

Being a wife is one thing but, being a mother is another. Adjusting to a new lifestyle was incredibly difficult for Leena but, together with her husband Kevin, she could manage. Now, they were a family of three, having a new born son as an addition to the family.

Leena, Kevin, and their son were in the bedroom, preparing themselves to end the day. She cradled their son as he placed a kiss on her cheek and a kiss on their son's forehead. The infant smiled and chuckled.

"Good evening," she beamed.

"Good evening," he responded and then looked at their son. "Good evening to you, too."

She faced her husband. "Go take a shower. I'll prepare us some food."

"That'd be great." He then took the towel on the bed and headed towards the bathroom.

When Leena saw Kevin enter the bathroom, it was only then she pulled down the top of her blouse, and started to breastfeed their son. She sighed, her cheeks slightly pink. "No matter how long it has been, I still can't get used to doing this in front of him."

She looked at her son and then the bathroom door. Her gaze shifted often on those two. She could not help but feel as if, she had not been doing the whole 'mother' thing correctly.

Leena then carried her son out of the bedroom and headed over to the dining area. She placed her son at a cradle and smiled. "Wait here for a bit, okay? Mommy's just going to cook something for daddy."

As if the baby understood, he smiled sleepily in response. Leena then walked her way to the kitchen and started to whip up a basic meal. She set the table up and placed the dishes she cooked at the center of the table. She served herself some food on her plate and then took her son from the cradle and cradled him. She sat herself down and started to eat.

Amidst eating, Leena was often interrupted by her own baby being playful in her arms. The baby would kick his legs and often pulled on his mother's clothes tightly, as if demanding for attention. She could not be angry at the baby. She looked at him with soft at him.

It was this that Kevin wanted to avoid — that painful look that she had on her face. It hurt him as well. Kevin took a step forward and placed a kiss on her cheek. "No need. It's just the gauze that got wet. I'll have it replaced tomorrow back in the army base." He then walked over to the crib, leaned over, and kissed his son's cheek softly.

Leena could sense that Kevin was extremely exhausted and figured that he might not want to eat anything now, so she wrapped her arms around his body and said, "Why don't you head to bed? It's getting late, after all. It's already 2AM."

Kevin turned his body to face Leena. "Don't we have to keep an eye on Richard?" She smiled as she saw how Kevin was worried for Richard.

"No, we don't have to. He doesn't usually wake up until 6 in the morning." When Leena and Kevin looked at their son, Richard had a smile etched on his face. Kevin couldn't help but wonder if he was having a pleasant dream.

Kevin then decided to take the offer. "Looking at how Richard's fast asleep made me want to sleep, too." "Sure. But, put some clothes on, okay? I don't want you to catch a cold." Leena smiled.

Kevin playfully rolled his eyes and just took her hand and led her to the bed. He sat down on the edge of the bed while she went inside the bathroom to take the clothes she had prepared for him.

Chapter 1642 The Reunion (Part Two)

The moment she stepped out, she already saw Kevin asleep on the bed. She sighed as she approached the bed and started to carefully dress Kevin up without disturbing his sleep.

When Leena finished dressing Kevin up, her eyes fell on the scars Kevin had on his body. It hurt her to see him like this but, when she saw Kevin asleep blissfully, tears started to fall down her cheeks slowly.

She stretched her hand and caressed his cheek. She always remembered how he said goodbye when he had to leave her for a month to attend to the army. She had missed him dearly as he could not be there during their child's birth. She smiled silently and thought, 'Look at how much you've changed, Kevin. I'm really worried about you.'

People say that women should be strong and independent and live a happy life, even without a man by their side. But, Leena needed Kevin. Even if she had a son to accompany her, she still wanted Kevin by her side.

Leena then went to the dining area and cleared the table. After that, she went back to the bedroom, took Kevin's hand and wrapped his arm around herself. She closed her eyes. 'At least, you're here now. That's all that matters.'

Morning then arrived, the sun illuminating the land, and the birds sang a song to whoever was up and awake. At the dining area, the table was set and filled with food to eat. The first one awake, Shannon hummed in satisfaction, "Looks good! Now, let me check up on Richard."

Shannon climbed up the staircase and went to the bedroom where Leena and Richard would be. Before Shannon could even open the door, she saw the door open and there stood Kevin at the other side.

