

My Wife is a beautiful Officer Chapter 635 - Chapter 635: We Are Family (part one)

Chapter 635: Chapter 635: We Are Family (part one)

"Well, I shouldn't have expected anything from you. Daisy, I'd better get back to the hospital now. I need to prepare for the operation this afternoon," said Tom. Since he was used to Edward's oppressive behavior towards him, he wasn't affected by his sharp tongue at all. He just promptly picked up the medicine box.

Are you leaving now? It's almost time for lunch. Why don't you have lunch here before you go back to the hospital?" Daisy asked. After ensuring that Daisy's wound was healing nicely, Tom was eager to leave. While Edward took his help for granted, Daisy was a little embarrassed. After all, they had troubled Tom for a long time without even thanking him. They couldn't let him leave without showing their gratitude.

No, I'll have lunch after I return to the hospital. I'm afraid that if I eat in front of him, I would lose my appetite. If I don't have enough energy, it will affect the operation in the afternoon. That will be horrible for the patient," Tom answered.

Tom shot a meaningful look at Edward. Obviously, he was referring to him. Actually, he really needed to get back to the hospital now. It wasn't related to Edward at all. He was only saying that to get Daisy's sympathy.

Good! Tom, I haven't abandoned you, but you're abandoning me first. It seems that you've gained a lot of courage these days." Edward said the words one by one through gritting teeth, narrowing his eyes quietly at Tom. Although Edward currently looked calm, people who were familiar with him knew that the expression on his face meant that he was in a bad mood. If they didn't quickly escape, the consequences would be dire for them. At the sight, Tom hurriedly walked out of the room without waiting for Edward to finish talking. Before he walked out, he turned around to Daisy and said, "Goodbye, Daisy. I'll invite you to dinner once I'm free."

"This guy really runs fast," Edward commented. The corners of his mouth twitched. It seemed that Tom realized that his words were getting on Edward's nerves. Otherwise, he wouldn't have quickly run away as if he was escaping a pack of savage beasts. In fact, from Tom's perspective, Edward was more horrible than a pack of savage beasts. He needed to get away from him as soon as possible.

"You were so mean to him, that's why he was so eager to leave. Who would want to stay and suffer your sharp tongue?" Daisy teased him peevishly. She did not understand Tom and Edward's friendship. How could they be good friends when they were always arguing like that?

"Are you taking his side?" Edward asked in a threatening tone. He sat down next to her and reached out his hand to twirl a strand of her hair.

"If I say yes, what will you do to me?" Daisy picked up the cup of water on the coffee table and took an elegant sip. She didn't seem to worry about the threat in his words.

"What punishment do you want, honey?" He asked with a wicked glint in his eyes. At the same time, his hand quietly moved away from her hair. He caressed her previously injured cheek, touching it lightly. After Tom's treatment, he could hardly see the injury. But the memory of its existence was deeply engraved in his heart forever, and became a constant reminder that he wasn't able to protect her well.

"How about training with me for a while?" Her eyes sparkled with excitement. Probably because she had been resting for a long time, Daisy felt that her body and mind were getting slower. She thought it was necessary for her to exercise.

"No, I'm not a fool. You will beat me hard," Edward said quickly. His hand paused for a moment, before he finally withdrew his hand. The reason he refused to practice with her wasn't because he was afraid of getting beaten roughly. He was still worried about her injury. He was afraid that her body hadn't fully recovered yet, so he refused her without hesitation.

"Forget it, I'll go to the military base tomorrow to look for Hawkeye and train with him. It's the same thing." Daisy didn't force him to train with her, snuggling up in his arms. She felt comfortable in the position. She enjoyed relaxing like this with her husband. Such moments would disappear soon.

"What? Are you going back to work tomorrow?" asked Edward. He was a little shocked. He did not expect her to suddenly mention the matter of going back to work. It took him a while to respond.

"Yes. I'm all right now. I should go back to work," Daisy replied, frowning slightly. Because of her injury, her work had been piling up for days. If she didn't return to work quickly, it would only get bigger and bigger. It would definitely not be good for her.

"But you haven't fully recovered yet." Edward looked at her anxiously and began to regret not agreeing to her request. If he had, would she not be in such a hurry to go back to work?

"It's fine. I just need to deal with some paperwork. There aren't any special tasks to come out recently, so you don't need to be worried," Daisy reassured him. Speaking of work, Daisy felt a little guilty towards Leena. During this time, there was a special training ongoing abroad. It was her turn to go to the training. But because of her injury, Kevin had to take her place instead. Because of this, he didn't have time to spend with Leena.

