

My Wife is a beautiful Officer Chapter 365 - Chapter 365: I Don't Trust Myself (part two)

Chapter 365: Chapter 365: I Don't Trust Myself (part two)

"Okay. Let's get down to business. You are curious why I seem so distant to my parents, aren't you?" What had been going on with him and Jessica was a long story, which was too complicated to be finished within just a few sentences. Edward didn't plan to cut the long story short, so he took Daisy into the car and sat down before they talked. He had decided a long time ago he wouldn't tell anyone about the pain and sorrow during his childhood, because it hurt him to repeat it over and over again; but if Daisy wanted to know, he wouldn't keep it a secret from her. He wanted her to know everything about him - his good, bad or even desperate self. The other reason he decided to reopen his wound was because what he had been through when he was little played an important part in his life.

"Yes, I am." Wrapping her arms around his neck, Daisy nodded firmly. However, all of a sudden, she noticed that Edward's face changed; he looked sad. Daisy got frightened and nervous. Her instincts told her that she should stop right there, but deep down, another voice was whispering, pushing her to go after the answer she wanted the whole time. Gazing at his face, Daisy wondered whether she was too heartless to him; she forced him to reopen his wound and watched him bleed just because she wanted some answers.

"Everyone thinks I'm successful and I have everything I want within my reach. But the truth is, my parents weren't really a mother and father to me. I'm the child that they have never liked. I have always been like an invisible member in my family for all these years." Edward forced a weak smile as he started to speak. After the bitter opening, he pursed his thin lips and remained silent for a short while, trying to hold back his emotions; then he continued, "I had to live abroad, alone, by myself, when other kids could still hug their parents and ask for what they wanted, candies, new bikes, love and attention. And I had to learn how to run the business and even take over the company when other kids were still learning their trades in the classroom."

Edward's voice was trembling as he let out a muffled sob. Edward's voice was trembling as he let out a muffled sob. For all those years, he had tried so hard to win his parents' approval and praise. He wouldn't mind how tired he got or how much he had suffered, as long as they could look at him and tell him 'son, we're so proud of you.' But he received nothing from them no matter what he did, no matter how excellent his performance was. Jonathan had never given him a single look of approval, let alone something like a loving hug.

You know what? I was an accident, a child who wasn't meant to be born. I wasn't born with my parents' earnest expectation. When I was little, I was so jealous of other kids, because they could go out with their mom and dad by their sides. But I had no one. How I wished I could be like them, with someone to hold my hands and hug me and kiss me. I waited day after day, and there was nothing. I finally realized that what I was dreaming would never happen, because I was in no position to wish for anything, because there was no my place in that family. Even the reason I was born was only because my mother begged my father to give her a child.

To be honest, I rather wish I hadn't been born in the first place." Edward smiled bitterly. It had been so many years; all those things that he thought he had already forgotten were flashing through his mind frame by frame. No matter how hard he tried, he hadn't forgotten a thing. On the contrary, they grew more clear and painful in the hidden corner of his heart as time passed. They stayed with him.

"I'm so sorry, honey. I shouldn't have forced you to tell me this. Please just stop. You don't have to tell me; I won't bring it up anymore." Daisy held Edward tight in her arms. Edward's words bruised her heart, it felt like someone was tearing her apart, but the pain was nothing as compared to what Edward had suffered. Though Cynthia had told her something earlier, Daisy hadn't expected that Edward's childhood would be more miserable than hers. At least she was the princess to her parents until she turned six, they loved her and gave her everything she wanted. But Edward had never experienced the love and warmth from his parents, not even for one day. Although he grew up in a rich family, that wasn't enough for a little child who craved something else - his parents' love.

"I'm fine. You don't trust me, do you? Because you didn't know much about me. So I'll tell you everything about me, and you'll know me better. Maybe you'll trust me more in the future. Come on, it's not something happens every day! To be honest, I finally gathered up all my courage and want to tell you everything about me. No one has ever heard this from me before. It's now or never. If you want me to stop, probably I won't be brave enough to bring it up ever again for the rest of my life.

