

My Wife is a beautiful Officer Chapter 811 - Chapter 810: The Wedding Ceremony (part one)

Chapter 811: Chapter 810: The Wedding Ceremony (part one)

"Belinda, are you nervous?" Belinda saw Sherry sit beside her as the beautician worked on fixing her makeup. Her skin was already naturally flawless and smooth but she still desired to look nicer. She was the bride today after all. She wanted to show everyone her most beautiful side on her wedding day. Thus, the beautician's work was a necessity.

No, why should I feel nervous?" Belinda took a deep breath. Well, she was indeed having some butterflies in her stomach but that didn't mean that she needed to admit that, right?

You don't have to put on a brave face for me. Don't forget that I have been married too." Sherry knew how stubborn her daughter was. Everyone could sense her jitters filling the room from wall to wall and yet, she still wouldn't admit it no matter what.

"I know that you are married, okay? Or you wouldn't have me, would you?" The bride rolled her eyes at her mother's words. If her mother hadn't married her father, her father would have tons of women other than her mother now. And he would never be the man he was, who spoiled her mother for so many years. Of course, she didn't dare to say these words in front of her mother. Her mother wouldn't let her off easily if she did. It was her wedding day and any type of trouble was definitely not invited.

"Who says that I couldn't have you if I weren't married?" Sherry looked strangely at Belinda. Time had changed, and so did people's opinions. Nowadays was never like before. Any women could have a baby even before getting married. That idea was not being frowned upon anymore like how it was in ancient times. Girls who got pregnant before marriage were being punished really hard before. It was different now and she couldn't even imagine anyone who would blink an eye about it.

"Oh! I see. Well, I guess you just told me the truth! Do you mean that I was born before you and dad married each other? Am I right?" A glint of playfulness showed in Belinda's beautiful eyes as she acted like a child who found a big secret. Huh, no wonder both of her parents weren't opposed to the idea of her getting married to Duke so quickly. It seemed that they were even more open-minded than her when they were her age.

"Are you laughing at me now, missy? Careful. See if I will get back at you later." Sherry's face was suddenly all red due to Belinda's teasing. She glared at her daughter with no real malice.

"I just asked you a question, that's all! Besides, you said it yourself first. I'm just curious! I didn't do anything wrong!" Bantering back and forth with her mother made Belinda's nerves calm down. Her whole body wasn't feeling as stiff as it was before either. She finally felt relaxed about what was about to happen later on.

"Well, I will let you off easy this time since it's your big day after all. But...all jokes aside, I'm quite worried about you." A silent sigh escaped from Sherry. She hadn't gotten the time to teach her daughter how to be a proper wife. How fast was it that she was already getting married today? She could just hope that Duke would be a nice husband and tolerate her shortcomings. Yes, those or their lives after marriage would definitely be a mess.

"You don't have to worry about me, okay? I'm not going somewhere far away, I'm just getting married. And I will still be here, near you. I bet you can even hear me when I sneeze!" Belinda laughed heartily. Duke would never-ever treat her bad. Her life after marriage was the least she was worried about.

"Well, I'm indeed worried about you, that's for sure. But I worry more about Duke. It would be extremely tiring to marry a woman like you. You're so stubborn and can't even do a thing." Sherry truly liked Duke to be her son-in-law not only because he was mature and calm but he also didn't have any scandal with other women. That was the most important thing in her eyes. She really trusted Duke with her daughter and knew her daughter would be treated right.

"Mom! How could you say that about your own daughter? Am I adopted or what?" Talking about this, Belinda got very upset. Her parents had been considering and treating Duke like he was their own son since the day they met him. All they could see was their son-in-law. How about her? She was their daughter! To be honest, all those acts had made her a bit jealous.

"Oh, I'd love it if you are. It would have saved me a lot of trouble. It is unfortunate that you are not adopted." Just like every mother, Sherry kept complaining about her daughter non-stop. Nonetheless, she was extremely protective of Belinda and cared so much about her.

"Well, mom, I'm sorry. I will definitely come to see you and dad often." A mild sadness got into Belinda's heart as thoughts of leaving her parents in that big house crossed her mind. It was fortunate that she wouldn't live so far away from them because Duke's house was just nearby. She could surely arrange her time and visit them every week.