Kevin's eyes widened as he was surprised. "Mom? Why are you here?"

Shannon was surprised as well. She was a light sleeper so there was supposed to be no way that she hadn't woken up at Kevin's arrival. "When did you come back?" she asked and looked at Kevin from top to bottom. "I didn't know you already returned."

"I just arrived last night. It was late and I didn't want to wake you up," Kevin responded. Shannon saw that Kevin was already in his military un s mood lightened up immediately. "It felt like a dream. I'm also so grateful for Nana." Kevin always thought he'd never have a child but, it looked like the heavens heard his wish and he was blessed with a son.

"Make sure you be nice to Leena, alright?" Daisy warned Kevin. "She deserves it. If you do anything to hurt her, I swear I'll..." At the very start, Daisy had always seen Leena as a weak girl but, as time passed, she realized that Leena was strong and capable. Daisy could not help but admire her.

"I will, I will." Kevin stifled a chuckle. "Don't worry. Besides, I feel so lucky to have her in my life."

"You can't even imagine what happened when she gave birth to Richard!" Daisy exclaimed. "She kept on calling your name over and over again!" Daisy knew how Kevin felt when he couldn't support Leena when she was giving birth as she was a soldier as well. But, Daisy knew it'd be unfair if she did not say anything to Kevin about it.

Kevin looked at Daisy, his tone dropping as he asked, "Was she helpless then?"

"Of course she was," Daisy responded. "Giving birth is a highlight in every woman's life, you know? Even if her friends were there, she needed you the most. No one could ever replace you." Daisy was a mother herself and she completely understood Leena's sentiment.

Kevin felt absolutely guilty. He then sighed, "Looks like I owe her a lot mentally and materially."

Chapter 1643 The Reunion (Part Three)

"Which is why you have to be nice to her no matter what happens!" Daisy exclaimed, as if commanding Kevin. "Got it?!"

What Kevin did next startled Daisy. He stopped in his tracks, stood firmly, saluted, and responded in a loud and firm voice, "Yes, Senior Colonel Ouyang!"

Daisy put on a furious expression and pointed at Kevin sternly. "Don't you dare make fun of me!" Daisy and Kevin looked at each other and then broke into a joyous laugh. It had been a while since they had laughed and bantered around. It was a nostalgic feeling they dearly missed.

Kevin and Leena held an extravagant party to celebrate Richard's birth and to their surprise, Richard had received plenty of luxurious gifts. Edward gave Richard a villa and Duke granted Richard ten percent of shares of the Leng Group. Rain and Tom couldn't lose to the two and sent Richard expensive gifts as well.

Leena laughed with glee. "Richard, you're such a rich boy!" She didn't expect her sworn brothers to be so generous to her son.

Justin scoffed, "Little landlord." Richard was the apple of everyone's eyes and they barely paid attention to Justin which made him displeased. Not to mention, Spencer kept pestering him. Justin finally made a break for it and ran away from him.

Justin huffed in victory as he had placed a big amount of distance between him and Spencer. Leena's eyes fell onto Justin and Spencer. Her brows arched.

"Jus... Jus..." Spencer staggered towards Justin with his arms wide open. He wanted to play with him.

Then, Justin burst in anger, "I'm not Jus! It's Justin! J-U-S-T-I-N! Stop bothering me and just go stick to your aunt!" Justin quickly ran off, not intending to play with Spencer at all.

"Jus..." Spencer tried to run after Justin but his feet got tangled and he fell to the floor. Spencer then started to bawl. Leena was about to rush over but she already saw Justin rushing in to help Spencer stand.

"Are you an idiot?" Justin asked. "How the heck did you fall?" Justin offered his hand and Spencer took it. Justin then helped Spencer to stand back up on his feet. Spencer sniffled and wiped his tears away with his sleeve. Justin let go of Spencer and took a step away ur seat, okay?"

As Richard understood, he smiled as Leena placed him at the child safety seat and buckled its seatbelt. Once Richard was secure, Kevin and Leena did the same and eventually, they started to drive and head off to the venue. It was the 60th anniversary of the FX Internation group and a grand party was held wherein elite and famous businessmen from various countries around the globe were invited to attend the party. "Nana!" Kevin called out and smiled.