"It's good that you know I'm worried. No matter what. I hope you will value your own life above all else. I'm most insistent on this point. I hope that for me, you will take good care of yourself, Edward said seriously.

His eyes dimmed a little. How would he naive enough to believe that she would only handle regular documents once she went back to the military base? There should be all kinds of training waiting for her! But it was her job, and he couldn't interfere too much. He could only plead with her to take good care of herself.

Chapter 636: Chapter 636: We Are Family (part two)

"Oh, are you reluctant to part with me?" Daisy asked. She settled herself completely against his arms. Her slender fingers kept playing with the buttons on his shirt. Under the circumstances, she was a bit like a spoiled little woman who enjoyed the comfort of her husband's affections.

"Of course not. Once you leave my side, I can invite beautiful women for a meal." Edward deliberately teased her. But his eyes were full of love when he looked at Daisy. The meaning behind his gaze was completely different from his words.

Then we'll be even. In the military base, there is no shortage of handsome men." Listening to Edward's words gave Daisy joy. The man was really surprising. She used to think that he was a stiff and boring man, but the appropriate banter between husband and wife was enjoyable.

"Honey, are you mad at me?" Edward's eyes narrowed dangerously. He stared fiercely at the cozy little woman in his arms. When did she become so mischievous? She even learned to tease him!

"No, I'm only describing the facts," answered Daisy. Now, she was even daring to say no to him! Her attitude clearly showed that she was actually mad at him. Hearing Daisy's reply drove him crazier.

It seems you're honest enough despite the cost of upsetting me," Edward growled. His tone was a bit aggressive. As he spoke, his handsome face slowly loomed over Daisy.

Hey, what are you doing?" Daisy gulped, finally feeling a trace of uneasiness. The wicked look on Edward's face made him seem dangerous.

"Are you afraid of me now? Too late." His thin lips covered her mouth without warning. A hint of anger was evidently showed in his punishing kiss as he took the breath away from her.

But Daisy wasn't the same woman she was a few months ago. She had learned to breathe while kissing, and she also knew how to respond to him. Now, she accepted all the anger he vented out on her while simultaneously filling the kiss with tenderness to dissolve his rage. Soon, their kiss progressed with enthusiastic groping.

"Sorry! I didn't mean to walk in on you." Someone suddenly exclaimed in embarrassment. It was Cynthia. This was the second time that she caught them in a compromising position. But it wasn't her fault this time, they were kissing in a public place! Daisy's first reaction was to bury her head into Edward's arms from the mortification. Her face instantly flushed at their carelessness. They completely forgot that they were currently in the living room where anyone could walk in on them.

On the contrary, Edward was not the slightest bit ashamed. He glanced at Cynthia without a hint of embarrassment on his face. He calmly said, "Since you didn't do it on purpose, why don't you just pretend you haven't seen us?"

Boy, you can't make me turn back around and go out again! Don't you know it's raining outside?" Cynthia huffed. From the raindrops on her wet hair, it wasn't difficult to see that it was raining outside.

"Mom, ignore him. You know he has been acting strange recently. I guess something is not right in his mind." Daisy stood up from Edward's arms. She looked out the window with a slight frown. As Cynthia said, it was raining outside. And it was raining heavily.

Yes, I've noticed! Probably because his confinement is too long," said Cynthia. As soon as Cynthia finished talking, Edward sprayed out the water he just drank. Fortunately, he was sitting on the sofa and hadn't sprinkled Daisy and Cynthia with water. The corners of Daisy's mouth twitched. Sure enough, Cynthia and Edward were related. They kept countering each other with unique insults. Their imagination was extraordinarily good.

"Are you really my mother? You're so mean to your son. And you! My beloved wife! Good. You even said that your husband is sick in mind!" Edward stood up from his seat with an injured look. He sulked his way upstairs, looking pathetic.

"Is he angry?" Cynthia asked, looking at her son's retreating back in surprise. She was a little worried. Was Edward still blaming her? She knew that he resented her for not taking care of him in the past years. But after getting along with him in the time they had spent together lately, she thought that their relationship had improved a lot.

