise we'll be late with our rounds." Kevin steered Daisy forward by the wrist, tired of their bickering now. He was, however, not concerned about leaving his wife in the company of such an angry man, because he knew Edward doted on Leena and she would calm him down.

"Edward, what happened to you tonight? You were behaving so childishly this evening." Leena pursed her lips and stopped Edward from following Daisy with a small raised hand.

"So, you are on her side?" Edward retorted, though he made no move to shake off her hand. She was pregnant, and he feared hurting her in any way. Helplessly, he watched Daisy's receding figure.

"I was simply asking. Truthfully, I am concerned about you. Even if Daisy did something wrong, you really shouldn't stir up trouble here. The army base is her domain. You could rather have a talk with her later, when you're back home." The weather in the army base was more chilled than in the city, perhaps because it was a suburban area. When the wind blew, Leena couldn't help but shiver.

"When we're back home, a talk will not suffice to calm me down," Edward said with a cunning smile as he took off his coat and without hesitation placed it around her shoulders. He had already decided that he would give Daisy a lesson, so she could remember who was the boss in the family.

MY WIFE IS AN ALOOF BEAUTY

Chapter 1597 Difference (Part One)

"So what are you gonna do to her?" Leena asked with an interested smile. It was easy to tell how curious she was with what Edward was about to say.

"It's not like that! Don't forget that you are a pregnant woman now. Remember that whatever you say and whatever you do will affect your baby," reprimanded Edward before flicking her forehead.

"Hmp! Don't act like you're innocent." Leena pouted her pretty lips while rubbing her hurt forehead. She wondered, 'Why was Edward born this evil?'

"Girl, I never said I was a good person. I'm not even connecting the word innocent to me at all," Edward said in a serious tone. To be honest, he had already experienced a lot of bad things since he started with their business. Except for killing people, the list of evil things he had done was already endless.

"Is it possible for you and Daisy to be enemies one day?" asked Leena as she straightened her back. She wasn't stupid and she knew what it took to run a company as vast as the FX International Group.

"I'd like to do whatever I wanted before. However, I've changed since Daisy and I got together. I'm very cautious about everything I'm doing now. I don't want to put her in any trouble nor ruin her reputation." A bitter smile cracked Edward's lips upon remembering how he used to live his life. It was only after he fell in love with Daisy that he decided to be stricter to himself as not to damage her.

"Then why did you behave like that in front of Daisy earlier?" Sensing how the atmosphere around them turned tense, Leena shifted the subject to what she really ought to know.

"What? Girl, did you just set me up? You seem to be getting smarter nowadays. What you saw back there was just the spark between her and me. You didn't expect that, did you? Haha! Keep learning, young lady." Edward chuckled before taking her hand. He guided her to stand up from her bench. A few seconds

r, if the woman is our friend or family member, I don't think my wife would be so narrow-minded." Daisy's sensibility was one thing that Edward admired the most with his wife. She was a woman of good behavior and judgment. She had her own ideas and knew how to stand her ground. She wasn't the type who was easily influenced by the crowd. Moreover, she didn't like wasting time on unimportant things.

"No wonder that she's never been angry with me for being close to you." Leena smiled as she thought of how different Daisy was with Patricia. She couldn't blame her best friend though. After all, there had been a lot of men who committed affairs with their wives' best friends. It was probable that Patricia was seeing her as an imaginary enemy. 'Why did she misunderstand Tom and me? Is it because pregnancy is pressuring her? Or is it because she is not confident enough? Everyone in S City knows about my relationship with Tom. Doesn't she know? I regard both of them as my family. How on earth did our relationship turn out like this?' she silently thought.

"Why did you ask? Did Patricia say something to you?" Edward frowned while thinking, 'There must be something wrong with her and Patricia. She wouldn't be this hesitant if things are going smoothly.'

MY WIFE IS AN ALOOF BEAUTY

Chapter 1598 Difference (Part Two)

"No. It's just that I felt that Patricia didn't want me to be too close to Tom." Leena bowed her head as soon as she finished speaking. Although she was so used to being close to Tom, she was willing to change herself for their happiness.

"Really? Does Tom know that?" Puzzled, Edward's eyebrows furrowed. Everybody in the upper-class circle of S City knew that they treated Leena as their little sister. How could Patricia even think of Leena that way?

