Chapter 381: Chapter 381: Rain, You Are Courting Death (part three)

Justin's little speech rendered Tom completely mute. He wondered, 'where did Justin learn those sayings from?' At the same time, Tom had to admit that Justin was really good at debating. Although Tom was good at holding a scalpel, he knew nothing about how to debate with others. Now that Justin stated his opinion sternly and seriously, Tom's mouth dropped open. He froze for a while and still didn't know what he could say to fight back.

As much as Edward was angry that Justin gave away his real thoughts, he was now quite proud of his son. They were family. No matter how mad they got at each other, they should stick together against their enemies. 'But did he really have to bring up that saying?' Edward pondered, 'What did he mean by 'everyone does everything for their own benefit'? Was he really trying to defend me? Or did he just insult me?'

After hearing the whole conversation, Brian gave his little nephew the thumbs up. He only met Justin for the first time last night at the party; but after talking with him, Brian knew that this little boy was much smarter than his peers. Brian knew Daisy was kind and gentle, so Justin must have inherited his slyness from his father, because Edward was also a cunning man. Like father, like son. Brian suddenly had a feeling that the FX International Group would take off again when Justin took over the business from his father. After all, Justin's talent had already flowered at such an early age.

"Justin, you sound like some ancient sage. Did you time travel in your dreams and learn those words of wisdom from some wise man last night? I couldn't think of where else you could learn these words!" Belinda was still depressed and thinking about Duke, but when she heard Justin saying something wise with his childish voice, she couldn't help bursting into snickers. She chipped into their conversation and made fun of Justin, which finally distracted her from Duke and made her feel better. Therefore, when she saw Duke come in the room, she didn't feel as happy as she thought she would be.

"Auntie Belinda, I know you didn't meet the sage in your dream last night, because you must have been busy looking for uncle Duke. You couldn't spare any time for someone else. Am I right?" As soon as Justin heard Belinda's voice, he turned around and made a joke of her. Although he was only a 5-year-old kid, there was a hint of slyness and devil-may-care smile glowing in his eyes, which didn't befit his age at all.

Hey, little one! I was praising you! Do you want to get punished? Dreams are supposed to be warm and sweet! Who would look for an iceberg in their dreams? I'm not crazy!" Belinda immediately retorted as she withdrew her hand from Duke, who sat right next to her and held her little hand just a few seconds ago. Besides, Belinda acted as if Duke was carrying some deadly disease; she moved aside and almost leaned against Brian without even glancing at Duke the whole time.

She determined to keep Duke at arm's length. With a frown, Duke reached out his arm, and with a sudden burst of strength, he held Belinda's slim waist and pulled her away from Brian and back to his arms. After that, he gazed at Belinda and curled his lips into a small sneer. At that night, Duke drove away Rachel and enjoyed the love of his life leaning against his chest. He couldn't be happier at the moment.

Brian was confused why one minute Belinda was leaning closer to him, and the next she backed off. Then he noticed the strong arm around Belinda's waist. Following the arm, Brian saw Duke's smirk, and he suddenly let out a tacit smile. It turned out that when men were in love, they became childish and unreasonable and got jealous of almost anyone and anything without a proper reason.

Edward was a perfect example. However, Brian was surprised that someone who seemed as cold and indifferent as Duke would also act like this. Brian suddenly felt lucky that he hadn't fallen in love with someone. Picturing himself getting jealous and desperately needing a woman's attention, Brian shuddered in terror all of a sudden. "

Alright, everyone is here...except for Leena. What happened? Didn't anyone call her?" Tom looked around the room and asked doubtfully. No way! Did anyone remember to call their little princess? Or did everyone think someone else had called her?

Don't ask me, I have no idea what happened. Anyway, I'm more interested in whose idea it is to get us all together. Even Justin is here. It's a nightclub, for Christ's sake. I don't even know why I'm here; how should I know whether or not someone called Leena?"