Edward gently kissed her on the forehead. He was too exhausted after carrying the burden alone for all these years. Sometimes he also wanted someone he loved to share his story. He didn't want pity or sympathy from others ; he just needed someone to listen. Now that Daisy wanted to know, he decided to hold nothing back. He wanted her to see the real Edward, Edward also hoped Daisy to know more about him. Maybe when she know about his pat, she wouldn't judge him ; maybe she would understand that he hide himself a mask only because deep down he felt insecure.

Yes, I trust you. I just don't trust myself. Daisy was frightened. She didn't mean to hurt Edward in the first place. But look at what she have done! Although Edward said those words in a cheerful tone, Daisy knew he was bleeding inside. And it hurts her ten times to see him in agony.

Don't you want to know my past? Don't you want to know why I became a playboy? Yes, you do. Deep down, you still want the answer. We're the same type of people. No matter how much we want to know what the other think about us, we run away simply because we're too scared to hear something we couldn't accept. In the end, nothing solved, and everything just repeats itself again and again. We still doubt and quarrel and eventually get hurt, because neither of us really knows what happened. So, Are you sure you don't want to listen anymore?

Edward knew Daisy stopped him because she didn't want to see him stir things up by showing her his bleeding wounds. But he owed her an explanation, something he should have given her long time ago. Edward knew what happened today would probably happen in the future, so he'd better tell her everything now once and for all. Edward almost broke down and lost his mind when they had a fight before. It was too painful, and he didn't want to go through it again, ever.

Chapter 366: Chapter 366: Changed A Lot Because of You

"But I feel like I'm being cruel to make you talk about the past. I don't want to see you get sad. My heart will hurt too, "

Daisy said affectionately. At this moment, she wasn't the shy woman anymore. She extended her slender hands to rub Edward's knitted eyebrows. She didn't like seeing him wincing, because it meant he was being troubled by something and her heart would ache.

"I'm not sad, just resigned. I'm fine." Feeling Daisy's hands tremble, Edward sighed. He could see that although she appeared aloof, she was full of passion. And all that passion was for him, which he considered a blessing. He was willing to go through anything with her.

"OK. If you feel sad, you can stop talking anytime. Although I hope I can know everything about you, I don't want you to get upset, so don't worry about me." Daisy's heart was aching, because she was familiar with the feelings of being ignored by family members, which was her life story. She understood Edward.

"Maybe you won't believe me. My father has never held me once since my childhood. I have no idea how it feels to be spoiled by a father. At first I envied those people who have a happy family, then I started hating them. I was bitter. I was once filled with those deep feelings because of my own family. Although my mom loves me, I will never be as important as my father to her. So when they sent me abroad to live alone, I didn't feel sad but relieved."

Edward still remembered how thrilled he had been that day. He had wondered if he would become their sole concern after he parted with them. He had worked hard because he had hoped to become the best person he could be so that his father would like him. However, letdown after letdown, he finally knew. He found that no matter how hard he tried, he would always be the fifth wheel in that rich family. He was destined to be neglected by his parents.

Day after day, it didn't matter to him anymore. He stopped longing for care and love, because he realized that he would never get them. All his effort would be to no avail. It was meaningless to keep wasting his time.

Then I promised myself that if I couldn't be a responsible father, I wouldn't have a child. So although there was a lot of gossip about different girls and me, I had sex with almost none of them. The image of a licentious lifestyle was just a cover. In this way, I thought, I could anger my parents and avenge myself on them for the arranged marriage. Sadly, I hurt you deeply. I was wrong. I am very sorry for everything."

