

My Wife is a beautiful Officer Chapter 175 - Chapter 175: Army Dagger No. 65

Chapter 175: Chapter 175: Army Dagger No. 65

Justin ignored Leena's sarcasm, and then carefully untied the plain bandaging on Daisy's arm. When he saw how the wound looked inside, he realized that the injury had been way more serious than he initially thought it was. He said, "Mommy, let's go inside. I'll disinfect your wound first." Justin was more organized, and was also calmer than an adult was. Although he worried about his mom very much, he showed no fear when he saw her deep wound.

The rest of the people followed Justin and walked past Luke like he didn't even exist. Luke shook his head speechlessly, and wondered whether the people were blind or not. Even Rain didn't notice that Luke was holding a woman in his arms. It had tired Luke to hold an adult for such a long time!

When he finally noticed that Luke was holding a woman in his arms, Rain asked, "Luke, who is that?"

"Someone you know." Luke glanced at Rain and left Annie to him, and then Luke turned around and walked towards the direction Daisy went.

"Hey! Wait a minute! I don't know her!" Rain took the unconscious woman in his arms. He didn't recognize Annie at first, because her face had been covered by her long hair.

But when he managed to see her face, Rain's heart began to thump. Indeed, it was Annie! Although he hadn't seen her for a while, he still remembered her face very clearly. He thought that it was strange for Annie to be here, and wondered if she had anything to do with Daisy's injury. Rain frowned when he sensed the strong smell of alcohol coming from Annie. It was obvious that she was unconscious because she was thoroughly drunk.

Inside the room, Justin sat besides Daisy and carefully wiped off the blood around her wound. No one dared to make a sound, because they didn't want to disturb Justin, and Edward was so nervous that there were even beads of perspiration dripping off his forehead and falling to the ground.

"Mommy, judging from the looks of the wound, I think you were hurt by an Army Dagger No. 65. The dagger is 25.8 cm in total length, it's blade is made of carbon steel, with 15.2 cm in length, 0.4 cm in thickness, and 2 cm in width. It's shiny, and extremely sharp after plating, which makes it the perfect weapon for stabbing. I think you might have been scratched by it while you were fighting the bad guy."

Everyone was shocked by Justin's reasonable guess and the terminology that he used. He discovered all of these details just by simply taking a look at the wound? It seemed unreal to everyone. They began to wonder what would be Justin's next move.

"Mommy, I'll try to stop the bleeding first, and it seems that you need a couple of stitches. You should let the doctor deal with your wound later." Justin took the medical kit on the table, and skillfully started to disinfect the wound with medicinal alcohol before wrapping it with cotton bandaging. Justin stayed calm and organized during the whole process, without showing a single trace of panic.

Daisy said, "Justin, you missed some key points earlier. The army dagger 65 has another advantage: it makes almost no sound when you wave it, also its handle is designed to perfectly fit the physiological structure of the user's palm. That dagger is a treasure in itself." She gently stroke Justin's face. Daisy had raised him up all by herself, spending a lot of time in the army with him. It was not uncommon for Justin to know these things, because they had been taught army classes.

Okay, I get it now. But mom, why would someone want to hurt you with it?" Justin asked Daisy doubtfully. Although the wound seemed to be pretty bad, he knew that Daisy would be able to recover from it soon enough.

"Ah! I forgot that Annie is still with Luke!" Daisy was worried about her. She felt like she had a short-time memory today, it's unusual because she normally didn't forget things quickly.

"Annie is your friend?" frowned Edward.

"No, not really. Today is the third time that I've met her." Daisy had to make sure that Annie was fine. She felt relieved when she saw Annie lying in Rain's arms.

As he gently put Annie down on the sofa, Rain asked, "Daisy, how did you get hurt? Did you injure yourself when you were trying to save Annie?"

"No, I ran into some gangsters when I was on my way to pick her up. I wasn't careful enough." Edward smiled at her, and said, "Dear, so you went out to pick Annie up? How and when did you get to know each other?" Edward glanced at Annie and frowned. Daisy explained to Edward, "I almost hit her on the street several days ago, so I gave her my name card. At the club, she didn't know who to call, and she thought of me."

"Daisy, thank you for bring Annie back. We were looking for her these past couple of days." Rain had always held a good impression towards Daisy, and after this, he respected her even more.