Edward was bewildered. Edward had planned to have a romantic dinner with Daisy, but Brian's sudden appearance ruined everything. Finally when the dinner was over and Edward thought he could get rid of Brian and bring his wife home to have some really intimate moment, he received a call from Duke, telling him to come to the club. He had to change his plan again after that call. It seemed to Edward that Daisy had no idea how much he loved and cared for her, and she was giving him the cold shoulder, which made Edward feel more depressed. They had come into the room since awhile ago; why didn't she try to coax him? Edward wasn't really mad at Daisy; he just wanted her to say something nice and sweet so it wouldn't be too awkward for him to talk to her again, since he was supposed to be angry. However, sitting right next to him, Daisy seemed to have no intention of talking to Edward, which made Edward feel frustrated. Although he really wanted to make peace with Daisy and hold her in his arms, he couldn't do anything if Daisy didn't say something first.

"Justin is the reason why we're here tonight. Never mind Leena, who knows where she is. Now, let me tell you why we're here! We're here to celebrate that Justin has officially become a student in elementary school! That's the very first step to taking over his father's company and conquering the business world! Let's bring out the cake!"

Rain was always energetic and loved these sorts of events. After he excitedly announced the reason why they were here, everyone in the room became cheerful, even though some of them were wearing a long face just a few moments ago. Because of Rain's words, Edward and Daisy exchanged surprised looks, which was the very first time they looked at each other after they stepped into the room. Edward suddenly remembered that he was supposed to be angry with Daisy, so he immediately looked away before Daisy could say anything.

"Wow! Really? A cake? You're not lying to me, are you, uncle Rain?" As a foodie, Justin was excited as long as there was something delicious. Everything else could wait when it came to food. Upon hearing the word 'cake', Justin's face lit up, his eyes turning into crescent shapes with joy. He looked adorable like that.

"Hey, little boy. Aren't you going to give a toast? Why do you only think about eating! To those who know you well, they know you're a foodie who couldn't wait to have a taste when you see food; but to those who don't know you, they might think you have been abused by your parents and starve for days! Rain wouldn't waste even the slightest chance to get back at Edward. Now that seeing Justin eagerly waiting for the cake, Rain couldn't help but strike again. Only this time, he made it seem like he was teasing Justin, but incidentally involved Edward on his joke. He felt justified, and the idea amuse him.

Chapter 382: Chapter 382: I Love You The Most (part one)

"The economy is at a downturn now. To ensure better development for the FX International Group in the future, I have no choice but to take only one meal in a day. Uncle Rain, I heard that you enjoy a high salary and bonus every month, how about you pay for all my expenses? Don't worry. I'm easily satisfied. You only have to buy a lot of delicious food for me, like lobsters, crabs, cubilose, and the like."

Justin said as he counted his favorite food with his fingers. His words sent a shiver down Rain's spine. Feeling weak, he collapsed into the sofa. 'My God! Is this what Justin meant by 'easily satisfied'? What about the children who grow up eating only vegetables? Does that mean that they are never satisfied?' Rain thought.

"Haha! Justin, you're indeed easily satisfied. You'd better live with your Uncle Rain, so you won't starve again. Then you can eat all your favorite food, which is common to him everyday."

Tom gloated mischievously, fueling the flame. He marveled at Justin's imagination. He casually demanded for rare and luxury food as if it was common. And he shamelessly claimed that he was easily satisfied. Was he joking? He felt lucky that Justin wasn't telling him that, otherwise he would go crazy.

Damn it, Tom! You're not standing in my shoes and you're talking irresponsibly. Only a rich man like our boss can reach his standards and afford such a life. But I'm only a poor breadwinner, how could I possibly satisfy the simple needs he mentioned just now? But I don't think it will be a problem for you. I heard that running a hospital is very profitable, you can earn easy money by finding ways to exploit patients. Since you're the superintendent of the hospital, does that mean you get the most profit?"

When it came to verbal arguments, Rain couldn't beat Edward. But if the opponent was Tom, he was confident that he wouldn't lose to this gentleman. If Tom wanted to set him up, it was next to impossible.

"Okay, stop arguing. Let's share this cake to celebrate the event!"