"Well, if you don't come back here, your father and I can still go and see you, right? Unless you don't want us to come." Sherry didn't let her sadness last long because it was Belinda's big day. Her daughter's wedding day should be happy. Soon and she was already back to smiling.

"Oh God! Mom! Why are you saying these now? Please don't be like this. I know you don't want me to leave. You are going to make me cry!" She was never the type to get emotional easily but hearing her mom say those things made her want to shed tears in an instant.

"Who says I don't want you to leave? Don't flatter yourself. Well, I'm going to check on your father and see if he's ready." Sherry hurriedly stood up and left as she did not want Belinda to see her tears.

Belinda's eyes darkened. Her mother might not confess it but she knew it well that she did not want her to leave. After all, she had been abroad for so long and had very little time to be with her parents. The marriage was so soon and now she had to leave again. It seemed that her parents only raised her for this day as she hadn't gotten much chance to enjoy a little more time with them.

It wasn't a big wedding ceremony and most of the guests were their close friends and families. However, the crowd number still reached a little over a hundred, thus, the house was suddenly jam-packed and busy.

Duke had never been this happy. It was almost magical how his heart skipped a beat upon seeing his bride in her wedding dress. Awestruck was not even enough to describe what he felt. He had never seen her this beautiful. He had already given all the red packets he had to the bridesmaids just to be near her. Worse, they had almost peeled him off his clothes, which made his face lose all its color. It was lucky that Rain drew all the bridesmaids' attention away from him using his good looks. Thus, he finally had the chance to successfully pick up his bride.

Chapter 812: Chapter 811: The Wedding Ceremony (part two)

What he didn't expect though was that Rachel heard about their wedding from a god-knows-where. She was even aware that their wedding ceremony was being held in his house. Blinded by jealousy, she managed to pass through the guards and mix with the crowd. Something evil was reeling inside her head as she carefully hid behind people and waited for her opportunity. She wanted to breakeven for not getting Duke. She would destroy their wedding.

Everyone in the occasion was pleasantly surprised as soon as Kevin and Leena came in. He hadn't let anyone else know that he came home. They all thought that he couldn't make it to the wedding ceremony after all. Thus, his presence alone was already a show-stopper.

"Uncle Kevin, look at me! Do I look handsome?" Justin quickly ran to Kevin as soon as he saw him in the house. He was quite excited today and asked the same question to everyone he met. There were at least ten people he had asked.

Oh, little guy, you are so handsome today! Can you tell uncle why you are dressed so nicely?" Honestly speaking, it wasn't rocket-science for Kevin to figure out what the little boy's part on that ceremony was. The suit for Justin today was already a giveaway. It was just that he couldn't help himself from bending down and teasing him with it.

"Let me tell you a little secret!" Justin giddily stood on his tiptoes, leaned to Kevin, and then whispered in his ear. "I'm the flower boy today!" The little boy even discreetly glanced at Leena as he did not want her to hear about the confidential topic.

"Pffft! No need to act all secret, okay? I know you begged to be the flower boy. Stop being all smug and cocky!" Leena snorted, unhappy with Justin's behaviour. It was still a mystery why the two would start to fight whenever they met. They wouldn't stop until they were both satisfied.

You liar! I didn't beg at all! Aunt Leena is the worst!" What Leena said made Justin feel embarrassed and angry all of a sudden. He had indeed asked to be the flower boy, fine. But he didn't beg like she said!

"Yeah, right. You didn't beg at all. You were just constantly mumbling something about being a flower boy, in case they forgot to invite you to be the flower boy." Leena smirked and kept mocking. She enjoyed watching the little guy being all worked up and angry. She couldn't even remove the huge grin on her face.

"Uncle Kevin, help me! Aunt Leena is being mean to me again! She's a big liar!" Justin puckered his lips and threw himself in Kevin's arms. They were quite close when they were in the army, so he didn't feel embarrassed at all.

Okay, okay. Of course I will help you. How about I punish her to do push-ups when we get back home? Are you happy with it?" Kevin winked at Leena, silently asking her to go along with it. Justin believed that doing push-up was the most serious punishment one could get. He had always listened to his mother when they were still in the army because he was afraid to be punished with push-ups.

"Yay! You are the best, Uncle Kevin." Justin made a silly face to Leena. Clearly, he was extremely happy that somebody was getting punished.