Edward looked at Daisy earnestly. Yes, he owed her an explanation, and a late apology too. He had been furious then because it had baffled him why his parents, who had never paid attention to him, suddenly cared about his marriage. Inside him, he had resisted his marriage strongly. He had taken it out on Daisy, who was young and clueless, and then left coldly at that time.

Hearing this, Daisy smiled and said nothing. She knew he had a lot to share. She just needed to be a good listener. He needed no response, because however beautiful sentences couldn't make up the void from the past in his heart.

"Realizing that I had slept with you the next morning, I was terrified by the fact that even if you didn't want to have sex with someone, you could still be drugged and end up with a baby. To prevent it from happening again, I went under the knife and Tom gave me a vasectomy. Unexpectedly, you were pregnant that night."

Edward didn't know whether he should feel sad or excited about becoming a father, for he almost became who his father was -- an irresponsible father. Fortunately, after having been apart for so many years, Daisy had sent Justin over and his life was happier. He should thank her for it, for her generosity and self-control, for her sense and kindness, and for bringing family affection into his life. Knowing that Edward hadn't been mad at her in the first place but at his parents for setting him up, Daisy kissed him on the forehead. She understood why Edward had taken it out on her. Yet, she was dying to know whether Edward had thought about her at all during those years.

"Are you wondering why I never contacted you and even almost forgot you?" Edward asked Daisy, as if he could read her mind. Daisy was so surprised that she was in a daze for a few seconds. Was this the connection between lovers? she wondered.

Actually, Daisy was an open book. All her thoughts were on her face. As a businessman who had seen the world, Edward could read her expressions easily.

"Yes, I am. Would you care to tell me why?" Daisy responded. She didn't think anybody could forget his own wife, no matter how forgetful he was or how much he hated her. One's memory couldn't be erased completely.

"When you reject someone in your heart, you reject everything that is connected with them. That was what I did. Because I was repulsed by my parents, I shut you out of my heart too. I didn't really forget you, but somehow chose not to remember you. So it was impossible for me to contact you. I figured I already had fulfilled my responsibility as long as I wired money on a regular basis to Maple Night, where I thought you lived. That's it. Nothing personal, just because you were the woman my parents picked out for me. I'm sorry I had put you through so much pain."

Edward pinched her delicate nose. It didn't hurt as much as he had thought to share his past with Daisy. He had thought he would never be able to talk about it again. Now that he opened his heart to Daisy, he wouldn't close it again. He wanted her to know everything about him.

It seems that I became a sacrifice in the battle between you and your parents and you would rather let me die in the battle. You brutal monster!" Daisy compared Edward's relation with his parents to a battle. Typical military style. What a dedicated officer she was!

Yes, I was indeed brutal to you. I made a mistake. But in the past three months, I have changed a lot because of you. For the first time I waited for a woman; for the first time I felt insecure in a relationship; for the first time I let a woman kiss my lips; for the first time I know how wonderful it is to love someone; and for the first time I know I can drop my pride for a woman."

If these things were the punishment for his cruelty to her, he was willing to take them, because he owed her. And because it was for Daisy, the woman he would be devoted to for the rest of his life.

Is all this true? Am I that woman? Daisy asked and looked At Edward with enchanting and passionate smile. He was amazed to see how charming she was at this moment. That smile was like a breeze caressing his cheeks and softening his heart, brightening his years. It was engraved upon his heart so that he would still be able to recall it even after a long long time.

Who says it is you? Colonel your so fill of yourself. Edward tease her. She was rarely tender like today. Normally, she would just kick him or cold shoulder him.

Not me? Not even when I'm doing this? Daisy kissed Edward on the lips before she finished her sentence. He had said that no other woman had kissed his lips but her, wich excited her. Those lips had never been touched by any other woman. They were all hers.

Chapter 367: Chapter 367: Daisy You Are Too Cocky (part one)

Edward narrowed his sinister eyes and looked at Daisy, was she flirting with him on her own initiative? Wouldn't she feel he was cold and unromantic if he didn't savor the feast that came to him by itself? With the thought, he immediately took control. Because Daisy's kissing skills really sucked. Of course, he wouldn't let her know this, otherwise he couldn't imagine what she'd do. He would certainly be doomed.