Duke looked sullen the whole time. Belinda seemed indifferent to him today. Although he took her in his arms, she still completely ignored him and chatted cheerfully with the handsome Brian next to her. Duke was pissed off, he really had the urge to give that guy a good thrashing. But Daisy brought him here, so he couldn't do anything to him. He had to suppress the anger in his heart and remain silent.

Come on! Little boy, let's see if you're able to eat such a big cake." Tom placed the two-tiered cake on the table. At the sight of the cake, Justin exclaimed excitedly to himself, "Wow! It's a French mousse cake!" He knew that French mousse cakes were delicate in shape, and rich in color and taste. He liked the pure and natural taste. It was extremely delicious?when?served?chilled. Its one-of-the-kind flavor made it unique in everyone's eyes. A foodie like Justin certainly couldn't resist such temptation.

"Uncle Tom, I love you the most! I've changed my mind. I've decided that I will follow you in the future. I can learn medical skills from you and also have delicious cakes to eat. That's wonderful!" Justin said, jumping to Tom and planting a kiss on his cheek. Tom was shocked by his sudden remarks and his actions. This naughty boy! He shouldn't scare him like that! He would really shock people to death with his careless remarks. Justin had better find someone else to play this game with. Tom couldn't stand his whimsical jokes. It would drive him nuts.

"Oh, don't do that. I think you'd better go back to your own house. My place is too small, and you're such an honorable guest, I'm afraid that you won't feel very comfortable in my house." Tom figured he'd better keep a distance from Justin to avoid any trouble, so after he finished cutting the cake, he immediately fled away. He didn't want to be the recipient of Justin's shocking remarks again. If he continued to stay with Justin, he would unwittingly fall into his trap.

"Uncle Ouyang, they all dislike me. Will you take me with you? I don't want to be starved." Seeing Rain and Tom running away from him as if he was a monster, Justin turned to focus his attention on Brian, who was drinking red wine leisurely. Justin's appellation to Brian made people who wondered about his identity realize that he was from Ouyang family. They looked more puzzled, why was the man with Daisy? Wasn't Daisy estranged from her family?

Okay, but I have some rules. If you want to live with me, you'll eat with me, no other conditions. You can only eat whatever is prepared for us. Do you still want to live me? Brian displayed a charming smile. He looked agreeable with his bright grin. Such a warm smile made him look relaxed. At the same time, it was a visual delight to others. After he finished speaking, Tom and Rain who had hidden themselves from Justin shot an admiring look at Brian. His answer was very wise. He showed his generosity without compromising his principles. Compared to Brian, Tom and Rain weren't good at handling such matters. As the saying went, as in the Yangtze River the waves behind drive on those ahead, so each new generation excels the last one. Brian, as a representative of the new generation, really bested them in the wisdom of words.

Daisy looked doubtfully between Justin and Brian, wondering when the two got to know each other. She was surprised that they seemed to get along well even without any introduction.

Ah! No conditions? Can I have some requirements? Believing Brian was the only people in his mother's family who was good to her, Justin liked talking with him. Otherwise, he wouldn't even glance at him.

Little boy, what do you want? Brian looked at Justin, flashing a bright and playful smile. He remembered that when he was Justin's age, he often followed the melancholy young girl who was a few years older than him. Time flies, and everything has changed with the passage of time. The young girl in the past had become the mother of a small boy, while he became a real man. Seeing the lively Justin in that moment made him feel very emotional.

Chapter 383: Chapter 383: I Love You The Most (part two)

"Okay! I'll find someone else who'd like to take me." Justin glanced over the room and finally settled on Duke, his eyes flashing a cunning smile.

"Justin, don't even think about it. Although I can provide the food you want, your mischievousness is unpredictable, I don't know what else you'll demand from me. You'd better go back to where you belong! I don't want my home to become the trial base for your destruction."

Duke made himself clear before Justin said anything. Duke wasn't an idle man who had time to find trouble for himself. He decided to keep a distance from the wicked boy immediately. He was already in trouble, he wasn't in the mood to deal with Justin now.

