Chapter 335: Chapter 335: Till Death Do Us Part (part two)

He said he loved Daisy, till death do them part. What a firm promise! But it was not for Jessica. He gave the words to another woman. He even didn't care a bit about Jessica. She touched her belly, and wondered what else she had to do to win this excellent man back. Because he seemed not interested in her anymore. He had paid no attention to the child in her womb, let alone acknowledged the child was his.

'Edward, why do you hurt me like this? In fact, I don't want much from you. I do not imagine you would really love me. I only want to continue to stay with you. But you give all your heart to another woman. You don't even respond to my pleading. You love Daisy wholeheartedly. But have you ever thought of me for one second?' Jessica cried in her heart.

Among the guests, another person who had the same reaction as Jessica was Hank. His face grew pale, too. He had never imagined that Daisy was the wife of the CEO of FX International Group. Then the letter he managed to send to the leaders was a false accusation. Thinking of this, he lost his cool. Because if they found that he was the person who sent the letter, he would face a loss of rank, or even worse, being expelled from the army. He would really be doomed by Jessica's tricks. She told him that she was married to Edward, but it was complete bullshit, Hank thought. But wasn't it too late for him to realize this? Because the misunderstanding and mistake were already made.

Now he finally came to understand why Daisy would drive that luxurious car into the army base without any fears that her car would be mistaken as bribe. Because with the wealth of FX International Group, no one would feel strange even if she took a helicopter to work, let alone a luxurious car. He regretted that he had been used by Jessica without knowing it. And he mistook the car as her bribe. He felt troubled at how to end this drama. He knew the top leaders had already started the investigation about the content of the accusation letter.

When Hank was lost in his complex thoughts, Aaron announced the opening of the party. While on the stage, Daisy noticed that among the guests dressed in flashy party dresses, there was a group of people wearing troop uniforms which she was quite familiar with. But the guests were so crowded together, she couldn't figure out whether she knew those people or not. But Edward knew who they were. No matter how the public reacted to this news, he achieved his goals. He wondered now that the officials from the Army Group knew that Daisy was his wife, would they continue to think that Daisy had no background and was an easy target?

Except for the Commander who had known about Daisy's identity before, other guests from the army were surprised to know that Daisy was married to Edward. At the same time, they figured out why FX International Group would suddenly invite them to attend the ceremony. The company wanted them to know that they financed the military equipment purchase because of Colonel Ouyang, not because of any other factors. It seemed that Edward's final goal was to warn them that the whole FX International Group was behind Colonel Ouyang and she was never supposed to be trifled with. Otherwise the company would not invite them to the ceremony. It must be connected to the case of Colonel Ouyang's suspension from her position, they thought.

It was the first time for Kevin to see how beautiful and graceful Daisy was at such a grand occasion. He was surprised to see that taking off the uniform, Daisy could be so fascinating and attractive when dressed in such elaborate clothes. He sneered with self-mockery. When Daisy and Edward was about to reach the place where he and the army people stood, Kevin immediately concealed his downcast look. Because Edward had a sharp eye, he would easily catch other people's hidden thoughts. Kevin didn't dare to show too much of his emotions.

Army Commander, Commander, why are you all here?" When Daisy approached them and saw clearly who they were, she was frightened. She couldn't understand when the army was connected with the FX International Group. Why didn't she hear anything from Edward about it?

"Oh! I invited them. Hello! Nice to meet you! I feel honored that you could come here to attend our ceremony." Edward shook hands with them one by one with gracefulness. His fascinating smile stunned all army officers present.

"Mr. Mu, you're very modest. We are the people who should say thanks for your generous financing." The Army Commander's loud and clear voice matched his manner as a soldier. It was the first time he had met with Edward, so he acted very politely. He didn't dare to underestimate Edward who smiled broadly. Because he knew that though the man was smiling, an iron hand might be hidden in a velvet glove. So he felt the need to be cautious when dealing with Edward.