"You are just being petty." Though she had received Kevin's silent request, she still couldn't help mocking Justin one last time. God, she hated it when he acted all smug about himself.

"It's none of your business, huh!" Justin curled his lips into a sneer then quickly ran away. He stuck his tongue out at Leena and made a silly face before he left. Now that made Leena extremely angry.

"Girl, you are being very childish. He's just a kid. Go easy on him." Kevin lightly pinched Leena's nose, feeling helpless about the fight between her and Justin. He couldn't understand why they always acted this way whenever they saw each other.

"That little rascal was being all smug, so I intentionally said those words to get back at him." Leena pursed her lips as she said those words but then suddenly smiled once she saw Edward and Daisy. It was such a quick transition when she walked up to the couple with a full and sweet smile. She was just so glad to see them.

"Edward, Sis." Leena had always liked clinging to Edward, since they were just kids. Thus, it was natural for her to throw herself in his arms every time they met.

"Baby girl, did you start a fight with Justin again?" Edward held her tight in his arms. His eyes were filled with affection for her little sister as he gave her a quick once-over and pinched her nose. It was only then that Leena realized how everyone seemed to be obsessing about her nose.

"I didn't! He started it by being all cocky. I just can't stand him acting like that, so I said a few words to him." Leena mocked, she didn't want to admit that she indeed started the fight.

Major General Gu, you are back." Daisy didn't pay attention to Edward and Leena, who were cheerfully catching up. Instead, she greeted Kevin, who was heading towards them.

"Yeah! I just arrived yesterday. I thought that we'd meet today, so I didn't call you." Kevin kept his eyes on Edward as he spoke with Daisy. He wanted to greet him first but lost his chance when Edward held his wife by the hand and walked away without any ado. It seemed that Edward was still unhappy to see him.

"How was it? How was the special training? I bet it was great, right?" Daisy clearly knew that there was a lot to learn from international trainings. She had been to one but it was a shame that her training didn't last that long. Thus, she didn't learn enough. On the other hand, Kevin remained on that training for a long while, therefore, it was easy to say that he had learned a lot more.

Not bad. The training was extremely hard but it was fortunate that it gave us vantage of how they train compared to us. We can train better in the future." Just like Daisy, Kevin got very excited the moment he started to talk about the army. It was easy to notice that he liked the topic as his genuine interest couldn't stop from showing on his face.

Chapter 813: Chapter 812:The Wedding Ceremony (part three)

"That's for sure. Their strength isn't a joke. That's why I use what I learnt at JC Military Academy to train our soldiers. Why do you think they call me the devil drillmaster?" The corner of Daisy's mouth twitched. She didn't care how her soldiers thought of her, all she cared about was their strength. So if they wanted to be her soldiers and be trained by her, they had to obey whatever she said, without any doubt.

"But you are also the best, right? Or you wouldn't have gotten those great grades everytime we took a test." Kevin admired her for her training skill. She was the type who could change people. Even the weakest soldier could turn into a standard soldier under her supervision. It was evident that she really trained her troops hard.

"Only by being harsh to oneself could one become truly successful. After all, success isn't easy to achieve, right? One can't really have it without putting in a lot of effort." Daisy knew that her soldiers loved and hated her at the same time. It was just that she didn't give a damn. She knew that they would thank her for giving them a chance to challenge themselves and be better one day. Only by this could they become tougher and develop the strength to face the difficulties with grace and courage.

"I see, you have been encouraging yourself like this all this time. That's why you are this successful and admirable today." Kevin had always looked up to Daisy for her perseverance and courage. Well, probably except for the first time when they met and he judged her wrong. He couldn't help but feel ashamed whenever he recalled his disdain for her. Though it had been years, just the mere memory of it was enough to make him turn red with shame.

"That's because I'm a late bloomer. So I had to be extremely harsh to myself." It would be possible for her to still live under Yakira and her daughter's pressure if she hadn't been so hard on herself. If so, she would not have achieved what she already achieved at that point and might not even be who she was today.

"What are you two talking about? The bride is coming." Edward came back without Leena beside him. Thus, it triggered Kevin's natural reaction to look around for his wife.

Nothing, just some stuff about the army. Where is Leena?" Daisy naturally asked after noticing that Leena wasn't with her husband.