Justin pursed his lips and sniffled, pretending to be hurt. He suddenly turned around and ran towards Edward. He threw himself into Edward's arms, regardless of everything. The cream on the corner of his mouth fell on Edward's black shirt as he cried bitterly, "Dad, they all hate me! Since you're my dad, promise that you won't abandon me like they did." Justin tucked his head on Edward's shoulder, rubbing his head like a spoiled child. He seemed to have completely forgotten that he had irritated Edward earlier.

"You finally realize that I'm the best. But why did you help someone anger me earlier?" Edward frowned. He patted Justin's back in comfort while despairing of his new shirt that Justin had just ruined. When he mentioned "someone, " he glanced at Daisy.

"I'm sorry! Dad, you're the best father in the world. I promise I won't make you angry anymore." Everyone present thought that Justin was such a brown-noser. They wondered why such an intelligent man like Edward would accept such flattery. What a strange world! Daisy smiled. It surprised her to see Edward holding a grudge for such a trifling thing. She'd never seen this childish side of Edward before. She thought that an arrogant and noble man like Edward would always look superior and be cool about everything. But Daisy thought that Edward seemed narrow-minded by saying that.

While everybody was enjoying themselves, a piercing ringing suddenly filled the room. The creepy ringtone was the kind of music in the horror movies, shocking everyone into silence. They turned to the direction of the ringing.

When they finally pinpointed the person responsible, they were horrified. Wasn't he worried that such a ringtone would frighten the already fragile patients in the hospital? Or was he doing it on purpose so he could charge fees for saving them when they fainted? It was really a dirty business. This must be how they made money in hospital.

"Sorry, I have to take this call." Under the pressure of being the center of everyone's attention, Tom took out his phone from his pocket and pretended to look embarrassed. But when he saw the name on the screen, he unwittingly frowned and wondered why she was calling him so late.

Everyone shot him a disapproving look at his apology, but when they heard the name Tom spoke on the phone, they focused their attention on him again. Tom had to continue talking on the phone despite knowing that everyone was staring at him.

"Yes! Okay, I'll go there right now. Send me the address." Tom hung up the phone under everyone's prying eyes. At the same time, he hurriedly prepared to leave.

"What happened to Leena?" asked Duke who slavishly doted on his sister. Wasn't Kevin at home? Did anything bad happen to Leena? Duke looked deeply concerned.

"Her hand got burned during cooking, and it seems a little serious. You know that she can't stand the smell of disinfectant in the hospital. I have to go to her place myself. You enjoy yourselves. I'll take my leave." Tom explained hastily. Because he spoke to Kevin over the phone and not Leena herself, he had a feeling that Leena's condition might be a bit serious, otherwise she would've called him herself.

"What? Leena got burned? I'll go with you." As soon as Duke heard the news, he immediately stood up and was eager to see her. Although Leena married Kevin without his consent, he would always love and care about her. He got worried when he heard that Leena was hurt.

Let's go. We're coming with you, too." Edward said, standing up with Justin in his arms. Edward always treated Leena as a sister. He became restless when he heard about Leena's situation and wouldn't feel relieved until he was sure that Leena was okay.

So that's it for today. I'll go with you and visit Leena, Rain said. He got worried at the news. She used to be a popular woman among her male friends before she got married. Everyone felt flustered at the bad news. They wondered how Kevin would react when he saw so many people at his house. He would probably get very nervous. He only called for a doctor. He probably didn't expect his call to bring the most prestigious CEOs in S City to his house.

Chapter 384: Chapter 384: A Precious Person (part one)

Justin was the last one to leave. He wanted to finish his mousse cake! What bad luck, he just started enjoying it. Can't he finish the cake first? But everyone was busy leaving and no one noticed his reluctance to go. They filed out of Sexy World in a few minutes.

"You can just go home, Brian. We're going to visit a friend." Daisy stopped to explain to Brian.

"I see, Sister. Take care." Brian reached out and hugged Daisy, leaving a gentle kiss on her forehead. Edward turned around and caught the moment. He got angry and his eyebrows went up. He had thought that Duke would be pissed off by Brian. But he didn't expect the curtain to fall before the drama could be played out. In the end, he was the one who got upset.