Every citizen has a responsibility to support the country's military. I only did what I should do within my ability. Don't be too polite. For our good partnership, I propose a toast!" Edward said while taking the glass of wine from the waiter. He knew how to handle it appropriately. He was neither very hospitable nor very indifferent to them. Instead, he kept his graceful manner all the time. As a business man, he never acted on impulse without due consideration. So this time he used his intelligence and wisdom to deal with this group of people seriously. It was what he was good at.

Chapter 336: Chapter 336: Scheming Edward

"Mr. Mu, a toast in the spirit of good cooperation! I never imagined that Daisy is your wife. She is an excellent officer in our army. We're on the same side and we should support each other, ha, ha! " toasted the Army Commander. He downed his drink with one gulp. The implication in his words revealed that he was indeed a mighty and smart leader. After all, an average man wouldn't reach his status.

"Thanks, Army Commander. I also consider my wife excellent in every aspect. It seems that we have the same view on that, " said Edward. Of course, Edward, a scheming businessperson, could read between the lines. He understood what the Army Commander was implying. So he got the hint and continued.

"Ha, ha! You're living up to your status as an elite in the city, considerate and thoughtful. Don't worry! She's always been one of the most powerful and efficient officers on base, " said the Army Commander. He thought, 'Edward looks prettier than most women, but he doesn't behave like a woman. Instead of beating about the bush, he is negotiating with me in a different way. Every line he said seems simple and normal, but he was hinting his purpose. And I couldn't say no to him. He is really crafty.'

"That's very nice of you. You've given your word, then I have nothing to worry about, " replied Edward. He put on a meaningful smile on his face when his purpose was understood by the Army Commander. He thought, 'The Army Commander is clever. I thought there would be a lot of talking. But he is wise enough to make the conversation easier. I like to talk with intelligent people, because I can get what I want a lot quicker. Meaningless talk is just a waste of time.'

On the other hand, Daisy frowned and was a bit confused. She failed to follow their way of talking and thinking. She felt that there was a hidden meaning behind their words. When she tried to figure out what they were talking about a moment ago, they seemed to turn to another topic. In fact, the rest felt the same way. Edward and the Army Commander talked as if they were good friends who had known each other for a long time. In fact, it was the first time they had met. The words meant more than they said.

"Commander, a toast to you! Thanks for your caring and help to my wife all these years, " said Edward sincerely. Some time ago, he had overheard Daisy talking with the Commander on the phone. He knew that the Commander truly cared about Daisy. Therefore, Edward sincerely respected him.

"Mr. Mu, you're welcome. Daisy is a talent, I'm just a talent scout. I don't take the credit for her success and honors. She has earned them the hard way, " replied the commander. He appreciated the sophisticated way Edward dealt with people. He understood the implied meaning, so he had to be very cautious when he talked with such a scheming man like Edward. Or he would be screwed.

Edward was amused. He realized that the commander must have known exactly what they were talking about. That was why the commander was cautious and alert when talking with him. But right now, everything Edward had said was honest and sincere. There was no implied meaning in his words.

"Excuse me, I've got to leave now. Please help yourselves, " said Edward. He had to leave and say hi to his business partners because they were beckoning to him. He loved Daisy, so he came to greet her leaders first. Now that he had gotten what he wanted, it was time to do his own business. Edward didn't take Daisy with him because he knew Daisy was uncomfortable in social situations. And the most important reason was that he didn't want her to be noticed by those men, who liked to hook up with women, just like he did in the past.

Kevin had stood there listening to them all the time. He could do nothing but mock himself when Edward overlooked him. Edward didn't like Kevin because Kevin adored Daisy. Now Kevin was married to Leena, what would Edward think of him? That was why Edward had cast a warning glance at him in the beginning. Obviously, he did it for Leena. Because he knew Kevin was not a rival or a threat. Daisy loved him only.

"Colonel, you've kept the information from us! We didn't know that you are the wife of Mr. Mu, the boss of the FX International Group, therefore we have suspended you from your duties. You must feel wronged. Fortunately, your husband is so considerate to you that you don't have to worry about the suspension. We'll declare your innocence, " said the Army Commander seriously and sincerely.