"Yes. However, Tom said that Patricia is Patricia, and I am me. His feelings towards us are different. Nevertheless, I always felt that I shouldn't be bothering him anymore so I deliberately distanced myself from him. It makes me feel bad though because I knew that I hurt Tom with what I did. I can sense it whenever he looks at me." Finally, Leena was able to tell the whole story as to why she was confused.

"How about this? Go talk to Patricia first and explain yourself to her. Not every woman is as rational as Daisy. Moreover, not every woman is as generous as Belinda too. It is just natural for Patricia to behave as she does." Frankly, Edward got no clue about how to fix issues between women. Every woman had their own personality and ideas. Thus, it was really hard for him to map a resolution for this case.

"I have plans of doing that but I can't find the right time to talk to her about it." A cold wind blew and made a mess of her hair. However, even the cold breeze wasn't enough to take away the bitterness in her heart.

"Trust me. You can do it." Disputes should be resolved no matter what and Edward could only wish for the two to have a good talk. It would be nice if the two could understand each other. He let out a soft smile after a while, then asked, "Are you cold?"

"I am not cold. I wear a lot of clothes." Kevin was frantic earlier about her Drugged one night by her ex-boyfriend, a mysterious man took advantage of her in an ecstatic night filled with sex.

"It's time to go home. Leena and I are going to stay here." Kevin rushed to smooth things as soon as he noticed Leena and Justin quarreling again. He still had some work to do tonight, thus he decided to stay in the army base with his wife.

"Yes, you are going to save more time that way. But what about Leena coming back with us? It's colder here than downtown." Daisy knew that Leena was afraid of cold weathers. She was actually getting worried about Leena not being able to adapt to the temperature here.

"Don't worry. I brought her very thick clothes, so it's okay," said Kevin assuringly. He had readied everything that Leena might need as he really planned to stay in the army base.

"All right! Just take good care of Leena, okay?" Daisy didn't say more after hearing Kevin's idea. Leena would always need someone to take care of her now since she was pregnant. It was actually the reason why Daisy felt a little worried that Leena would stay in the army base.

"Okay. Be careful, guys." Kevin took Leena's little hand while bidding goodbye to the Mu family. However, his smile instantly faded as soon as he felt how cold her hand was. 'Why is her hand so cold? Isn't she dressed thick enough?' he thought.

MY WIFE IS AN ALOOF BEAUTY

"You know how good I am at driving, Kevin," retorted Daisy. Then she looked at Leena and gave the lady a motherly smile. "Leena, we'll go. Take good care of yourself."

"OK, I will. Thank you, Daisy." Leena had not planned to stay in army base tonight since Kevin had never mentioned it to her. Thus, she got a little confused earlier upon hearing what Kevin said. Nonetheless, she trusted Kevin completely, so she just smiled through it all and never said a word.

They were still bidding their casual goodbyes when Edward suddenly walked up to Leena and gave her a brotherly hug without any ado. She was still in shock when he whispered, "Just follow your heart. Don't think too much about it." After that, Edward let her go and left that place together with his family without even looking back.

All of them were left puzzled about what Edward did. They got no clue about what he said to Leena at all. Thus, Daisy was extremely curious while driving away from the army base.

"What did you just whisper to Leena?" She finally managed to ask.

"You want to know?" replied Edward as a mysterious smile appeared on his face. It looked as if he was trying to tease her.

"You don't have to tell me. I don't want to know anyway," said Daisy proudly as she turned her eyes to the road ahead.

"Woman, can't you just be patient?" Edward was utterly surprised when he suddenly turned to Daisy. He never expected her to give up that soon. 'Can't she just give me a damn?' thought Edward.

"Why? I don't have to know." On the other hand, Daisy was not a gossip girl. She just asked because she thought that what Edward did was a little strange.

"You have to know." Edward was playing with his temper again. He hated being ignored and what his wife was doing wasn't how he liked it.

"What? I said I didn't want to know. Why are you forcing me to know? It's so typical of you!" Frustratedly, Daisy shook her head. There were really some days when she couldn't figure out E

"Nonsense! Don't say that word again. That's bad luck! Put your clothes on. I don't want you to catch a cold," snapped Kevin. His face was suddenly serious and Leena couldn't help but feel intimidated with him.