"Why were you looking for her?" asked Daisy. She was doubtful, as she didn't know that the last task that Edward had assigned to Luke was to find out where Annie was.

"Emm... Annie had to represent the C Financial Group and to conduct some business meetings with FX International, but when Luke went to the airport to pick her up, there was no sign of her." Edward told Daisy what had happened, but he couldn't stop looking outside impatiently, waiting for the doctor to arrive.

"Oh! Why didn't you tell me about this when you assigned the task to Luke?" Daisy frowned; she was not happy with the fact that Edward was still trying to hide things from her.

Chapter 176: Chapter 176: Stop Showing Off Your White Teeth

"You're always tied up everyday, and I don't want to interrupt your work. Besides, it's nothing serious. Are you angry with me?" While he was talking to Daisy, Edward fixed his eyes on her injured arm. Justin had done a great job with the bandage, and the blood had quickly stopped oozing out of the wound.

He cast a deep look at Justin, who was bothered by Leena, and felt quite grateful to him. Justin had grown to be pretty outstanding, and that was all thanks to Daisy, who was an excellent mother. He wasn't like the other boys of his age, unreasonable and mischievous.

Daisy then remembered Edward furiously yelling at her, and while she slightly became upset, she said, "No, I'm not. I'm not you..."

Huh! So you're saying now that I'm angry?" Edward stroked her nose, and then affectionately looked at her upset face.

"Are you sure you aren't angry? You shouted pretty loud; the others might think that I may be terminally ill." Daisy unsatisfactorily rolled her eyes, an act that she seldom did, but recently she seemed to be doing it quite often. What had happened to all of her poise and seriousness?

"Daisy, that's just how Edward is; you know he often makes a mountain out of a lousy mole hill. You'll get used to it," said Duke. He was relieved when he saw Daisy's arm getting wrapped up, and when his mood lightened, he began to make fun of Edward.

"Duke's right. Daisy, don't be afraid of him. Edward is just a paper tiger. His bark is worse than his bite." Rain also returned to his usual self, and as he laughed about it, Annie suddenly mumbled in his arms.

Edward mischievously squinted his eyes, and said, "Don't you have to take Annie home? If you're free, you should go and straighten things out with the entertainment company tomorrow." He might have given Rain a break if he had just remained silent, but Rain had to continue to make fun of him. Edward had to fight back, because, after all, Daisy had been hurt saving Rain's Annie.

"Oh, no! Edward, aren't you supposed to deal with that? Besides, I'm not familiar with the company's beauties." Rain regretted that he had joked about Edward, and that his big mouth had invited trouble.

"So you're saying that I'm familiar with them?" Edward looked at Rain indignantly; he was basically a fix in all of these women's lives, but he was now saying that he didn't know them. It was also known that Rain's bad boy look had captured a few of the starlets' hearts.

You're familiar with them. I remember when you used to go out with a different woman every day, and I remember that some of them are starlets." 'Humph! I'm dead no matter what, but I will drag you down with me, ' complained Rain in mind. He didn't think that Daisy could take the news well without being mad at Edward.

Silly Rain, maybe you think that you're still too free with the entertainment company on your hand; I think you should also draft the bidding plan for the YG Estate." He was Edward, and only he had the privilege to make fun of the others, not the other way around.

"Argh! Come on, seriously? If I do all of this work, then what will you do?" Rain was shocked, because he had never seen this coming. Had he just dug his own grave? Maybe he was set up by Edward, as he initially thought.

As you can see, Daisy is injured. And that means that I'll stay at home to take care of her." Edward smirked at him. It was classic for Rain to choose the wrong moment, and say the wrong thing.

"..." Rain was completely speechless, and regretfully stroked his forehead. He could only sigh, and languish. 'God, just kill me already! My life is too miserable to be even true!' protested Rain in his mind.

"Huh, Rain, you could have ended up less miserable if you had just shut your mouth, " said Belinda, and while she gestured to Annie, she quipped, "And by the way, where did you steal such a beautiful girl?"

"I didn't steal her, okay? I'm not as shameless as your husband." Rain curled his lips and formed an evil smile. He knew what he could use to verbally fight back, because he had overheard how Belinda and Duke got married at the game they just played.

"Are you calling me shameless?" Duke glanced at him, and scanned him from top to bottom. His chilly eyes seemed to freeze Rain in place.