He was the superior among them, therefore he didn't have to be cautious any more. He valued Daisy and her talents. After all, what she had learned abroad was what they needed domestically.

"Thanks, Army Commander, I'm fine, " replied Daisy. Daisy had always been calm and cold, so she didn't look surprised when she heard that she was suspended. But deep inside, she felt grieved. Without any further investigation, they just suspended her. She wondered whether it was because they were efficient or because they had a problem with her.

At this time, a kid shouted, "Commander, it's you. I miss you so much, " It was Justin. He then rushed at the commander and hugged him.

"Ha, ha! Kid, I miss you too. I haven't seen you on base for months. I thought you've forgotten me, " the commander smiled. The commander was truly happy. They used to see each other every day. But he hadn't seen Justin since Daisy took him away to live with Edward months ago. He really missed him.

"Commander, you're so naughty. You've arranged too much work for my mommy when I am not in the army base. She fell ill because of overwork, " complained Justin. His childish remarks caused an outbreak of laughter and also attracted attention from the crowd, including Tom, who just walked in the room. Tom held his breath when he saw Daisy in her pretty dress. He thought, ' She is such an aloof beauty. No wonder Edward fell in love with her. She is an uncut jade. A little makeup would make her more charming and even prettier. She looks like a fairy!

She doesn't look pale. Thanks to my effective ointment and her good physical state, she is delicate and charming now.'

"Tom, come here, " Rain beckoned him over. Rain was responsible for all the negotiations about the sponsorship with the military. Therefore he was going to say hi to the Army Commander. But when he saw Edward and Daisy talking with the Army Commander, he stopped, sat alone in the corner and sipped at his wine with pleasure. Then he saw Tom who was late for the party.

"What are you doing here? Drinking alone? It's not like you. Why don't you hook up with those beauties, " teased Tom. He strode toward Rain and was a little surprised that Rain would be sitting in a corner alone. 'A playboy without women? You gotta be kidding me, ' he thought.

"What's wrong with you? Why are you so late?" asked Rain. He squinted down at Tom and refused to answer his questions. He was not interested in those beauties, especially those who went past them deliberately. But he looked sexier when he was lazy, which had won the hearts of young women.

"I was needed in surgery. What's up? Did I miss anything interesting?" asked Tom. He sat elegantly next to Rain, held a cup of wine casually and sipped it. When the aroma was released inside his mouth, he frowned and wondered, 'What is it? It tastes strange.'

"Of course, you missed the moment when Edward said 'I love you' to Daisy in public. It was a once-in-a-lifetime moment!" said Rain bitterly. If it was possible, he wanted to say 'I love you' to Annie. But how could he say it to her when he didn't know where Annie was now?

"Oh my God! He can't be so dramatic. It's not like him. You're fooling me!" said Tom. It was beyond belief that a proud and arrogant man like Edward threw off his airs and said 'I love you' to Daisy in public. In his mind, Edward had always resisted baring his heart in public. When did Edward change? But Tom didn't want to jump to conclusions. He remembered that Edward punched him the night before.

Tom, you're here. I thought you were in your lab again, " said Leena. At the beginning of the party, she was with Mr. Cold and others. But they had to socialize with their business partners. Even Edward's mother went to talk with her friends. Leena was left alone. Therefore Leena was very happy to see Tom and Rain.

"Hi! Leena, why are you alone? Aren't you married?" asked Tom. He looked up and found no one with Leena. He frowned deeply.

Tom, I'm sorry I didn't tell you I got married, " apologized Leena. Shy, she stuck out her tongue at him. She felt embarrassed and sorry for not telling him about her marriage in person. After all, Tom was like one of the family, who always lavished their affection and time on her.

What? Your sorry? How could you have the nerve to marry a man shortly without telling us first. What if he is a bad guy! Asked Tom. He was shocked when he heard the news. He couldn't imagine such a lovely and good girl would get married so quietly and quickly. It was not like Leena at all.

Yeah I know he's not! Tom. I'm not stupid! I'm too smart to be cheated. Don't worry, replied Leena. With a forced smile on her face, she was crying inside. Why? Why does everyone keep asking about my marriage? Is Kevin really that bad? He seems to be unwelcome and unlikeable.