"You look absolutely breathtaking!" Leena wore a long, white fitting dress which accentuated her statuesque body. She did not look like how a typical mother looked after birth. She loved to take care of her body, after all, and had occasional trips to the gym. Leena returned the smile as she tucked in a lock of her hair behind her ear. "Thank you."

She then looked at Kevin from head to toe and hummed, "You're not in a suit..." "Ah, I'm sorry. I just got back from the base and..."

"It's fine," Leena interrupted. "You don't need a suit. That military uniform fits you best."

Two years had passed and everything seemed to have changed. All except one thing, that Rain was still single. Rain stood by a French window, dejection completely written all over his face.

"Rain."

Snapping Rain out of his own trance was none other than a familiar voice. Rain turned to see Leena approaching him with two glasses of champagne.

"Ah, Leena... Hey," Rain responded in monotone.

Chapter 1644 The Reunion (Part Four)

Leena knew that Rain was depressed and this made her worry. She knew she had to try to cheer him up at least a bit. She then handed him one of the glasses she carried. He took this in hand and bowed his head slightly in thanks.

No wonder tons of people came to like Leena. She was always so thoughtful and considerate. It just warmed everyone's heart.

Rain took a sip from his glass. "So... Where's Richard? I thought he was with you." "Aah, he's playing with other kids and besides, Kevin's with him so," Leena said with a shrug. "I can take a bit of a break."

She took a sip from her glass and looked where Kevin and Richard were. She smiled at the bright and playful sight. Boys at Richard's age become naughty and playful, and since Kevin wasn't around most of the time, Leena had to entertain and tag along with Richard. She was easily exhausted every time this happened.

Leena found it amusing when the other kids were so stiff around Richard. Maybe it was because his father, Kevin, was wearing his military uniform.

As Leena continued to look at Kevin play with Richard and other children, Rain's eyes were on her. Leena wore a white dress as well and Rain could not help but compare her to a fairy. "You look stunning in that dress, Leena," Rain said with a soft smile. "Really, you do."

Leena turned to Rain, surprised at his statement. "Really?" She looked down at her own body and like all women, she sighed. She could never be satisfied with the figure she had. "I think I've gained so much weight though."

"Don't say that!" Rain exclaimed as he started to look at her from head to toe. Rain nodded firmly. "You look perfect."

Leena just looked at Rain and pouted, not buying whatever he had just said to her as she playfully hit him on his shoulder. No matter how skinny women are, they just can't be satisfied with what they are blessed with.

Leena and Rain continued to talk to each other with champagne in their hands and talked about anything under the sun. They shared laughs and smiles, enjoying each other's company.

At a far corner of the room, there stood a woman that held a wine glass. Her eyes were fixed on Rain and Leena t ather be here and keep you company." Fred Chen wasn't the type of person to enjoy these kinds of glamorous parties as he hated social interactions.

Annie glanced at him and asked, "You sure?" Annie didn't want Fred Chen to get distracted because of her.

"Yeah. It's no big deal," he responded. "I only know a few people here." As a musician, Fred Chen was rather melancholic and sentimental.

"Ah! My ball!"

A sharp voice interrupted their conversation. Annie then saw the ball rolling towards her. She raised her head and saw a young boy running towards her.

"Richard, stop running! You might trip!" Annie knew who that voice belonged to. She could never forget how the voice of the man she loved sounded. Her body started to shake, and she could feel her eyes starting to swell.

Their eyes finally met and, it was as if, time had stopped.

Rain stood still. He could never forget how Annie looked like. He always made sure to remember her delicate features.

There was never a day wherein Rain didn't imagine that he'd meet Annie again but, he didn't expect it to be something as unexpected as this.

Annie's lips start to tremble. She parted her mouth open but, no voice came out. No matter how much she wanted to say something to Rain, her voice faltered.

It had been four years. With what Annie saw earlier, Rain might have already moved on, while she still harbored the same feelings of love for him that never died.

Chapter 1645 Miss An And Mr. Xia (Part One)

Rain felt that his world stopped the moment he laid his eyes on her. Everything else on that party just seemed to melt on the background in an instant. He was suddenly deaf of the classical music that was filling the place as all he could hear was the loud sound of his heartbeats.