"Wow! You adapted to your husband role pretty quickly. Has my harmless joke harmed you, huh, Husband Duke? Edward, you do agree with me, huh?" He couldn't endure Duke's cold stare alone, and he needed Edward's backup. Or else he might have got killed by Duke's harsh stare.

"Mr. Mu, Mr. Tom Qin is here, " said Luke. The boisterous scene fell into silence by Luke's report. All of them had fixed their eyes on the pleasant and gentle young man behind him.

Hi, everybody! Long time no see! I see you're all doing well without me; that's good." Tom grinned gorgeously. He looked like a learned and cultivated man.

"Stop showing off your white teeth, and come here and check on Daisy, she's injured. And by the way, when did you come back from overseas?" Edward speechlessly rolled his eyes. Why did Tom come here in person? Wasn't he staying abroad and studying new subjects?

"Just now. I had just put my luggage down, when Mrs. Wu called, and I decided to come over. What, you don't want me here? Should I just go home and get you another doctor?" Tom didn't mind Edward's anger at all; he was still that graceful gentleman.

"... Edward, your nemesis is here, and there will be a lot more drama in the coming days. Rain smiled mischievously again, because he didn't have to endure Duke's cold stare any longer.

All of the crowd's cast a disdainful look at Rain, because he was gloating too much, and too obviously.

You must be Daisy. My name is Tom Qin, and it's a pleasure to meet you! Tom glance around and then fixed his eyes on Daisy, the one that needed his treatment, and then walk over to her.

Daisy smiled apologetically, and said Hello, I'm Daisy, and thank you so much for coming over here! I'm really sorry for having to trouble you! Tom was another type of handsome man, completely different from Edward and the others. He made people feel comfortable, and happy, when they saw him.

Chapter 177: Chapter 177: Tom And Jerry

"Aha! Tom, why do you always have sensible good manners?" Leena's joy was immense, and Tom glanced at her, spoiling her even more.

"Daisy, that's all right. Let me have a look at your wound first!" Tom bent over and skillfully undid the gauze; he frowned the moment he saw the wound.

"The wound is a little bit too deep, and it need stitching. Do you want the local anesthesia? It may cause some adverse reactions, but you won't feel any pain." Tom raised his head and stared at Daisy, and waited for her to answer.

"No anaesthesia, thanks. Just close the wound." Daisy was aware of the risks caused by the local anaesthesia, and because the wound wasn't that serious, she had to have only a few stitches done. She could handle the pain easily enough, because she had survived even more painful encounters over the years, both physical, and mental.

"Jerry, can't you give her the anaesthesia without the risks? *In the animated series "Tom and Jerry", one of the main characters is a mouse named Jerry. Edward calls Tom Qin Jerry. It's painful without any!" said Edward. When he heard that she didn't need the local anaesthesia, he began to feel nervous. His heart throbbed, as if he were the one who had to be stitched instead.

"Aha! Jerry... this name sounds very domineering, but for a gentle and elegant person like you, this kind of name just sounds funny and ridiculous." Belinda couldn't help but chuckle when she heard the nickname. Duke then pinched Belinda's wrist, and said,

"Stop laughing, or he'll get mad at you!" Tom wasn't a weak person, and neither was he easy to be bullied. It was a disaster when he got mad, hence the nickname.

"You thought I was omnipotent?" Tom glanced at Belinda and slightly nodded his head, a gesture that could be regarded as a greeting. He then turned around, and roared at Edward, "Ignore him and let's get started!" Daisy stared at Edward, and because she had no opinion on the matter, she didn't know why Edward was so nervous.

"Daisy, there will be a bit of pain, but I'm sure you'll manage to get through it." Tom disinfected the wound again, and then he picked the sterilized needle and sewed her wound.

When Edward watched the needle in Tom's hand pass through Daisy's skin, he felt as if his heart had shattered into thousands of pieces. He grasped Daisy's arm firmly, and endured the pain together with her.

Daisy's forehead was covered with a thin layer of sweat because of the pain, and she had bitten her cherry pink lips without shedding a tear, just firmly gripping Edward's big and powerful hand. His heart ached to see her suffer like that.

Edward wiped Daisy's sweat, and in a low voice scolded Tom, "Could you be a little more gentle with the sowing? Can't you see that her face is pale because of the pain?"