At the thought of Kevin, she looked around and tried to find out where he was. She thought, Kevin hadn't come back for me since he greet the officers. Does he got stuck on the way here? Or has he totally forgotten me? No, that's impossible! Even if I'm not the one he loves, I'm his wife. I must mean something to him right? At the thought of this, her heart sank. The smile on her face suddenly wavered and disappeared.

Chapter 337: Chapter 337: A Sublime Melody (part one)

"Mu, what you said isn't true, is it? How could she be your legal wife? If that is true, how come she didn't show up earlier? You are deliberately making me give up, that's why you are making her play along, aren't you?" Jessica caught Edward when he was standing alone. She wouldn't accept her defeat. Her outfit and makeup were captivating enough to amaze every onlooker, yet Daisy Ouyang's pure and intense aura trumped them. Initially, all eyes were on Jessica, but when Daisy entered the venue, all the attention shifted to her. Jessica was jealous of both Daisy's gorgeous figure and noble background.

Jessica, it's you. Do you think you are so important that we have to put up a performance for you? Don't think so highly of yourself. We don't consider you a threat. Since we've known each other for years, let me give you a fair warning! Don't do anything stupid that doesn't match your status."

Edward noticed Jessica's pale and soft hand holding onto his sleeve. He raised his eyebrows and ordered her unmercifully, without a hint of emotion. His frigidness was like the severe winter wind that erased all traces of warmth.

"Do you really love her? Till death do you apart? It's not just a lie?" Jessica bit on her lip. No matter what, she couldn't believe a philanderer like Edward could give up on his lifestyle for one woman, for one icy bloom named Daisy. Jessica was determined to reveal what was behind Edward's facade.

"What do you think? Are you curious? But why should I tell you? I'm not obliged to do that, am I?" Edward smirked and pulled back his sleeve assertively. His love for Daisy was sacred and personal, and he had no reason to explain his emotions to an irrelevant outsider. He did not expect everyone in this world to understand his affection for Daisy. All he wanted was her trust. He couldn't care less what other people thought.

Jessica tripped because of Edward's unexpected reaction. Luckily, the bar table was right next to her, so she was able to find balance. But her already wounded heart was hurt by Edward once again.

"Are you afraid to admit it, because you don't love her? All of this is just a hoax you have used to fool people. Am I right?" Jessica ignored the prying looks of the bystanders. Under her gorgeous appearance was a woman in despair, hopelessly begging for a final confirmation. Jessica was too stubborn and proud to admit defeat against Daisy.

"Tsk! I must say you're seriously self-absorbed. It doesn't matter if what I said is true or not; what matters is that my heart beats for her. Do you get that?" Edward frowned at Jessica's constant pestering. He had lost the patience to deal with her. If they were somewhere else, he wouldn't even bother acknowledging her, let alone giving an explanation.

Jessica's lips trembled, she bit on them. Just as Edward turned around to leave, she forgot all her inhibitions and held onto his body. Edward wasn't expecting the sudden embrace. He didn't know how to react. Meanwhile, melodic piano tunes started playing at the venue. The entire place turned silent. There was no other sound except the music.

And there she was; Daisy Ouyang's pristine white dress almost blended with the color of the piano, looking magnificent and elegant. She was sitting right in front of the piano. Her spellbinding appearance showed no regard for worldly matters. Her long, fair and dainty fingers danced gracefully on the keys, sending waves of melodious notes. The music was like a clear pond, coolly whisking through the hearts of everyone present. It was like a cool night breeze sweeping over a summer lake, soothing the spirit and clearing the mind. Everyone was attracted to her beautiful curves. They were shocked to see that a tough military officer was capable of such a delicate art. And it was not just a rookie show of skills; Daisy's performance was clearly well-crafted, showing years of practice.

Everybody was charmed by the smooth stream of Daisy's music. The sound suddenly took a sharp turn with a flick of her fingers and rose to the heavens as if countless wild horses were charging ahead, fierce and intense. The listeners didn't find the shift jarring; they became more invested as they melted into the song.