"Ball. Ball." It was then that a little boy's voice broke the silence that had occupied him temporarily. It was Richard, Leena and Kevin's little boy. The young boy was staring at Annie too just like Rain. His toy ball rolled towards the woman and coincidentally stopped between her feet.

"Oh. I'm sorry! Here's your ball." Annie looked away from Rain hurriedly and bent over to get the toy. She had believed that she would not lose herself again before him after so many years. However, it was easy to tell that things didn't happen the way she expected. Just the mere glimpse of the man she loved was enough to make her lost again.

On the other hand, Rain tore his gaze from her and turned to the man standing next to Annie. The man's face was not bad. He even looked gentle and well educated.

Fred Chen was also looking back at Rain too. This was the first time he had met Rain. He thought that Rain's face was beautiful rather than handsome. His features were soft and yet eye-catching. 'Rumor has it that he is the vice president of FX International Group. Could that be true?' he silently thought.

"Hey, boy. Here you are." Annie felt more depressed upon seeing Richard as she thought that the little boy was Rain's son. Nevertheless, she did not allow the sadness to show on her face as she remained smiling at the little boy.

"Thanks, Miss An." Rain finally managed to say after a long while. His voice was distant and emotionless. He was feeling too many emotions inside him that he couldn't explain.

"My pleasure, Mr. Xia," Annie replied in an equally cold voice. She did not want him to look down upon her, thus, she decided to be distant from him. An eye for an eye as they said. However, she could not feel sadder deep inside.

It broke her heart to see him again and find that he already had his own family. She even ding in the middle of the crowd alone.

"Uncle Rain, guess what I saw!" It was only a few seconds after when Justin suddenly appeared next to him. He was nine years old now and was taller than his peers. It was all thanks to his parents' excellent genes that he grew up as a very charming boy. Nevertheless, he was still obviously smarter than average and acted maturely.

"Oh? Tell me about it. What did you see?" Rain shot him a depressed glance. He still couldn't believe how Edward made an exact replica of him through Justin. Heck! He looked exactly like his father.

"I saw Auntie Annie! However, there was a man with her," said Justin in a joking tone. He was actually silently observing when Annie and Rain met. Frankly, he was expecting something exploding to happen back then. He was imagining Rain jumping on Annie and hugging her excitedly. Nothing of his expectations happened though. Everything went too quiet between the two and it was not like his Uncle Rain at all!

"Are you here to comfort me or make fun of me?" It was weird for him to discuss such an adult topic with a child. Nevertheless, Rain had never treated Justin as a simple child. Justin was like a matured man trapped inside a child's body.

"Neither. What I'd like to say is that you should have approached her regardless if there was a man with him or not." Justin let out an evil smile which made him look like Edward more.

"Hey, kid! Are you sure you are only nine years old? You sound like ninety." Rain walked to the nearest bar stand and reached for a bottle of wine. His chest was still aching, thus, he bottomed up the bottle he grabbed in just one huge gulp.

"I already told you. My brain was not designed to be understood by a mere normal like you, Uncle Rain," Justin teased and sighed. He was quite content about himself.

"Justin." Another child's voice was heard from behind them and made Justin frown. 'Oh my God! He's here too!'

"Hello, Uncle Rain." It was Spencer who was looking super cute as he ran towards them. He was taller now than how he had been two years ago. The only thing that didn't change with him was his brotherly obsession with Justin.

"Hey, Spencer. Are you here for Justin?" Hearing the child made Rain forget about being depressed. He thought that it was better for him to divert his attention, thus, he started making fun of the kids. Everyone knew that Spencer liked staying around Justin so much.

"Yes, Uncle Rain. I like to play with Justin." Children were living in a very simple world and Spencer was sure enjoying it. He was so innocent and uncomplicated when he immediately said his purpose.

"Oh, God! I shall go and hide now," sighed Justin in desperation as he thought, 'How could Spencer be as innocent as this?'

Rain kept smiling while talking with them. Although he was here, his eyes were still searching for Annie unconsciously. She was still very beautiful after so many years. Moreover, she seemed to become stronger as she matured in grace.

Probably he should take Justin's advice. He should have told her how he was feeling regardless if there was a man next to her. He would definitely have done that if he still was the former Rain. It was just that he wasn't the same man anymore. He was done with being young and reckless. He had also matured. He realized just then that loving a person didn't mean that he had to be with her. What mattered most was that Annie was happy.