"She's with Uncle Leng right now. They haven't seen each other for quite a long time. I guess they must have a lot to catch up." Edward wouldn't even blame Kevin for having a crush on Daisy. To be honest, who wouldn't like a woman as great as his wife? What he truly could not accept though was that Kevin married Leena after he claimed that he liked Daisy. Gracious! Leena was his little sister! That was something he couldn't forgive because Leena was his baby. For him, she was almost as important as Daisy.

"I'll leave you to it. I'm going to greet them." However, Kevin didn't mind Edward's attitude towards him at all. He knew clearly that Edward still held a grudge against him for what he had done. He could tell how much Edward cared for Leena just by the way he looked at her. It wasn't even a surprise that the man ignored him since he knew that he wasn't in love with his little sister. Truth be told, he deserved worse.

Yeah! Go ahead. I bet Uncle Leng will be so happy to see you." Daisy was sure of her words because she had just heard Lloyd mention that he had a great son-in-law in front of the guests just now.

"Okay, see you later." Kevin nodded his head to Edward and showed no sign of being bothered. Then he left them and walked away with pride that could only belong to a soldier.

"Edward, can you at least be nice to Major General Gu? He is your little sister's husband after all." Daisy couldn't even understand what Edward was thinking most of the times. Why was he still ignoring Kevin was beyond her. She knew that Edward was upset about Kevin marrying Leena without their approval. However, Leena was happy now and that had happened a long time ago. He couldn't possibly still hold a grudge against Kevin, right? So why did he act all childish and ignore Kevin just about every time they met? It was so impolite and embarrassing!

If he were not my little sister's husband, I wouldn't even waste my time on him. It is only because he is Leena's husband that I want him to know that I won't be easy on him. Who does he think he is? He deserves whatever I do to him for marrying our precious little sister without even informing us." Edward let out a wicked smile. Well, Kevin had married their little princess. That was already a fact that he couldn't change. But if that army man thought that they would let him off that easy and treat him nicely? He was just awfully wrong. It might be easy to marry Leena but it wouldn't be easy to get on well with her protective brothers.

"You are just being childish. Don't you care about Leena's feelings at all? Try being in her shoes. How would you feel if the brothers you love the most keep ignoring your husband? You should put her feelings first instead of only considering yours. That's quite selfish, don't you think? Well, I guess I'll say the same thing to Duke once I meet him. Stop being childish! Don't think you can treat Kevin however you want just because Leena cares deeply about you." She knew about how much they cared for Leena and how they would spoil her without hesitation. Nonetheless, she was sure that those were not what Leena truly wanted. No woman would want to see her husband of choice being disrespected by her own family. That was just the way it was.

"Leena has us, and that's enough. He doesn't matter." Although, Edward managed to say those words, it was still undeniable that what his wife said hit a spot inside him. There was a sudden uncertainty in his eyes as he secretly questioned himself. 'Am I wrong all the time?'

"But can you promise to stay with her all her life? Can you immediately get to her whenever she calls because she's in need? No, you can't! So, if you can't do it yourself, then why won't you let someone else do it for you? It's for Leena's own good."

Daisy rolled her eyes in dismay. She had always known that Duke was extremely protective of his little sister, but it seemed that it was the same with Edward. In her eyes, the big problem with them was that they all thought their sister wouldn't be safe and happy with anyone else besides them. And this, was hard to change.

Chapter 814: Chapter 813: Drama At The Wedding (part one)

"Daisy, don't you think you're being irrational? We may not be with her all the time but we can come to her the moment she needs us. Can Kevin do that? I don't think so. Don't forget who he is. As a Major General, he has to be on call the whole time. It's easier for us to save our time for Leena."

Edward couldn't agree with Daisy's view. Fine, they might not be capable of giving Leena the romance she wanted but that was nothing compared to their capability of taking good care of her. On the contrary, it was obvious that Kevin didn't have much time to keep her company. He couldn't even give her his full thoughtful attention. How could they possibly live in two separated places shortly after their marriage and not even meet each other much?

Edward, are you blaming me indirectly? Both of Kevin and I work in the military and have no time to take care of our families. You've never mentioned it to me before, so it was a bit surprising to hear that you don't like my job. Speak up if you have complaints. You must have nursed an objection for long." Daisy cocked her head to the side. She looked enlightened, as she stared at Edward appraisingly.