"You don't say? Don't disturb me from my work!" Tom didn't care about his whining for a second, and instead concentrated even more on sewing Daisy's wound, and after he finished, he gave Edward a disdainful look, who was even more nervous and uneasy than the injured lady was. He continued to apply some medicine to her wound, and also wrapped it in a new gauze. After all of these things had been done, he sighed, relieved of his duty.

While he was packing his things, he said, "Daisy, keep the gauze away from water for a while. I will also give you some anti-inflammatory drugs." The way he said this showed his gentle and elegant personality.

"Yes, doctor Qin, thank you!" With a pale look on her face, Daisy thanked him, and gently smiled.

"Don't be so formal, just call me Tom." His smile was like a breath of fresh air, which made people involuntarily want to indulge in. He knew something about Daisy, and although he was in a foreign country, he had heard someone mentioning something about her. He came to treat her wound out of curiosity, because he thought that she was mysterious. It was unexpected for him to find out that she was completely different from what he had thought her to be.

"Well, get out now!" Edward coldly gave Tom a fierce stare, but the man never forgot to show his invincible smile anywhere.

He sneered, "I definitely know you son of a bitch will kick down the ladder once you have got what you want. You don't need to drive me away, and I will leave immediately. Considering I have just come back from the abroad, I have to sort out my luggage. Well, Daisy, see you next time."

There was some still noticeable fatigue on Tom's face, which was probably because of the jet lag.

"Let's go. Daisy, please have a good rest!" Duke pulled up Belinda, with a little warmth showing on his cold, stern face.

"Daisy, I will take Annie back first, and let her thank you again some other day." Rain lifted Annie to his chest, and smiled at Daisy thankfully, showing his noble temperament.

"What's up with you? Are you all leaving? Have you planned to despise me collectively? Why are you only saying goodbye to her, but not me?" Edward was very depressed. What did they mean with this? 'I'm the head of the family. Why on earth are they ignoring me? Oh, damn it! I don't even care...' thought Edward. Edward's words caused a lot of hisses to be heard. They still ignored him, and soon left the house waving their hands at them.

"Bro, please wait for me!" Leena wasn't the least calm, and without any hesitation, she quickly ran out of the house, forgetting even to say goodbye to Daisy. What had happened to Duke? He left without bringing her, meaning that he had forgotten his little sister as soon as he had a wife.

Daisy looked around the quiet living room, feeling uneasy. Hadn't all of them left too fast? And all of a sudden?

On the other hand, Edward didn't have too many feelings or thoughts on them, because he had been already familiar with them.

Well, now that all people are gone, comemy dear wife, and let's deal with our own business! Edward sluggishly played of some of her lock of hair, and playfully stared at Daisy.

What business have to be dealt with? I'm confused. Do we contradict on anything? Daisy suspiciously frowned, and didn't reply to his words for the moment.

Are you kidding me? Someone given me absolute assurance. Do you need me to find a witness for you? Edward laughed even more gracefully. And while playfully stared at Daisy, the coldness of his eyes slowly began to seep into his stare.

Uh!.. So were is Justin going? Daisy deliberately answered Edward with another question, and tried to guess whether he was angry or not. What trick did he want to play on her?

Please, don't bring Justin in this. He's upstairs, taking a shower to avoid Leena's continuous Harrasment. So now you could figure out the reason why Leena was so quiet just now.

Now, please don't try to avoid my question again. Edward clasped his hand together, it was clear that he was eager to hear her explanation.

Chapter 178: Chapter 178: You Lured Me

"Emm... .. I need to take a shower." Daisy tried to get away with the situation as soon as possible, but her healthy arm was grabbed by Edward.

Well? What do you have to say now?" Edward could vividly remember the fear of losing her when he had seen her injured, and he tried to hide his painful feelings by talking with the others earlier.

"Fine. Darling, I admit that it's all my fault, and I swear that I will be more careful next time. Forgive me, please!" It was the first time that Daisy had played coquetry with him, and her body was also clinging to him. Edward was stunned by her charming smile, and soft voice. She was very different from the time that they first met, and her aloofness had been replaced by affection.

Edward also didn't believe that Daisy could act so coquettish, and he thought that something must be wrong. Did she have a fever? When he gently touched her forehead, he felt that her temperature was normal. If it wasn't a fever, then what had caused her to act so abnormally? In the end, he didn't care, because he loved her coquetry.