Meanwhile, Daisy was extremely eye-catching tonight. She was wearing an elegant evening dress which was

He could clearly remember how they used to embrace that night and how it felt to make love to her. However, nothing was left of that anymore. It was just like a dream.

"Annie, are you hiding something from me?" asked Fred while they were driving away from the party. It was hard not to notice how strange Annie had become since they encountered the vice president of the FX International Group.

"No. Why do you ask that?" Annie took a deep breath to calm herself down. She smiled to force herself to look okay as she didn't want him to see that something was wrong with her.

"Let me make a guess. Is FX International Group's vice president their father?" Annie's children resembled the man so much and Fred was not a fool to miss that fact.

"I'd prefer not to discuss this topic for now." Annie frowned. Fred had been helping her with her kids for a long time and she was grateful for it. However, it didn't mean that she was willing to give up her privacy. She disliked it when others tried to spy on her. Moreover, she wasn't happy with how Fred interrupted her earlier. They were never a couple but his behavior and words were misleading. That was just not right.

"Okay! I won't force you. We'll leave tomorrow anyway." Fred Chen smiled gently. Frankly, he wasn't even looking at Rain as a rival in love. Annie and Rain simply should have not been apart for so many years if they truly loved each other.

Chapter 1647 Miss An And Mr. Xia (Part Three)

Their car drove to the hotel where they were staying and neither Annie nor Fred noticed the car that was following them discreetly. That car did not turn back and drive away until the man in the car confirmed their hotel.

"Mr. Mu," called Luke as he quickly walked across the party towards Edward.

"How was it? Did you locate their hotel?" Edward asked while clasping his hands behind his back. The stance made him look both professional and smart.

"Yes. It's Kate Hotel. What a coincidence." Luke followed the two after they left the party as what Edward ordered. It turned out that Annie and Fred chose the most familiar hotel in the city.

"That's great. Where is Rain? Is he still upstairs?" Edward smiled guilefully as he thought, 'Screw it, Mrs. Chen. I will be helping Rain this time no matter what.

Say goodbye to being a stranger because you will be family.' "Yes," Luke answered in a low voice. He was clueless about Edward's plan. Nevertheless, he would never dare question this man's decisions since he had proven him to be a wise man.

"Bring him to Kate Hotel. To be specific, drag him to Annie's room." Kate Hotel was one of Edward's properties. It would be just a piece of cake to execute what was in his mind.

"What? Are you sure? Isn't it a bit inappropriate?" Luke did not understand Edward's intention.

"Just do it. I'll take the responsibility," said Edward nonchalantly. He was a decisive and powerful man. Thus, he would not allow any question towards his decision.

"Yes. I'll do it right away," said Luke with a nod. To be honest, he didn't like Edward's idea but he would not defy his order either.

"Wait. Remember this. Be carefully and leave no trace." Edward did not believe that Fred Chen and Annie were truly husband and wife. Therefore, he was sure that the two would not share the same room. He easily sensed the coldness between the two just by hearing them talk. They were too distant to be a real couple.

"Copy that," Luke promised and then left to carry out Edward's order. It was truly a challenge. Edward must have trusted him a lot to leave this hard task to him.

"I won't allow my friend to be teased, even though she is a female," commented Edward. Annie must know that there was a high possibility to meet Rain when she decided to attend the party held by FX International Group. He found it odd that Annie decided to come in with another man. Had she even thought of Rain? He had been waiting for her for four years. How could she even show-off on his face?

"Great! As expected! Would you mind telling us a bit?" Duke smirked while looking at Edward. Edward would always be the first to protect his family and friends.

"Two words." A cunning smile cracked Edwards lips while looking at his friends.

"What?" Tom and Duke asked in chorus.

"A secret." Edward left immediately when he finished speaking, leaving the two looking at each other cluelessly.

"What did he mean?" Duke said puzzledly with furrowed eyebrows.

"A secret, he said." Tom was also ready to leave. Edward kept it a secret because he would not tell them. That was simple to understand. Thus, he thought, 'Since when did Duke become this mentally slow? Probably since Spencer was born. But then, people say that it is the mother who is mentally affected after giving birth. How is it even possible for Duke to be this blunt when it is supposed to be Belinda?!'