"You got me wrong. We're talking about Kevin. Why are you directing the spearhead at me?" He sighed helplessly. Yes, she was on-the-go all day but he had never even thought of complaining about her work. He loved her with all his heart and soul. He would try to get used to the life she offered him as long as she had him in her heart.

Kevin could hear Leena's chuckle as he approached. 'So that is how she is when she's happy,' he mutters, 'That's the grin I never get to see when she's with me. Could it be that she is no longer happy after marrying me? I should have spent more time accompanying her.'

"Dad, I haven't seen you for a long time. How are you?" Kevin greeted Lloyd respectfully. Leena, who was acting like a spoiled brat inside her dad's arms suddenly behaved and stood aside upon seeing him coming. Gone was her beaming smile that caught his attention.

"Yes, I'm fine. How nice of you to ask. I didn't know that you came back. Leena, you should have told me about it." Kevin's presence had livened Lloyd up. He had captured Lloyd's favor despite Duke's hostility to him.

"Yes. I came back last night. Sorry for my carelessness. I should have called to let you know my return." Kevin's voice was apologetic. Getting his father-in-law's approval was something he never expected. Thus, he cherished this hard-won fondness.

"It's all right. I'm glad that you are back safe and sound. Go, I will take you to meet some friends of mine." Lloyd stood up as he spoke. He couldn't wait to introduce Kevin to his friends. Those old men always bragged about their daughters marrying extraordinary men like CEOs and such. He wanted them to see whose son-in-law was the best. Kevin was a young and promising Major General. Compared with other sons-in-law, he was like a crane standing among chickens.

"Dad, don't embarrass Kevin. He isn't much into socializing. It may be difficult for him to deal with your friends." Leena began to worry about her husband after Lloyd said that he would introduce him to his business partners. She clearly knew how possessive, deceitful and unreasonable the people of business circles were, and it was fortunate that Lloyd just invited some of them. Otherwise, it would take a lot of time to exchange conventional greetings with them one by one.

"It's okay. It's a piece of cake for me. I'll be right back." Kevin patted Leena's shoulder reassuringly. Seriously, his wife really didn't have to worry too much about him. He stood on principles and never yielded to pressure as a Major General and his behavior to others was nothing but impeccable as a man. He owed his high-rank to his passion, hard work, and persistence. He might be the faultless gentleman outside; however, he was also the evil man before those who harbored unkind thoughts.

"Okay. Just ignore them if they deliberately make things difficult for you." Leena couldn't help but remind for the last time. She used to be the little princess who was favored by everyone, but now she turned instantly to a charming wife who always thought of her husband's wishes and feelings.

"Don't worry, Leena. I won't put him to torture." Lloyd shook his head as he noticed how Leena seemed to just have eyes for Kevin. Goodness! She just totally ignored her father.

Leena nervously watched the two. Soon, all the people in the business circles knew that the little princess of the Leng Group married a young and promising Major General. He easily outshone all the other sons-in-law of other rich and powerful families.

"You look stunning!" Daisy couldn't help but giggle her appreciation as soon as she saw Belinda. Even the word beautiful couldn't justify how the bride looked on her wedding dress. She literally couldn't take her eyes off her close friend.

"Really? I'm flattered. Thank you. I bet you'll look even better than me if you wear this." Belinda didn't attend Daisy's wedding, so she didn't see her in a wedding gown. What a pity.

"Don't flatter me. Don't forget that you are the bride today. All eyes are fixed on you. Wow, Leena is a genius! This gown is absolutely fantastic!" Daisy gave Belinda's gown a quick once-over with appreciation in her eyes.

"What? Wait, you confuse me. Do you know something that I don't know?" Belinda was sitting still on her chair as she waited for the next things to happen at her wedding. What Daisy said puzzled her.

"Well, I'll tell you later. It's not important now, Belinda. Congratulations. You finally get married! Hope you and Duke live a sweet and meaningful life in the future!" Daisy bent over to hug Belinda. Her eyes turned misty as she couldn't stop but cry out of joy.

"Okay, let's have a happy life together." Belinda gently patted her friend's back. She knew that Daisy was happy for her, so she gave her some time to calm herself down.