Edward then showed his love in actions. He planted a wild and deep kiss on her delicate pink lips, and soon turned to suck on them. Edward only released Daisy when both of them had started to pant.

Edward looked at her affectionately, and said, "Dear, you lured me."

"I have a question for you." Daisy gently stroked his face, and thought that he was too handsome to be real.

"What's the question?" Edward held her hands tightly, and led her upstairs.

"Are you still angry with me now?" asked Daisy. She smiled, and she was very happy that her moves could affect his mood, because that meant that he began to care for her. Falling in love with her should be achievable.

"Even my aloof wife started to play coquetry to please me. I would be such a bad husband, if I'm still angry with you." Edward smiled, and he was happy to find out that Daisy was willing to change for him. This gave him a great sense of achievement.

"I was not playing coquetry!" Daisy threw his big hands off her and headed to the bedroom, because his frankness had made her feel shy. She admitted that she had been playing coquetry with him earlier in order to appease his anger, but she just wanted to see how much weight she had in his heart. She was now feeling embarrassed by his words.

Haha... you're really cute!" Edward found this side of her interesting, and he continued to tease her.

Daisy blushed, and walked straight to the bathroom.

"What are you doing? Dear?" Edward frowned. "Taking a shower. Isn't it obvious?" Daisy rolled her eyes, because she thought that the question was dumb.

"I knew that, but the doctor said that your wound need to avoid any contact with water." Edward didn't pay any attention to what the doctor was saying before, but this time it was about Daisy.

"Never mind about it, I'll be extra careful. It's a long day, and I need a shower, " replied Daisy. That kind of small injury wouldn't bother her at all.

"You can take a shower, but I have to be there to help you, " said Edward. He smiled wickedly, but this time, Daisy decided to ignore his flirting, and quickly shut the door before he had a chance to come in. If she had let him in, he would definitely 'helped' her with a lot of things other than the shower.

"Dear, please open the door! You can't judge me just by your evil thought. I just want to help..." said Edward innocently.

"No way, I won't fall for it this time!" Daisy smiled, because he was trying hard to fool her.

You're the one who lured me in the first place. Its only been a while, and I suppose you still remember that. Edward leaned on the wall when he realized he couldn't get in, and decided to wait for her.

Edward, could you stop please? I need to take a shower now. Daisy began to regret about the coquetry she had played with him, because Edward wouldn't let it go anymore.

Edward replied, you can start at any time you like. I can't see you any way, and then headed to the balcony.

All that he could see was the endless starry night. Life is short, and Edward felt pretty lucky the he had gotten Daisy back after what they have been through. What he did know was that he loved to be in her company all the time.

Chapter 179: Chapter 179: Reward

The morning breeze gently swept over Daisy's face. The soothing breath of wind had made her feel very delighted, and she gazed at Edward, who was driving the car attentively, and couldn't help but display a soft smile; she felt like she was the happiest woman in the world.

"Why are you looking at me? Is there something dirty on my face?" asked Edward. When Edward turned his head and looked at Daisy, he met with her eyes, and saw that they had been already focused on him.

"Yes, there is, " she replied. Daisy teased him with a joyful expression, and she found that it felt good to be cared and loved by someone. With a charming smile, Edward raised his eyebrows, and said, "Do you really think I believe you?" He knew that he was not that kind of sloppy man, and he was proud of maintaining his good looks perfect at any time.

"You don't have to drop me off to work, it's only a small flesh wound; I can drive the car by myself. It's not a big deal, so don't make a big fuss about it. Did you forget that I'm a soldier in the army?" said Daisy. But her heart betrayed her words. She was very excited when Edward insisted on personally taking her to work, because she really enjoyed being with him. She cherished the beautiful moments when she raised her head, and she could see his handsome face.

"Oh? Really? I remember someone saying the exact same thing when she went out yesterday night, but she got back with a wound. Do you really think that I'll listen to your words now?" said Edward. He was upset because Daisy had brought up the topic.

"It was only an accident, because I was too confident with myself, otherwise, they couldn't have gotten the slightest chance to hurt me. Anyway, things like that don't just happen everyday, " replied Daisy. It had been only a mishap, but now she was looked down upon by Edward.