Chapter 1648 Misunderstandings (Part One)

At Kate Hotel

Just as Annie entered the bathroom and shut the door, her room door was opened from the outside and a few people sneaked in. They put someone on the bed and covered him with her quilt before leaving the room. The whole stealthy process lasted no more than a minute.

Outside the room, by the door, Luke flashed a cunning smile, holding a camera in his hand. Not too long ago, he had convinced a bellman to put the camera in the room with the excuse of giving Annie a bottle of wine as a present from the hotel. That way he could know when she would enter the bathroom and take this opportunity to send Rain in. After they put Rain in the room, he took the camera out with him. The plan seemed perfect. The first half was executed perfectly. Now all they needed to do was to wait for the rest to unfold.

Meanwhile, Annie immersed herself in the warm water. She didn't hear anything from outside the bathroom as the sound of flowing water drowned out any other noise. Besides, she was still dwelling on the encounter with Rain at the party earlier.

Her heart felt like it were being gripped tightly by an invisible hand when she remembered that Rain had called her Miss An in an indifferent way.

She had always thought of Rain as a playboy without any plans of getting married. To her dismay, it turned out that he not only got married, but now had an adorable son.

Before going to the party, she had hoped that Rain would still be single. She was going to test the waters and see if they could have a chance to get back together. She loved Rain and was willing to work out their differences and perhaps change his mind, so they could get married in the future. But with what she had seen this evening, her plan almost made her look like a fool and she fel ream.

Annie bit her lower lip and pondered for a while. Then she placed the glass on the nightstand and reached out to help him sit. However, when she touched his body, she withdrew her hands at once as if she had touched something with electrical current.

'Rain, what should I do? I can't just leave you here alone, and I can't sleep with you either. You are really causing a big problem for me here, ' she thought to herself.

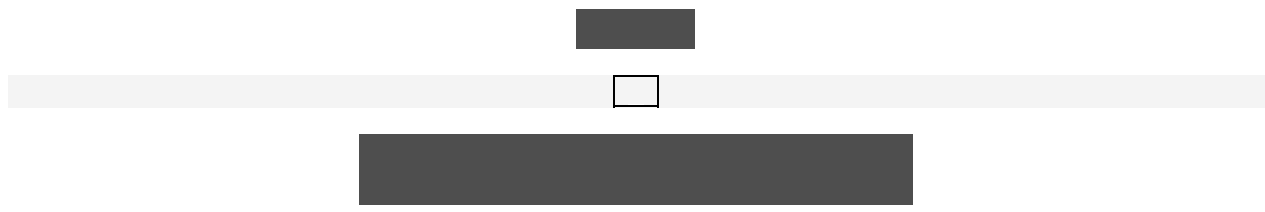

She went to the couch and sat there, thinking about their past and looking at him. She really regretted having left four years ago. But there was no time machine that would take her back to undo what she had done.

She held her knees and stared at the man on the bed who was sound asleep. How she wished she could hug and kiss him. But she was a virtuous woman and would not sleep with someone else's husband. She kept telling herself that he had a beautiful wife and a wonderful son. No matter how much she loved him, she couldn't be the homewrecker.

She flashed a bitter smile and mocked herself. Her heart was aching as if someone were ripping it apart, the pain reaching the depths of her soul. She took out her phone and the screen lit up.

MY WIFE IS AN ALOOF BEAUTY

Chapter 1649 Misunderstandings (Part Two)

The screen showed a picture of a boy and a girl. They quite looked like each other, meaning that they could possibly be twins. Annie touched the screen and said in a light voice, "My babies, I'm really sorry. I can't bring your daddy home to you."

She stared at the picture on the phone until she fell asleep on the couch.

When Rain woke up, he felt parched and the pounding pain in his head was killing him. He didn't open his eyes, but rubbed his brow to alleviate the pain. After he felt better, he opened his eyes and got the shock of his life.

He threw back the quilt and jumped off the bed. 'Where the hell am I? Did my friends just throw me in a hotel room instead of sending me home? What fucking fake friends I have! I'm gonna get those sons of bitches next time!' he cursed in his mind.

He looked around and his eyes widened when he saw a woman sleeping on the couch. He looked closer and easily recognized who it was. Annie! What was she doing here? And why were they in the same room?