However, Daisy's gaze was fixed on Edward and Jessica. On her carefree face there was a slight sense of sarcasm. She trusted her husband, but she didn't appreciate the fact that another woman had her hands on Edward. Therefore, when Daisy saw the two arguing, she started to play. Since she couldn't just interrupt them and express her distress, she thought of this other approach to get what she wanted. She was playing a soothing song, but when she saw Jessica embracing Edward, and he didn't push back right away, Daisy decided to use impassioned melodies to express her anger.

Edward was stunned by Daisy's unanticipated solo performance, that's why he forgot to push away Jessica immediately. He didn't know that Daisy was so good at playing the piano. She gave him such pleasant surprises every so often in their relationship. Edward wondered how many delightful surprises awaited him. His own imagination overcame him.

So when he realized the tonal shift in her music, he understood the reason instantly. The woman was angry at him now. Thinking about this he gave a broad smile and unflinchingly pushed Jessica off of him. Edward did not want to be butchered by Daisy's sharp notes, which might happen if this went on any longer.

Edward wasn't the only one shaken by Daisy's music. Everyone present was overwhelmed by her breezy yet stern, subtle yet Sublime tunes. When she finally finished her song, Daisy gently smiled and stepped off the stage cautiously. The mellow aura still lingered on people's ears. By the time she approached Edward, thunderous applause was exploding every corner of the room. Every man in the room stared at Edward with obvious envy, feeling jealous that they didn't have a gifted woman like Daisy.

Chapter 338: Chapter 338: A Sublime Melody (part two)

"Jessica Lin, I didn't expect to see you so soon. You can hug other men as much as you like, but don't you dare come near my man. I remember warning you; it seems that you have a short memory." Daisy frowned slightly, glancing at Edward with accusation. She wasn't pleased that this man had made her so jealous that she had to perform in front of everyone on an instrument that she hadn't tried for the longest time. Luckily Daisy hadn't lost her touch. Otherwise, Edward would be in serious trouble later that night.

"Don't forget that he used to be my man as well. You shouldn't be so confident. Your man will ultimately go to some other woman. I believe, at that time someone will say the same thing to you! Are you still sure that this man is solely yours?" Jessica had lost Edward, but she still fought for her dignity. No matter what happened, she wouldn't concede to Daisy so easily.

Edward turned to Daisy with worry, upon hearing Jessica's attempt to disparage his relationship with Daisy. He quickly pulled her close to him. When he turned back to face Jessica, darkness appeared on his handsome face. 'Jessica, you've ruined every last bit of kindness that existed between us. Now I've seen how nasty you really are.'

"Oh? Is that so? I'll be waiting for it! I don't care how many women he had or is going to have. He is mine now, and every bit of him belongs to me. If anyone tries to get a piece of him, she'll have to go through me first." Daisy sneered and didn't react to Edward's action.

Daisy sneered and didn't react to Edward's action. Her bright eyes taunted Jessica. Daisy didn't like to engage in arguments for anything, but that did not extend to Edward. So as long as he didn't tell her that he had had enough of her, she would defend her love from any pursuers no matter what.

"Jessica, you can't take a hint, can you? Even on such a momentous occasion, you have tried to create a scene. I seriously can't tell if you are stupid or simply insane. Can't you see how much they love each other? Why are you getting in the middle of this?"

Belinda had been quietly observing Jessica. So when an argument broke out between Daisy and Jessica, Belinda couldn't help but step forward to bring Jessica down. Belinda had long detested the drama queen. Since Jessica badly wanted to make a scene, Belinda decided to let her have it. Earlier when Daisy started playing the piano, she was also puzzled. Now she realized that it was all because of the shameless Jessica!

"Belinda, I don't remember crossing you ever, aren't you out of line for making these accusations?" Jessica was annoyed when Belinda suddenly intervened, so her tone turned hostile. Jessica had never really known Belinda on a personal level, but she had heard about Belinda's resoluteness. And since they both came from wealthy families, Jessica knew a bit about Belinda by reputation. But she couldn't remember any past encounters between the two, so Jessica didn't know why Belinda provoked her.