He kissed her passionately. But his kiss was also very gentle and sweet. This made Daisy who had expected a light kiss lost in the endless sensual delight created by Edward. He was such a good kisser. If he hadn't mentioned it to her repeatedly, she wouldn't believe that she was the only woman who had kissed him.

"Then just admit the woman you were talking about is me." Daisy gasped hastily and reluctantly left his thin and sexy lips. She gazed at him gently. Her face turned red and dewy-like after the passionate kiss, making anyone who saw the face want to have a bite of it. She had gone to great lengths to sacrifice her kiss in order to get answers, she didn't believe that this hateful man would continue to be pretentious.

"If you continue to please me, I'll consider saying it's you. What do you think? Does Colonel Ouyang want this honor?" Edward looked into Daisy's eyes slyly, a cunning smile climbing to his handsome face. That expression was fascinating.

"Really? I'd rather you keep this honor to another woman. As a Colonel, I don't care about it. The world may be short of many things, but I'm sure there is no lack of two-legged men."

Daisy looked at Edward mischievously while raising her eyebrows arrogantly, a charming smile crossing her face. 'Huh, Edward, you're really that kind of guy who wants to take a mile if I give you an inch. You dared to ask that!. I already mustered enough courage to initiate the kiss. It's impossible for me to please you. Moreover, we're in the woods. I'm not that open-minded as to have outdoor sex,' Daisy thought.

"Daisy, you are too cocky! You dared to compare me with other shallow men! Two-legged men are indeed easy to find, but do you think a noble and handsome man like me would be found anywhere on the street?" Speaking of this, Edward felt the impulse of slapping himself. What was he talking about? He was lowering himself when he mentioned himself with those shallow men. He felt ashamed to talk about such bullshit with Daisy.

"Edward, have anyone mentioned to you that sometimes you are extremely narcissistic, giving people the urge to give you a good beating? But even so, I still like you, Haha!" As soon as Daisy finished her words, she freed herself from his arms and ran away jubilantly. Her silvery laugh came through loud and clear. Her voice rang through the woods. This sudden move shocked Edward and also startled the birds, making them fly away immediately.

Edward was dumbstruck by Daisy's beautiful figure and graceful movement. He had known that his wife was pretty and amazing, but he had never seen her so lovely and playful as today. She had never shown this side to him. He lost his mind in the moment and forgot how to react. He laughed and followed her steps with his passionate eyes.

The evening glows in the sky left by the sunset were very beautiful. The person we love is beautiful, because we have put our love and gentleness on him or her. Beauty is in the eye of the beholder. This only exists between lovers. They deemed each other as the most beautiful scenery in their hearts, and anyone else was only a gentle breeze passing by. And a gentle breeze wouldn't cause too many ripples.

Contrary to the tender love and sweet atmosphere in the woods, the Lin Group fell into a state of panic due to a simple order made by Edward this morning. It was as if doomsday was coming like in those disaster movies. "You win some, you lose some," as the saying goes.

"Miss Lin, what should we do? Our stock suddenly plummeted after it went into the market today, as if someone is manipulating things under the table. No matter how hard we have tried to mend things, it was useless. And some secret party is constantly buying the stock of our company, and they now hold 40% of our equity, 10% more than we do. The rest, 30%, is still in the hands of our stockholders. We're in trouble now. What should we do?"

The special assistant looked at Jessica nervously. It was not long after they lost the construction business, he didn't think that they would face plunging stock values so soon. Would Lin Group be finished this time? But who would bear so much hatred towards Lin Group? Was it FX International Group again? Since they didn't destroy Lin Group completely last time, they thought they didn't really want Lin Group to go bankrupt. They wouldn't make a comeback to the company so soon, unless their CEO irritated Edward again. Which was why he went against his own code and caused all this mayhem. That was unusual for him. He was not that kind of man, the assistant thought.