"No, he's just pretending. Why did you come back alone? Where's dad? Didn't he accompany you?" asked Daisy. Daisy wasn't worried about Edward at all. She knew that he just wanted to find an excuse to leave because he didn't know how to get along with Cynthia. After all, Rome wasn't built in a day. They needed more time before they could reach the same intimacy that other mothers and sons had. Because she was in the same situation, she could really understand his actions. If she was faced with her father, she would do the same thing.

Oh! He went to the Mayfly. He said that he has a surprise for you later." Cynthia knew about Jonathan's surprise. But she didn't want to tell Daisy and ruin it. It would be appropriate to let Jonathan tell her himself.

Oh, I wonder what it is... Daisy trailed off and immediately dropped the question. If Cynthia told her now, it wouldn't be a surprise anymore.

As for the Mayfly, Daisy just found out about its existence a few days ago. It was also then that she understood why Edward had to be sent abroad when he was a little child. After all, Jonathan and Cynthia just wanted to protect him. In the beginning, it was alright. Edward was just a little boy at that time. But it was a bit cruel to make him stay abroad on his own.

Chapter 637: Chapter 637: We Are Family (part three)

The Mayfly was neither a righteous nor an evil organization, so it was difficult to evaluate its existence at this time. But as long as it did not threaten the interests and peace of the country, it played a certain role in society. For now, Daisy decided to wait and see before making further judgments about the Mayfly. After all, it was not surprising that such an organization existed. It was just a matter of how people perceived it.

"Don't worry. We'll know the answer soon enough," Cynthia replied, patting Daisy on the shoulder. She always thought that her daughter-in-law was too thin. Especially after the injury, Daisy looked thinner now. The first time she saw her, she was in high and vigorous spirits. But now, she was quite different. It seemed that she was in need of Mrs. Wu's nutritious cooking.

"Well, I'm in no hurry." Daisy smiled lightly, maintaining a calm demeanor. Although she was a little curious about the surprise, she didn't insist on finding out more about it now. She was convinced that since it was a surprise, it would definitely be a good thing. There was no need to think about it so much. But she did not expect that Jonathan would give her a wonderful present when she nearly gave up bringing Yakira to justice for her crimes. Jonathan had the inspection records of her mother's car accident, with photographic evidence attaching to the documents. Moreover, the photos placed Paul Du at the scene. With so much evidence against her, Yakira was sent to prison again. And this time, she could never be released in her lifetime. Although Daisy felt sorry for Brian, she needed to avenge her poor mother.

Thank you, dad." A while after Jonathan explained everything to her, Daisy expressed her sincere gratitude. After all, she once thought that she could never find the evidence to send Yakira to jail. But he helped her get everything that she needed. At that moment, in addition to being immensely grateful, she was deeply moved by his actions.

"Don't forget, we are family. You don't need to thank me. Besides, we're just fulfilling the promise we made to your mother," Jonathan replied. This was the longest statement

Jonathan had ever made in front of another woman. From his words, it was clear that he treated Daisy as family.

"What kind of promise? You met my mother before?" Daisy suddenly got nervous. Although she wanted to gather every bit of information about her mother, she was afraid of finding out something she would rather not know. It was inevitable for her to feel a little bit of anxiety.

"Do you know why we arranged for your marriage to Edward regardless of his objections? When your mother got into the car accident, we happened to be there. So we had the first-hand information about the accident. To be honest, your mother really loved you a lot. Otherwise, she wouldn't ask us to help take care of you at such a crucial moment. She didn't even care about her own safety. In her heart, you are always the priority," Cynthia recounted.

Every time she remembered the tragic scene from that time, she couldn't help getting tear-eyed. Her voice trembled with deep emotion as she spoke.

Edward immediately took Daisy in his arms. He never thought that this was the reason his parents made him marry Daisy no matter how much he objected. But after they got married, instead of giving her happiness, he inflicted both physical and mental hurt upon her. In this case, didn't he fail to live up to the faith his mother-in-law entrusted to his parents?

He gently kissed the top of her head. At first, he was thrilled at the news of Yakira being sent to prison. But he didn't think he would fall into the abyss of pain so quickly. The pain he felt was because of his mother-in-law's great maternal love. Edward loved Daisy dearly. He could only give her more love and affection to reduce the distress he had previously caused her. Only then could his mother-in-law rest in peace.

Edward wasn't the only one who was caught off guard. Daisy didn't expect it either. But what shocked her more was her mother's love for her. She did not know how to express the shock she felt in the depths of her heart. She could only let the tears blur her vision and wet Edward's clothes.