The wedding march finally started. Justin was walking on the red carpet while holding Belinda's floor-length gown when he suddenly turned to glance at his mom. His young mind wondered about a lot of things. Was his mommy as happy as Aunt Belinda at her wedding? Did his mom's dad hold her by the hand too and walk her to another man who loved her? However, when he thought of what happened before, he was sure that his mom never had such a happy moment. Would she be disappointed at this wedding?

Oddly, Justin did hit the spot with his guesses. Mixed emotions of grief and joy were getting through Daisy as she watched the joyful scene. To her great joy, Belinda finally married the man she loved. However, it was a grief to her that no one took her wedding seriously. She didn't even get to experience walking on a red carpet since the bridegroom didn't want to marry her. It was all good now though because Edward and she fell immeasurably after. The process wasn't important as long as they ended up happy.

The wedding was held in an orderly manner. The next step was to exchange the rings. With a hint of a smile playing on their lips, the bride and bridegroom looked at each other fondly. Set off by the splendid evening glow, the bright pearls were shining. Belinda was enchanting as the dazzling lights bathed her. What a stunning bride she was in the ingeniously designed gown! Her beauty charmed all the guests present. The designer of the gown must be a true genius.

Duke was in ecstasy throughout the wedding. Given his serious nature, he ended up displaying a faint smile the whole while. He stared at the most beautiful woman in the world with infinite tenderness. How lucky he was to have met and loved her in a vast sea of people. "You're my sole satellite, Belinda," he said with his eyes filled with love, "I'd be lost in space without you."

Belinda blushed under her husband's warm gaze. Everything was like a dream to her. It was so surreal. She didn't think that she would marry the man who loved her one day. The same man with whom she would greet the brilliance of sunrise and enjoy the peace and tranquility of the moonlight. She whispered in her heart, 'There are going to be days where you're undone, stressed out, tired and spent. I will still love you just as much in those moments and maybe even a little more. Why? Because it will mean that you're letting me get close and see the real you. That's all I want.'

Chapter 815: Chapter 814: Drama At The Wedding (part two)

Rain discarded the colorful clothes he usually wore and dressed formally today. His formal ensemble made him look educated, amiable and decent. It was odd how such a happy occasion like this could make him sad and wonder when he would meet his love.

"Rain, don't pull a long face. Others may think that your old flame is getting married today. Well, why are there lipstick marks on your shirt?" Edward smiled wickedly. Rain just went to pick up the bride. Why was he sloppily dressed as if he just left the nightclub?

"Alas! Forget it. You know what? The bridesmaids seldom meet handsome guys like me. Their eyes were shining with excitement at the sight of me. They tried every means to drive me mad. Fortunately, I managed to escape. It was so horrible!" Rain shivered with fear at the mention of his bitter experience. The bridesmaids were crazy. It was like they had never met a man before. No, he had to correct that. What he meant was a man who was indescribably striking like himself.

"You excel at dealing with women, right? And you couldn't even deal with some bridesmaids?" Edward could imagine how fierce the scene was. Rain's shabby look was already a good giveaway.

"Oh, so you're capable? Why didn't you go?" Rain snapped a reply while glaring at Edward. How could this man insult him instead of comforting him? He wouldn't agree to be a groomsman if it wasn't for Duke's wedding.

"I wanted to give you this opportunity to make friends with more girls. If I had been there, they wouldn't have noticed you." Edward continued making fun of Rain. Even if he went to pick up the bride, the bridesmaids didn't dare to do anything to him. It was known to all that he was the CEO of the FX International Group. Thus, not everyone could get close to him easily.

"It's just what I want. Look. What is that woman doing over there?" Rain wasn't close with Rachel but he knew who she was as he had met her before. He didn't know why Rachel, who was wearing a white wedding-like dress, would walk towards the red carpet slowly. It was Duke's wedding day today. No mistake was allowed. Rachel was the last person that Duke wanted to invite.

"Rachel? Oh, My God. How did she make her way here? She must be up to something. I have to stop her. Tell Luke to bring some guards to drive her away." Before his voice died away, Edward walked up to Rachel at a sprint. However, it was too late. Rachel had successfully attracted other guests' attention.

"Duke, why? You said that you would only love and marry me, but you abandoned me for this vain woman! How cruel you are!" Rachel approached step by step, accusing Duke with a very sad tone.