"Why are you asking me? Why is it whenever something happens you only think to ask me? If I know the solution, why would I need you? You're useless, all of you! Just think of a way to satisfy the shareholders. No matter what, don't let them sell our stock! Do you need me to remind you of such a simple thing? Why are you still here, you pieces of shit?" Jessica ground her teeth and screamed furiously.

Daisy pissed her off when they met today, she didn't expect to hear such bad news when she came back to the company. How was it possible for her to be calm now? She was going ballistic.

"Okay, Miss Lin, we will go to talk with our shareholders now. But what should we do to save the stock which continues plummeting?" The special assistant looked furtively at Jessica, fearing of inviting a blow from her. His voice trailed off.

Chapter 368: Chapter 368: Daisy You Are Too Cocky (part two)

"I will think about it. Go finish the things I asked you to do first." Jessica lowered her head, holding her head in her hands. She seemed lost in thought. Who was behind all this? She had the same idea as her special assistant did. She didn't believe it was Edward again. If he really wanted to make Lin Group go bankrupt, he wouldn't have let it go last time. But who would have such a big grudge against Lin Group? She was confused.

She touched her belly gently, and her heart sank deeper. Her father had been sent to overseas to have a good rest there. She did this to hide her pregnancy from him. If he found that she was pregnant, he probably would pass out again. But this time, the company was confronted with such a serious problem, she feared that she was unable to handle it by herself. To tell the truth, after the heavy blow last time, the Lin Group was very vulnerable now. If she could not find capital to put into the company, she had no other option but to declare bankruptcy.

But where could she get such large amounts of capital in such a short time? She didn't have very close friends in this trade. She used to think that she had Edward with her. So she was always very arrogant and set her sights high. She ignored all the other rich men who flattered her. Because in her heart, she was the one who was bound to become Edward's wife. But she didn't expect that Daisy would get in the way and shatter all her dreams. This was a deadly blow which surprised her a lot. If she went to Edward and begged him for help, would he help her because they used to be lovers? But when thinking of his cold attitude towards her, she hesitated doing this. Because in front of that man, she already lost her love, she didn't want to beg him to keep her dignity in public.

She stood up and walked to the windows. Looking at the hustle and bustle on the street, she frowned deeply. If Lin Group really declared bankruptcy, she would fall from riches to rags and live a normal life which she hated before, which was impossible for her to accept. This was actually worse than being killed by others for her.

No, she couldn't allow that to happen, otherwise she would lose the battle with Daisy. She must find a way to change the situation. So even if she knew that Edward would not speak to her, she wanted to try. In her social circle, Edward was the richest and most influential person, if he didn't want to help her, no one else would be willing to, Jessica thought.

When the phone rang, Edward was on his way home with Daisy. Apparently, Luke needed to send someone to drive Daisy's car back this time, because Daisy was now in a sound sleep in Edward's car. So when Edward heard the phone, he furrowed his eyebrows. He picked up the phone immediately without checking who was calling. He was so eager to stop the ring tone from waking up Daisy. .

Hello, who is that?" Edward held the steering wheel with one hand while plugging the earphone with another hand. He glanced at Daisy who was asleep and then focused his attention on driving the car.

"Edward, it's me. Do you have time now? I want to see you." Jessica finally made the call. Because she firmly believed that no matter how Edward treated her now, he would not be so ruthless as to watch her die. So no matter what, she decided to at least have a go, she didn't want to see Lin Group destroyed in her hands.

"Oh, it's you? Sorry, it's not very convenient now. And I don't think there is any need for us to meet." Edward's voice became cold instantly. 'Jessica, how dare you call me again? Do you really think that your plan was flawless?' Edward thought.