She did not expect that her mother was the one who arranged her marriage. Maybe it was destiny that led her to find her other half. But on the way, she neglected her mother's expectations and did not live as her mother had wished. Fortunately, she lowered her pride and gave Edward a chance. They could live happily today.

Now, she cherished this hard-earned happiness very much. Not only for her own sake, but also for her mother's ardent wishes, she wouldn't allow herself to live in a horrible life. She needed to live happily as her mother wished for her. This would be the best gift she could give her mother.

As for Leo, she did not want to forgive him. Even though he was already alone, the hatred she felt for him was a kind of deeply rooted resentment that she couldn't let go. Maybe one day, she would be able to forgive him and not hold onto his mistakes anymore. But that was nearly impossible. However, she was not a cold-blooded animal, so she would never hinder anyone around her from contacting him. This was the only thing that she would do for him. If he wanted to repair their relationship, it would be very difficult. After all, they didn't have a mediator that would provide the opportunity to help her forgive him.

Chapter 638: Chapter 638: A Visit to the Cemetery (part one)

Daisy visited the cemetery once again. The different thing about it this time was that besides Justin, Edward also came with her. Daisy's heartbeat pounded in her ears. Today, she would introduce her husband to her mother. Because of her mother's wishes, she ended up marrying her beloved Edward. She thanked her mother for bringing her into this world and arranging a happy marriage for her.

Mom, I bring a very important man with me today. Are you excited? You chose him for me." Daisy gently stroked her mother's portrait with deep affection. There was a touch of melancholy in her eyes, but she displayed a happy smile on her face. Edward was the best present that she wanted to show to her mother.

"Thank you for your deep love for me. Thank you for carefully arranging my life before you passed away. Thank you for your constant attention to every aspect of my life. Thank you for everything you did for me. I know that you don't want my gratitude, but I still want to express my gratefulness for all the things you've done for me. All because I'm your daughter, the little girl you cared most about," Daisy murmured in a choked voice. To prevent the tears from running down her cheeks, she bit her lower lip. She didn't want her mother to see her cry. She just wanted her to see her most beautiful smile. She owed her mother so much. Even after she was gone, she was still taking care of her.

Edward pressed his lips tightly together. He gently placed the bouquet in his hand in front of the tombstone. With a sad look, he slowly knelt down in front of the grave. Daisy's eyes widened in shock at the sight.

"Mom, thank you for bringing Daisy into my life. I know she suffered miserably before we got married. I promise you right now that she'll always be your little princess Jasmine. I vow to love her dearly until my last breath. After all, fate brought us together when we were little."

The expression in Edward's eyes was sincere. Despite his trembling voice, he was resolute in his determination. He had expected that mentioning the name 'Jasmine' would definitely catch Daisy's attention, but he didn't intend to continue concealing it. He wanted to show Daisy that she wasn't alone in loving someone dearly for so many years. He also fell in love with her years before they got married. She was just a young girl back then, but he had been struck by her beauty that he hadn't stopped missing her since they parted ways.

"Honey, what did you say?" Daisy was in great shock. This was the second time that Edward had shocked her with his actions today. She looked at his fascinating silhouette with uncertainty. She didn't expect him to kneel down. He was such a proud and noble man, but he did so without hesitation. Although she was surprised, Daisy felt grateful towards him. Edward loved and respected her and respected her mother just as much.

"You heard me, Jasmine." Edward slowly stood up after kowtowing to the tombstone a few times. He stared at Daisy who looked at him in complete astonishment. Daisy was an experienced colonel. She always remained calm because no difficulty was too much for her. But Edward left her in great shock twice today. She found it hard to restrain her emotions after he moved her so much with his actions.

"Did we meet each other when we were young? I can hardly remember anything about it." Despite the hopeful look on her face, Daisy was uncertain because there was no such memory in her recollection.

"But I remember it clearly. I'll protect you this time, okay? I still owe you a story, remember?" Edward stared at Daisy, wondering how she would react. He still remembered how the story upset her last time.

Is it related to K City?" Daisy thought of the city full of the sweet scent of jasmine flowers and the name of the hotel with a profound meaning. The city carried the wonderful memory of a beautiful girl that Edward could never forget.

Yes. Do you know why I named the hotel Jasmine Fragrance? When I first met you, you were holding jasmine flowers in your hands. The faint scent of the jasmine slowly reached me through the breeze. You looked up at me with a flushed face and asked me if I knew what the flowers were called."