"That's hard to say. I'd better be more cautious and send you there by myself." Edward didn't want to experience the awful, frightening feelings that he had experienced yesterday. He was very distraught, and if this were to ever happen again, he would be beyond heartbroken. Thinking of this, Edward was surprised that he would have such feelings for Daisy. His heart ached because of Daisy's wound, and he wondered if this indicated that he was actually caring more about Daisy now...

Daisy noticed Edward's sad look in his eyes, and while she frowned, she asked, "What's wrong?"

"Oh! It's nothing... Look, we've arrived!" Edward stopped the car, and then replied to her with an assuring smile.

"Okay. You don't have to pick me up after work, because Mark will drive me back. I want him to learn the way to your house, " said Daisy. In case there ever was an emergency, Daisy thought that it would be very useful to let Mark know where she lived. As her accompanying officer, he would know where to find her, if anything happened.

"Okay, I see. Be careful how you handle your wound! Don't make it split!" said Edward, while taking a glance at her wounded arm, and frowning, concerned.

"Don't worry, I'll be extra careful. Go back to work now!" replied Daisy, with a smile on her face. She then pushed the car's door open, and when she was just about to get out of it, her wrist was suddenly gripped by Edward, who was looking at her with grievance.

"What's the matter? Did you forget about something?" asked Daisy, still confused by his move.

"Don't I get a reward? Were you going to just leave off like that?" said Edward, with a cunning smile flashing in his eyes.

"Reward? What reward?" asked Daisy, flabbergasted. It seemed that she didn't understand what Edward was trying to say to her.

"What do you think? Shouldn't you give me a kiss to thank me for driving you here?" It was really difficult to make Edward be less brazen, but Daisy didn't expect that he would stop at nothing to get what he wanted. It surprised her that he would ask for a reward for such trifling little thing.

"Emm... Did you plan it? Did you drive me to work with that purpose from the beginning?" said Daisy, examining him dubiously, while thinking about how to get away with it.

Hearing Daisy's words, Edward pursed his lips, and thought 'What is she thinking? I'm not that shameless as she thinks I am. I'm only asking for a kiss. Oh! She wronged me so much!'

Daisy, you're trying to spoil all the romance..." Edward became a little angry, and he released her hand and looked away with a downcast expression. 'Why am I always the one who has to beg shamelessly to her? Couldn't she be more tender and romantic to me, and satisfy my wish this one time?'

A gentle kiss then suddenly flickered over his handsome face like a feather. Before Edward could even realize it, Daisy had already gotten out the car, and had started to run towards the military base. She turned her head at Edward, and showed him a cunning smile.

Edward touched the spot where she had kissed him, and shook his head. While smiling, he thought, 'When did Daisy become so naughty and sly? Oh, she surprised me this time!'

Daisy was in a good mood today, and when she passed through the gate of the base, she showed a lovely smile to the soldiers that were on duty. Their jaws almost dropped when they saw her joyful look, and while they stared at each other with confusion, they wondered what had made the aloof colonel look so gentle and soft today.

Kevin frowned and looked at Daisy with concern, and asked, "Daisy, what happened to your hand?" As soon as she had passed through the gate, Kevin showed up. He cried out when he noticed Daisy's wound, and for the moment he was totally unaware of his manner in public.

Oh! It's not a big deal, it's only a flesh wound with a couple of stitches. Don't worry it will heal soon enough, and I think it won't affect the military exercises that we have to do a couple of days, said Daisy with a gentle smile on her face. She walked with Kevin towards the office building, and their intimacy made someone's heart sink.

Edward had been looking at them the whole time, and he hit the driving wheel with fury. His delighted mood has been completely spoiled by Kevin's appearance. He thought, why did I forget the fact tha Kevin work with Daisy? Hmmm.. It seems that I have to win her heart as soon as possible. I can't bear the thought of him getting Daisy, just because he has the advantage of a favored position.

He had thought to wait in the parking lot for a while, and looked at her until she entered the office building. He didn't expect to see them being so close together, and although he watched them from a distance, he felt Kevin's enthusiastic stare on Daisy. It made him feel jealous, and it made him have the urge to fight Kevin.

He glanced deeply at them until they disappeared inside the building, and then turned the key. The car started quickly, and soon disappeared from the place, and the parking lot fell into silence again, as if the car never parked there.