He fixed his eyes on her face and didn't dare to move. He was afraid that this was just a dream, and Annie would disappear once he woke up. He wanted to stay in this moment a bit longer.

She didn't seem to be sleeping well as her brow was furrowed. The phone in her hand was about to drop. He walked to her quietly and caught the phone as it was about to fall to the carpeted floor.

He knew it was not right to invade her privacy, but his curiosity was killing him. He turned on the phone and it felt like his heart was pierced when he saw the twins on the screen. 'She has a son and a daughter, and they look like two or three years old. It means that she got married and got pregnant after she left me. Ha-ha! I am such a fool!' he mocked himself.

Eventually she stormed off after she learned that he had betrayed her again. But life brought her back to him a few years later, to his astonishment.

"You have a beautiful wife and an adorable son." Annie tried her best to sound natural, but her shaking voice betrayed her.

"What? What are you talking about? I have a wife and a son?" Rain reacted in disbelief, his jaw slack. He was totally confused. After a while, he realized that Annie must have thought that Richard was his son. But who did she think his wife was? And why was she thinking like that?

"Uh? Did I say something wrong?" Annie asked in reply, seeing the bewildered look on his face.

"Never mind." Rain shook his head. He planned to explain it, but at the thought of Annie's husband and children, he decided not. What was the use?

They remained silent for a long time. Rain bid her goodbye as he couldn't bear the silence anymore. Yes, he still loved her. But so what? She was married, and he could do nothing about it.

Annie watched his receding figure. She wanted to stop him, but didn't. If she stopped him, what would she tell him? She didn't know.

Rain didn't leave the hotel. He had his own suite just a few floors up, so he headed straight to it. As soon as he got in, he threw himself onto the soft bed burying his face into the pillow.

Chapter 1650 Misunderstandings (Part Three)

There was nothing he could do to solve the problem now. He didn't want to destroy her family, and decided to set her free.

When Annie was still sound sleep, her phone rang. She cursed silently and reached out to answer it.

"Hello." Her eyes were still puffy and her voice was husky.

"Mommy, it's me, Joyce. When will you be back? Huey and I missed you so much." A child's voice came from the other end of the line, which made Annie sober up immediately.

"Joyce baby, mommy missed you too. Have you been a good girl while I am away?" Annie asked in a soft voice.

"Yes, I have. But Huey hasn't. He forbade me from playing with him," Joyce complained. Annie could imagine that Joyce was now pouting her lips.

"Oh, really? And what is your brother doing now?" Annie asked. Her heart melted when she heard her own daughter's voice.

"He's playing with his remote control car. He said that I'm a girl and he doesn't play with girls," Joyce grumbled.

"Ha! Really? Honey, put your brother on the phone, okay? Let mommy teach him a lesson." Annie knew her son must be next to her daughter and playing with his new favorite, a remote controlled car. The reason he didn't make any sound was that he was too focused on his toy to say anything.

"Huey, mommy wants to talk to you." The girl turned to her brother and reached out her hand to give him the phone.

Huey put the remote control down and took the phone with resignation. "Hello, Mommy." His voice was sort of cool.

"Huey, Joyce said you didn't want to play with her. Is that true?" Annie asked in a soft voice.

"She told you that? What a leaf blower." Huey cast a reproachful glance at his sister. He looked much more matu ened in the hallway. She was applying lotion to her face. After that, she stood and opened the door for Fred.

"Are you ready? Our flight is in the afternoon. We still have time to have breakfast and stroll around the city. I heard there are many delicious things to try here, like snacks, street food and many others." Fred looked at the woman in front of him with eyes full of affection. He had a thing for her, but she was too insensitive to realize it. Besides, it showed on her face that her heart belonged to someone else.

"Yeah, sure, why not?" Annie didn't expect Fred to have the same idea as her, so she was thrilled when she found out that their minds worked the same.

"Let's go." Fred had doubted that Rain had just left Annie's room. But on seeing her reaction, Fred knew he was wrong.

Annie was not familiar with S City, nor was she a complete stranger. She had been here before. But the city had changed a lot during these past few years, and it looked different from how she remembered it. She believed that she would never forget this city, because the man she loved the most was from here and lived here.