Edward looked into the distance, his eyes sparking brightly. He was completely immersed in the memory. The image of their first meeting seemed to conjure itself in front of him. Back then, her appearance brought him hope despite the fact that she had interrupted him. Hearing her tender voice, he was shocked to realize that he still had many things to do.

If the little girl hadn't stopped him, he would have chosen to climb to the top of the mountain and jump down. If she sealed his lips with a gentle kiss, he would have died. If she hadn't asked him to wait for her, he would have left everything in the world behind.

"Are you telling me that I was that little girl? Are you sure?" Daisy asked with uncertainty. How was that possible? Although she had good luck recently, she didn't think that she could forget such a memory.

"I'm pretty sure. Don't you find some places in K City familiar? Like the pavilion in the forest park." Although Edward said that Daisy didn't need to remember their first meeting, he still held a glimmer of hope in his heart. He wanted her to remember him. This might be his hope as a proud man. He wanted to be unique in the heart of the person he loved.

"That pavilion halfway up the mountain?" Daisy looked at Edward with amazement. No wonder she found it familiar when she saw it. Had she really been there as Edward said? But why didn't she have any memory of it?

"Yes. Right there. I remember some bold girl flirting with me at a very young age." Thinking of the consequence of that unexpected kiss made Edward shake his head helplessly. Jasmine had kissed him at the time. From then on, he couldn't bear another woman touching his lips, not until Daisy appeared.

"Nonsense! Do think that you can slander me just because I can't remember what you're talking about. I am never a flirt! More importantly, I like handsome men. Were you handsome when you were a child?" Daisy instantly blushed. She didn't believe that she would kiss an older boy when she was a young girl.

"You just said that you can't remember it. Then how can you say that you didn't do it? It's clearly obvious that I was a cute and handsome child. That's why I'm so stunning now." As Edward fixed his eyes on Grace's warm smile, he decided from the bottom of his heart that he would love Daisy ardently for the rest of his life no matter what happened.

"Dad, you're a liar! Mom is shy. She wouldn't take the initiative to get close to a boy." Justin had been quietly listening to his parents and finally expressed his opinion. In his heart, he had to protect his mom. It was natural for him to take her side.

"Your mom only became shy after all the suffering she endured. She was bold back when she was a little girl. Son, don't talk about things you don't know about." Edward waved his hand in an attempt to shut his son up.

"I agree with Justin on this. I don't admit that I have a congenitally bad gene. If you want to discredit me, you'd better find a better excuse." To be honest, Daisy wasn't sure if she really did that in the past. But because she didn't want Edward to tease her afterwards, she denied it.

Chapter 639: Chapter 639: A Visit to the Cemetery (part two)

"I don't care if you believe it or not. I'm the one who benefits the most from the knowledge anyway. There is no need to argue with you over this." Edward gave a soft smile and tucked Daisy's windblown hair behind her ear. Although he had done this countless times before, the action always moved Daisy every time.

"Can you tell me what makes you so sure that the little girl was me?" Daisy couldn't help becoming curious about it. Edward never mentioned the matter before. Even when they went to K City a while back, he didn't hint anything about this.

"I found a photo album in Justin's backpack. It was filled with photos of your childhood. The little girl in the photos is just as beautiful as the image I have kept in my memory for many years." Edward didn't hide the emotions he had kept hidden in his heart for so long. The girl from his memory turned out to be Daisy. The fact excited him to no end.

"You can't come to the conclusion that I'm that girl just from a few old photos." Daisy confirmed Edward's words step by step. She knew very well that the higher she raised her hopes, the more disappointed she would be. She didn't dare to get too excited before she was absolutely certain.

"And the pet name Jasmine. That should be enough to dispel your doubts." Edward frowned. Daisy was very confident in everything else. But why was she always so suspicious when it came to him? In his opinion, this wasn't a good thing.

"So you really did say 'Jasmine' that day. I thought I had misheard you." Daisy stopped questioning Edward's certainty. Her pursuit in the past hadn't been in vain. It turned out that Edward fell in love with her a long time ago as well.

Yeah. I knew that you weren't smart enough, but I didn't expect that I could fool you so easily. You're as innocent and pure as a child in front of me. I like it." Edward ignored Justin's presence and gathered Daisy emotionally into his arms. Justin displayed a large smile on his face without making a sound. He basked in the happy moment that his parents shared in front of him.