"You didn't cross me, but you've crossed Daisy, which means you indirectly got on my nerves as well. That's why I don't like you." Belinda wasn't afraid of getting into arguments. In her eyes, Jessica was just a mistress out of favor. Belinda didn't need much effort to deal with her. She wasn't courteous like Daisy. Belinda didn't hesitate to hit where it hurt the most. She didn't believe in the idea of pity. Belinda never harped on concepts like "kindness," therefore she didn't care for women like Jessica.

"Are you ganging up on me? Or perhaps you are just bluffing?" Jessica clenched her fists. She couldn't understand why everyone cared about Daisy but ignored her wounds. She felt that she didn't deserve such harsh treatment for falling in love with a man.

"Ha! Jessica, I've always known how brazen you are, but I never expected you to be so ignorant. Ganging up on you? On you? We don't need to do that. Why don't you take a look at yourself? And ask if we were bluffing. I can destroy a woman like you who knows no shame and still have time to spare. Why would I need anyone's help?" Belinda stared at Jessica's belly as she spoke, contemptuously wondering if Edward was really the father of the child. Otherwise, why would this woman come after him again and again?

"Belinda, leave it. Calm down. People are watching. Let's not make this ugly." Daisy didn't want to spoil the party because of their personal affairs. She was familiar with Belinda's temper. Belinda would easily get riled up about anything related to Daisy, so she had to be stopped. Moreover, Belinda was now a CEO of a big company. Many people from the business world were looking at them. Daisy couldn't afford to let her reputation be damaged. That would be detrimental to her career growth. Besides, her superiors from the army were also here, so she had to contain herself.

Belinda looked around at the curious eyes staring at them and unwillingly decided to stop humiliating Jessica. She had to keep things cool for Daisy's sake, so she left Jessica with a threatening look. Deep down, she tried to tell Jessica that she would not lose to anyone even if she had to play dirty. Other than that sly Leena Leng, Belinda had never been defeated by anyone.

Chapter 339: Chapter 339: What Are You Doing (part one)

Jessica gritted her teeth as Edward left determinedly. She wanted to hold on to him, but she knew Belinda was right; she couldn't come between Edward and Daisy. Stealing him back was out of the question.

"Daisy, you look gorgeous tonight! You practically steal the show." After Edward left, Belinda ignored Jessica and chatted with Daisy joyfully. Daisy was beautiful, but she always kept a low profile; when it came to clothes, she usually chose casual and comfortable outfits. Besides, she barely had the chance to wear anything other than her uniform, let alone a gorgeous gown like she wore for the party tonight.

"What? Are you spellbound by my beauty?" Daisy took a deep breath and smiled at Belinda, trying to calm herself down with a little banter. She was really nervous. After Edward introduced her as his wife, everyone was staring at her either curiously or viciously. It was difficult for her to enjoy the party.

"Yes! But I think I'm not the only one enchanted by you tonight. Do you see that handsome guy over there? He has been gazing at you for quite some time." Belinda raised her eyebrows and pointed in a man's direction.

"Who are you talking about?" Following Belinda's gaze, Daisy curiously turned. The smile on her face instantly disappeared as she saw the young man. It was Brian. Brian was sure that he didn't mistake someone else for Daisy. After all, Edward introduced her and then confessed his love for her in front of all the guests.

"Do you know him?" Belinda noticed a change in Daisy's look. She was confused, so she turned around again to look at the young man.

"Yes, I do. Sorry, Belinda. Please excuse me for a second." Daisy knew sooner or later she had to face Brian. She missed him so much. But when they met the other day, she had to say she didn't know him. Although she didn't want to, she had her own difficulties. Now that everyone knew who she was, she couldn't pretend not knowing him. After all, Brian hadn't done anything wrong, and he didn't deserve this.