"Okay. You have drunk a little just now. Be careful and drive slowly." Daisy smoothed the folds of Brian's clothes. It was an ordinary yet intimate action, making Edward's jealousy grow. The car sped wildly down the road. He didn't speak to Daisy during the whole ride. He bottled up his unhappiness and stewed in silence.

The stars in the evening sky seemed to sparkle more in the gentle breeze in S City. Daisy looked out of the window during the drive, watching the street lights pass by in a flash. She was also curious why Leena got scalded while Kevin was home. Although many soldiers weren't so careful, Kevin was different. He always acted elegantly in public, as if he was born into nobility. While some people might lose their composure during training, Kevin always looked like energetic and dynamic. Other officers and soldiers admired him a lot. It's probably attributed to his family background. Otherwise, could anyone else display such elegance so perfectly?

Edward was tight-lipped. There was nothing but calmness on his handsome face. No one could read his mind as he stared at the road ahead. His big hands and long fingers held the steering wheel firmly. He seemed to be venting his anger out on the steering wheel.

In the backseat, Justin felt stressed out by the weird atmosphere. He shot concerned looks at his parents. His dad always doted on his mom. He couldn't understand why his dad suddenly seemed so unhappy with his mom today. As a child, Justin had difficulty understanding what adults were thinking.

In his luxurious house, Kevin had no idea what he was about to face. He walked to the door when he heard the doorbell. The moment he opened the door, he was stunned by the sight of the large number of people at his doorstep. He froze, at a loss with what to do. Some of his guests didn't even greet him and walked straight into the house.

Seeing Kevin's shock, Daisy smiled in amusement. Major General Gu always seemed so capable. It's rare to see such an awkward expression on his face. She didn't enter the house immediately. She stood at the entrance to tease him.

"What, have we caught the Chief of Staff off guard?" Daisy blinked, smiling meaningfully. She patted him on the shoulder before entering the house. The scene didn't escape Edward's notice. His cold face darkened even more. It turned out that Daisy wasn't unwilling to show her naughty side in front of others. It all depended on whom she's talking to, and judging from what he just saw, she regarded Kevin as someone more important than the rest. Otherwise, she wouldn't have acted so casually with him.

Leena was also inside. Obviously, she didn't expect this situation either. The moment she saw the group of people, she suddenly froze just as the great Chief of Staff Officer did. She just called for Tom. Why was everyone suddenly in her house?

"How are you, Leena? Does it hurt a lot?" Duke asked anxiously, rushing to Leena who was sitting on the sofa. She seemed to be suffering from a great deal of pain.

"Brother. Why are you here? It's just a minor injury. There's no need for all of you to come here and visit me. You are giving me a big shock." Leena moved her hand to hide it. She was afraid that Duke would get mad if he saw the blisters on her hand. She knew his temper well. She was the apple of his eye. If he found out that her wound was actually quite severe, he would get extremely worried about her. Moreover, she was worried that her brothers would blame Kevin for her injury.

Could you give me some space? Let me check her hand first! Luckily, there was always a medicine kit in Tom's car, and there was no need to worry about getting supplies. A talented doctor like him could cope well with minor scalds.

Everyone was concerned about Leena's injury, but none of them were doctors. Even though they were unwilling to leave, they moved away and allotted some space for Tom. It would be terrible if Leena wasn't treated carefully.

Show me your hand Leena. Tom sat down beside her. He took out all the scald medicine in his kit and set them somewhere accessible.

Now? Really? Leena looked at everyone in hesitation. She didn't think that her injury was severe at all, but Kevin insisted on taking her to the hospital. Because she didn't want to, she turned to Tom. But she didn't expect everyone to show up. How could she accept something like this? If she had known, she'd have gone to the hospital and endured the smell of disinfectant instead of called Tom.

Yes! Let me check, so I know which medicine to use. Tom looked at Leena sternly, trying to see her hidden hand. He frown slightly. If his guess was right, her injury wasn't minor at all. Or she wouldn't hesitate in front of everyone.

Kevin was the last one to enter, so he was isolated from the crowd. Looking at everyone's concern, he realized for the first time how Leena was important to them. Meanwhile, he was also getting stressed. He could hardly imagine how they would react when they saw the blisters on her hand.