"Well, when do you have time? I can wait for you. How about tonight? We haven't been to the Sexy World for a long time. Would you like to grab a drink there?" Jessica knew it was difficult to get him to change his mind, but she didn't expect that he would refuse her so harshly. She was heartbroken in an instant and lost her mind. But since she had proposed it, she must see him today, otherwise she really have no other way to get herself out of trouble.

Huh! Jessica you have time to wait, I don't really have time to waste on you. So stop dreaming about it. You should know that once I come at you , that means something bad will happen, Edward sneered. It seemed that Rain had already taken the action. Otherwise Jessica wouldn't be so eager to see him. But didn't she feel it was too late now? Since she feared so much what he'd do, she should have kept his warnings in mind. But she seemed to go the wrong way, she dared to made the same mistakes despite his repeated warnings. If he didn't punished her severely, would she ever take him seriously? She needed to be taught a lesson.

Don't get angry Edward. You know that I rarely ask anything of you. Even if you forget the fact that we have been together for so many years, you should think about our child. Jessica, begged crying. She had lost her dignity in front of this man early on, so she really had nothing to lose now.

Our child? Jessica, how many times do you need me to tell you that your child has nothing to do with me? How many times will it take to get it through your thick skull? Please don't forced the baby on me, okay? Edward sighed. Why did he forget to give his health check report to that conceited woman? That would save him from claiming for himself over and over again. It was because his carelessness that he didn't give Jessica a chance to make a fuss by using a child.

Chapter 369: Chapter 369: The Romantic Date

"Fine. Let's not talk about the baby. But please meet me. I have to discuss something important with you, "

Jessica implored while biting her lower lip. She had never been so humble in her life. She knew that this was her last chance. If she missed it, she would be in a more embarrassing situation, so she discarded her usual haughty attitude and pretended not to feel her aching heart. Besides, when it came to Edward, her pride always got undermined.

"We can talk on the phone. You have five minutes." Edward raised his voice a bit. Daisy, who had been sleeping in the passenger's seat, was awakened by his voice.

"Have we arrived? Oh, you are on the phone." Daisy sluggishly looked at Edward with droopy eyes. She looked innocent, adorable and feminine.

"Not yet. Go back to sleep. It's not an important call. Did I wake you?" Edward said gently, totally ignoring the person on the other end of the phone.

Hearing what Edward had said to Daisy, Jessica's expression changed unwittingly. She knew that he was with Daisy in his car. She remembered that he used to talk to her in that gentle tone back then. She used to stay in his arms like a spoiled child. There was a time when she was the happy woman sitting in the passenger's seat next to Edward. But now, she was nothing to him.

Bygones were bygones. Jessica was just a meaningless fling to Edward. She closed her eyes in grief and listened to him affectionately talking to another woman. Her heart was bleeding.

She hung up the phone in silence, tears streaming down her pretty cheeks. Right now, there was only one person in Edward's heart -Daisy. Jessica was in no place to talk. Whether what she had heard was an act or not, she had lost her last bit of confidence.

Jessica sat on the chair helplessly. Her youth, her love, and her upper-class lifestyle had all gone, for nothing. Her years of love and obsession for Edward eventually lost to Daisy. She sneered. She used to think that she was special to him, that was why she never believed it when people used to say that the CEO of FX International Group was insensitive and ruthless. But now, seeing how he treated Daisy, she realized that it was true. He could be so cold and cruel to the people he didn't care about while doting on the woman he loved. He had never treated anybody the way he had treated Daisy. Hard to believe. But since Jessica had seen it so many times, she had to accept the fact that Edward was really in love with Daisy. He wasn't seeking a fling in Daisy.

Edward heard the beep on the phone. He made a sinister smile and thought, 'Good. Jessica, you should realize your worth. Don't blame me for being cruel. You shouldn't have fought a hopeless battle. You broke the rules of the game, and now you are reaping the bitter fruits of your mistakes. In love, I'm neither a philanthropist nor a monopolizer. I'm just a man trying to be faithful to the woman I love.'