Brian was in shock the whole evening. He thought Edward would bring one of his girlfriends to the party, but he hadn't expected that Edward would show up with Daisy. He felt relieved when he saw her, but he got baffled at the same time. Did it mean Mary was telling the truth? Mary said that Daisy pretended not to know him not because the Ouyangs had mistreated her, but because she had married a wealthy man and didn't want anything to do with the Ouyangs anymore. Brian was thrilled to see Daisy again; but as he thought of Mary's words, he suddenly got distressed. Brian wanted to tell Daisy that even if she decided to treat him like a stranger, he wouldn't mind as long as she lived happily. If she wanted, he wouldn't disturb her by showing his face again. He would stay away from her life, because he was happy when she was happy.

Daisy always surprised him. He became extremely excited when he saw Daisy stepping into the venue elegantly; all his sorrow and anxiety vanished into thin air by simply looking at her. Daisy was always outstanding to Brian. No one could ever replace her in his heart. He had been watching her, and clearly so had everyone else. She had the aura that easily made her the center of everyone's attention; Brian always noticed her wherever she went.

"Brian, how have you been doing all these years?" Daisy smiled gently as she gazed at the brother she hadn't seen in years. Brian was the only person in her family that really cared about her. Daisy suddenly felt like crying. The little boy who used to follow her around and keep her company had grown into a handsome young man. Although they were not kids anymore, Daisy could still remember the moment when he wiped off her tears with his chubby little fingers and told her not to cry. That was the warmest moment that she had ever experienced during those years.

"Daisy, you won't run away from me this time, will you?" Brian gazed at Daisy as she walked up to him and greeted him. His mouth dropped open in shock. Just a few minutes ago, he was ready to walk out of her life and never bother her again. He couldn't give her the happiness she wanted, so he thought he should step away. But to his surprise, Daisy came to him and talked to him like they did when they were young. His heart warmed up with excitement.

"I'm sorry. Brian. Are you angry with me?" Daisy bit her lip nervously. She wondered whether she was too unkind to Brian. She shouldn't have left like that the other day when they met accidentally. She knew that Brian was the only person in Ouyang family that cared about her. She saw how his eyes lit up when he met her. But she broke his heart by pretending not to know him. Was she ruthless?

"Daisy, you should have known that I wouldn't mind even if the whole world turns against me, but I couldn't bear it when you do. But no, I'm not angry with you. Actually, I'm thrilled to see you this happy, even without me in your life." Brian forced a bitter smile as he replied. A glint of sadness clouded his handsome face, which bruised Daisy's heart. His words made Daisy feel so ashamed of herself.

"Brian, it's all my fault. I shouldn't have pretended that I didn't know you. I'm so sorry. I promise it won't happen again." Daisy pulled Brian into her arms and gently patted his back, her look no longer cold and indifferent. If Edward was now the beacon of her life, then Brian was the light that guided her way out of the pain and sorrow when she was a child. But what had she done! How could she hurt her only brother? Was she as heartless as Leo? Although his love and concern for her remained unaltered, how could Daisy face him again after what she had done to him?

"I'm fine, dear sister. I'll be happy as long as you're happy." Brian's eyes became red. He closed his eyes and sighed with satisfaction. He hadn't held Daisy for years, and he missed her embrace. He felt love and warmth only when Daisy hugged him. He had never felt the same thing from any other member of his family, not even his own mother. Perhaps it was because his mother loved and cared for no one but herself, and the only thing she did was to plot against others.

"What are you doing? Am I invisible to you now?" As the brother and sister were enjoying the happy reunion, Edward suddenly showed up behind them. He pushed Brian away and pulled Daisy into his arms as he glared at the man who dared to embrace his wife. His eyes were full of rage.

Although Edward was having casual conversations with his clients, his eyes followed Daisy as she went around the venue. When he noticed how many men were drooling over Daisy, he immediately regretted choosing such a stunning dress for her. He knew better than anyone that she was irresistible. While chatting with guests, he kept an eye on her, in case someone would try to hit on her. Edward got furious when he saw a man hugging Daisy in front of everyone. Was the man desperately seeking his death? He'd be happy to help him if that was the case.

Edward! What are you doing? Are you okay Brian? Daisy hadn't expected that Edward would suddenly attack Brian. She was so worried about her brother that she didn't notice Edward's anger.