Rachel, I shouldn't have underestimated you. You actually find us here." Duke cast a cold look at the woman. She wanted to destroy his wedding, but it was too late. Just before she reached them, Duke and Belinda had already put on each other's ring that symbolized their loyalty to their marriage.

Rachel's appearance caused a sensation in the wedding scene. Everyone was gossiping. They couldn't believe that they had just witnessed a drama that only happened on TV series. They wondered about what happened between the newly married couple and the other woman. Was that other woman saying the truth? Did Duke break up with her for Belinda's sake?

"As I said, you won't lead a happy life until I stop breathing! I'll never allow such a thing to happen." Rachel was quite satisfied with the sensation she made. She knew very well that she couldn't stop the wedding on her own, so all she had to do was to arouse sympathy from the guests. She wanted to give them an illusion that Belinda was the other woman that swayed Duke into abandoning her.

"If I were you, I would leave sensibly. Don't force me. Or you'll bring shame on yourself." Edward grabbed Rachel's wrist from behind in an attempt to drag her away.

"Edward, don't hold yourself aloof. If I'm not mistaken, you have slept with many quality ladies in S City. Why do you pretend to be a gentleman now? What a shame." The purpose of Rachel was very obvious. She just wanted to stop and destroy this wedding. She thought that there would be a lot of reporters and big shots in the business circles present there. However, to her disappointment, there were just a few influential businessmen and there weren't any reporters covering the ceremony at all. Her drama wouldn't gain publicity in this case.

"Rachel, if you think that this will make me angry, then I have to tell you that you're making a big mistake. I believe that all the guests here know my romantic affairs before. I don't even try to cover them. But you make trouble in Duke's wedding. Do you think you can really succeed as a divorced woman?"

Edward captivantly smiled. How stupid Rachel was. She actually wanted to irritate him by bringing up his past. He would never be hindered by the past. She would go a long way if she really wanted to catch him in the raw.

"Edward, I won't be afraid of your threat since I dare to come today. Don't think that you can threaten me as you have money to burn. You should know that we live in a society with law." Rachel was ready to risk everything. Thus, she wasn't afraid to offend Edward. She even had the guts to glare at him.

"Fine. You can try." Edward sneered. Who was he to turn her down if she really wanted to die, right? He would help her.

"Edward, let her speak. I wonder what she will say to embarrass me." Duke believed that he was honest and upright in his ways so Rachel couldn't bring any harm to him. He looked at Rachel calmly.

Edward immediately let go of Rachel's hand after hearing Duke. Holding such a bitch made him feel sick. She thought she was pure and noble, but in fact, she was a loose woman who got a divorce. How could she be self-conceited?

Belinda fixed her eyes on Rachel. She didn't understand why Rachel had the nerve to make trouble there. Didn't she know that once the truth was revealed, it would be difficult for her to keep a foothold in this city? She should know that the guests here were powerful and influential.

"Duke, get your wits back. Look at this woman. What she loves is not you, but your money." Rachel repeated what she had said and started accusing Belinda of a poor girl who leaned on a moneybag.

"Rachel, it's ridiculous! Do you know what you are talking about? You said Belinda coveted Duke's money. You must have no idea of who Belinda is. Let me tell you. She is the CEO of the YS Group. Ha-ha! It's funny!" Rain came over after calling Luke and heard such an interesting thing.

"What? You mean Belinda is the CEO of the YS Group? No, this is impossible! Isn't she a poor girl? How could she be the CEO of the YS Group? It's a lie!" Rachel had heard of the YS Group. It was one of the largest groups in S City. Little did she think that the CEO of the YS Group was a woman!

So you don't have an idea of it? How dare you! You came to make trouble without making an investigation and claimed that Belinda forced Duke to break up with you. Don't you know who you are? Don't forget that your husband divorced you." Rain smiled fascinatingly. What a good show it was! However, it was a pity that Rachel was a bad actress. She couldn't arouse others' feelings, and it was even more impossible for her to get their sympathy.

Rachel's face turned ghostly pale with fright. Duke once asked her to investigate what the name Belinda Shangguan represented. She didn't know why back then, but she was enlightened now. If that was the case, did it mean that she had found a more alluring topic?