"Aren't we going home?" Daisy asked, while withdrawing her eyes from the view outside the car window. Edward smiled mischievously. Daisy looked at him with her head tilted and thought he might be considering something naughty, which was typical of him.

"We'll eat out tonight. Let's go on a romantic date, like other couples." Edward turned to Daisy and gave her a warm smile. Justin was growing up, but they had never been on a date. It was a pity and Edward blamed himself for it. He resolved to make up for it in the future.

Are we? I was thinking about making dinner for your parents. I was too busy to do it before, but now that I have time I feel awful for not doing it."

Daisy frowned. She was longing to be alone with Edward, but as a daughter-in-law, she felt obliged to spend time with Edward's parents. Moreover, she hoped she could help Edward to get along with his parents. In her opinion, their biggest problem was lack of communication and interaction. If they could spend more time together, they would have a better relationship.

Don't worry. They will understand." Edward sneered. Since he thought Jonathan didn't like Edward, he never cared for family courtesy and gave no importance to such formalities in his carefree life. So Edward was sure that his parents wouldn't mind if he and Daisy went out to spend a romantic evening alone.

They went to a Western restaurant, the decor of which was unique. Edward pulled his Maybach, into the parking lot and then they went in. The food and atmosphere of the restaurant were excellent. It was an ideal place for lovers. Edward had been there a couple of times, for business. This was his first date here.

Edward and Daisy intimately walked inside arm-in-arm. Wherever Edward went, he was the center of women's attention. But today, not only women but also men were attracted. Men marveled at Daisy, the perfect creature of elegance and aloofness, whom they could just admire from afar.

"Let's sit here." Daisy picked a window seat. She preferred seats with a wide view, from where she could clearly see everything. Maybe it was because of her profession.

"OK. As you say, honey." Edward usually made decisions as per his will. But he didn't mind sitting anywhere as long as Daisy liked it. Daisy still wasn't used to hearing his sweet words. She blushed. She got nervous, every time she heard those words, especially when they were in public.

Why are you blushing? Are you thinking about something naughty?" Edward whispered into her ear while he was pulling out the chair for her. His moist warm breath caressed her ear. Her cheeks became rosier and prettier, softening her aloofness.

"I'm not as shameless as you are." Daisy rolled her eyes at him and sat down gracefully. Although the majority of her co-workers were men, she was born with elegance, which was embodied in her every move.

"You know I can't do shameless things by myself. You must be with me." Edward sat opposite Daisy, wearing a teasing smile. "You are getting worse by the day. Your mind is filled with filth. What do you use it for, I wonder?"

Daisy tried to pull herself together. If Edward noticed her uneasiness because of his tease, he would enjoy it and ridicule her all tonight. Darn! Being in a relationship with such an evil guy was exhausting. You had to be very careful with his tricks all the time.

Honey, be reasonable. You were naughty first. I just disclosed what you were thinking. How come I am getting blamed?"

Edward pretended to be wronged. He acted innocent, but actually, his head was filled with dirty ideas. No one could win over him in shamelessness. More lewd remarks might come out of his mouth. So to shut him up, Daisy had to acquiesce to his words, although they were just nonsense.

"I would be a fool if I continued to argue with you over this." Daisy drank a mouthful of water from the glass on the table. She was in no mood to carry this topic forward because she knew she would be at a disadvantage.

"OK. Let's order a set meal for a couple." Edward knew well what she was capable of. Once the tiger was awakened in public, his reputation would be ruined. So he dropped the topic immediately.

A set meal for a couple? Count me in, " a vigorous voice said. It was Brian. He smiled mischievously at Daisy and Edward, his glance shifting back and forth from one to the other. He just came in to grab a bite and hadn't expected to bump into them. His luck had been good lately. What a beautiful life!