The presentation of the new weapons would proceed as scheduled. Since Kevin was training overseas, Daisy was the best coordinator for the major event. She got so busy that she hardly had time to go back home.

Colonel Ouyang, I've brought the data you want." After getting demoted, Hank Han gained insight on a lot of things and behaved himself.

Thank you, Lieutenant Colonel Han." Daisy wasn't the kind of person to bear a grudge. She had forgiven what Hank did to her in the past. Since Hank was determined to mend his ways, she wouldn't dredge up the past again.

Don't call me Lieutenant Colonel Han. I was demoted a long time ago. I'm just a junior officer now." Hank touched his head in embarrassment. He was no longer insidious and cunning. Now, he looked modest and gentle.

Work hard. I believe that you'll get promoted to lieutenant colonel again in the near future." There was a sincere expression on Daisy's face. Hank had become a lieutenant colonel with his own painstaking efforts. He didn't rely on any external force. As long as he corrected his thoughts, he would definitely rise up the ranks soon.

Thank you. I'll take my leave now." Hank felt a lot lighter after he stopped unrealistically comparing himself with Daisy. He didn't know what annoyed him before. Was it because he wasn't convinced that a woman could be better than him? Maybe there were other reasons. The puzzle niggled in his mind. Either way, he had chosen to turn over a new leaf. He believed that a bright future was in store for him.

Okay. Go for it." Daisy was gratified. She no longer felt that she owed Hank's kind mother a huge debt. To repay his mother, she didn't fight back no matter how much he provoked her in the past. Since he had decided to start anew, they could work together on good terms moving forward.

Daisy was pleased to see the change in Hank, but Jessica's suffering distressed her. Although Jessica used to treat her so harshly, she couldn't get pregnant anymore. This fate was too cruel for a woman.

Whatever a man sows, he shall reap. Jessica had only herself to blame for such a tragic end. One should never intend to do harm to others, but should always guard against any harm others might do to him. Unfortunately, Jessica had ignored this and she got what she deserved.

As for Mary, without Yakira's protection, her fate was imaginable. Daisy wondered if she had learned from the mistakes of the past. But as it stood now, Mary should feel lucky. Compared to Jessica, she didn't lose so much.

What Daisy didn't understand was why Hero would bear all the crimes on his own. Although he was an arms dealer, he didn't commit any serious crime in this matter. Yet in the end, he still made the choice. Moreover, he kept repeatedly requesting for a meeting with Daisy. Should Daisy make time and meet him to find out what he wanted?

Daisy's phone rang, bringing her back from her thoughts. She chuckled to herself. Why was she suddenly distracted? Shaking her head to clear her thoughts, Daisy picked up the phone from the table. At the sight of the caller's name, she let out a big smile.

"Hello. It's me. What's wrong?" Her husband was a proud and charming man. Was she lucky to have such a husband?

"Why? Do I need to have a problem to call you? Colonel Ouyang, I think you have forgotten something. In addition to being an esteemed colonel, you're also a wife and mother." Edward handed the signed document to Anna, who was waiting nearby. He nodded at her, gesturing for her to go out. Then he lazily leaned back against the backrest.

"It seems you missed a role." Daisy knew that Edward was going crazy. She was so busy with the presentation that she hadn't gone home in the past few days. To save time, she just slept in the residential building at the base. She had originally planned to go home tonight to comfort her husband who seemed aggrieved lately, but Edward unexpectedly called her himself.

So you do know it." Edward didn't call to blame Daisy. He just wanted to tell her that he had to go abroad for a business trip for a couple of days.

Yes. I'm your wife. I know it clearly." After staying with Edward for long, Daisy found that she had become quite cheeky. She didn't know if it was a good thing.

"Good to hear that. Do you know how many days you have been away from home?" Edward felt wronged. He knew that being in the military was difficult, but he didn't expect how tough it was to be a colonel's husband.

It has been four days by now. But you dropped by once. Can you cross one out from my charges?" Daisy started to miss Justin. She was so busy that she didn't have time to think about things outside work.

"I have no objections if you don't feel ashamed." Edward grinned. Daisy knew Edward well enough to bargain with him. She knew that he wouldn't get angry from her teasing.

Why would I feel ashamed? I am with the most shameless man in the world and he is such a good teacher. I have much to learn from him." Daisy enjoyed teasing Edward lately. It was fun to tease him when she knew he wouldn't get angry and had no chance to retaliate against her. He had taught her well.