"Okay... Fine. I'll wear it. Just go to work. I will take good care of myself." Forcing a smile, Leena looked up at Kevin and thought, 'Does this guy really think that I'm that vulnerable?'

A few minutes more and Kevin was already reviewing the documents on his desk very carefully. These papers were so important that he couldn't allow himself to make mistakes.

On the other hand, Leena decided to read the newspapers he handed her. However, she got bored with it after a while, thus, she stopped. She then rested her back against the sofa and just watched Kevin until she felt sleepy. She carefully lay down on the sofa and after a few minutes, she fell asleep.

Kevin burst out laughing as soon as he saw Leena sleeping. 'I know that your reading won't last long, ' he thought. He walked over to his wife and tucked her with his army coat gently. He bent down to her afterwards and gently pressed his lips against hers. After making sure that she was comfortable, Kevin walked back to his desk while thinking, 'I have to hurry up and get my work done. I badly need to take her home early.'

MY WIFE IS AN ALOOF BEAUTY

Chapter 1600 The C-Section (Part One)

The sound of the opened door and clack of heeled shoes in the foyer let the people in the house know that someone had just arrived. It was Daisy, followed by Edward and Justin. As soon as Daisy and Edward stepped into their room, she dropped her bag on the table and that made Edward look at her instantly. "Spit it out! What did you want to ask just now?" Daisy asked as she scrunched up her face in seriousness, her hands on her waist. She had a feeling that there was a secret between her husband and Leena.

Edward raised his eyebrows in mild surprise and said, "Okay, one question first. Will you mind if I'm occasionally affectionate towards Leena? For example, will you mind me hugging her or other close types of contact like that?" Edward asked because he wanted to know what Daisy thought about this, but he subconsciously believed that she wouldn't be so narrow-minded and shallow about these types of things.

Daisy raised her eyebrows and replied, "Why do you ask that? Well since you brought it up, I'd like to share my thoughts with you-- but first, tell me, will you completely ignore me when you lavishly dote on Leena?" Daisy finished. She had always thought of herself as a very generous and broad-minded person. She never bothered herself with trifling matters and was quite confident in things that were significant to her.

"No." Edward answered without a slight hesitation in his deep voice.

"Since you said no, why should I be bothered? I know what Leena is like. She is such a smart and lovely girl. I'm fond of her. Why should I be jealous because you also adore her?" Daisy answered thoughtfully, the hands on her waist dropped and her body visibly relaxed. She had been really upset inside seeing Edward and Leena hug each other when she first saw her, but she didn't know back then that Leena was like an endearing sister to Edward. When she got to know this, she felt rather ashamed of how narrow-minded she had acted.

"Really? Do you really think so?" Edward looked at her with a happy smile that graced his lips. He knew that the woman he had chosen would not be that shallow. He was right in his previous belief.

"And now it's your turn to tell me why did you suddenly ask such a question. el was suddenly replaced by this vixen.

"Oh? I didn't know that. But I'm willing to listen what crime I have committed." Edward's eyes narrowed into slits as he gazed at her. She was still green at teasing a man as she awkwardly gripped his tie with a trembling hand. However, he was quite eager to see what she would do next.

"Huh, you silly man. Do you really want to know? Beg me." Daisy stood on her tiptoes and caressed his senses with her sultry voice. Her luscious lips grazed the shell of his ear and lightly touched his earlobe. She subtly tried to arouse his sensual desires. She was definitely more open now compared to what she was like a year ago.

"Dear, you are amazing. It seems that you have learned a lot of these skills. You are stirring up the fire in me, but have you thought how could you get away once I lose my control?" Edward's brows shot up in mild excitement as he was more curious to see what she had to show next. His lustful eyes bore into her own, as if trying to light the passionate fire in them.

"I have never thought of getting away." Daisy said as her hands fumbled around his body, her fingers tracing the contours of his abdomen beneath the dress shirt he wore. An innocent smile found its way to her face. She grabbed his attention even more.

"Oh. So does it mean that you have given in to me?" The more Daisy tried to seduce him, the more Edward became vigilant. He felt that this act might be a honey trap and he should be cautious.
