

My Wife is a beautiful Officer Chapter 901 - Chapter 900: As Handsome As It Gets (part two)

Chapter 900: Chapter 899: As Handsome As It Gets (part one)

"OK, but Kevin, can I look around your house?" Louisa's eyes were flickering with elation as she stared at Kevin gleefully.

"Sure, other than the master bedroom, you have the run of the house." Kevin was just going to head upstairs before he paused. Although Leena never imposed this on him, he figured that as a member of a wealthy family she must have her own rules. Besides, it wasn't appropriate to show off the private spaces of the married couple to others.

"I know. So I won't keep you from your shower! I'm just curious and want to take a look around." Louisa smiled in jest. If Kevin didn't say that, she might actually want to go in their bedroom and take a look, because their wedding pictures would surely be hanging inside. This way, Louisa could find out who the woman that managed to get ahead of her was.

Good!" Kevin turned away and went upstairs. He was not sure if it was right for him to grant her request. After all, besides the master bedroom, there were a few spaces that were also relatively private for Leena. For example, the work studio in the attic which he had only been inside once, and it was with Leena's knowledge.

Louisa watched as Kevin disappeared from view and finally stood up. She looked everywhere and sometimes touched things that piqued her interest. As she went along, new thoughts popped into her head.

The more she saw, the more jealous she was of the lucky woman. However, to her dismay, Louisa didn't see a single photograph after searching everywhere, which was somewhat disheartening. She went upstairs to the attic with even less interest. But only after a couple of steps, she came back down and focused on the tightly closed door of the master bedroom.

She wondered if Kevin would find out that she sneaked in while he was in the shower. Everyone had a demon on one shoulder and an angel on the other. These figures would whisper in your ears and guide you. So the demon would tempt you to do wrong, and the angel would show you the path of goodness and light. Apparently, Louisa listened to the demon this time. She was overcome by her desire to try her luck, so, with trembling hands, she pushed open the door which shielded the things that she wanted to know.

The room was very well lit with natural light, so even without flipping the switch everything could be seen clearly. The first thing that greeted her eyes was a huge bed that seemed to be both luxurious and soft. Then she saw a giant wardrobe taking over an entire wall. It looked high-end and elegant. She quietly stepped inside, hoping to check out a framed photo by the bed. At that moment, a cold voice suddenly rang out, and Louisa was so shocked that she almost ran away.

"What are you doing? Didn't I tell you the main bedroom is off limits?" Kevin was only wearing a towel around his waist. Beads of water still clung to his skin. He looked sexy and seductive. "... Um.. Sorry! I didn't know this was the main bedroom, so I just walked in. I'm sorry!" Louisa didn't expect to be caught red-handed, so it was quite awkward. But her eyes greedily turned to Kevin's fine body.

"You can walk out now! Let me get dressed." Kevin frowned, looking pissed.

"Yes. I'll wait downstairs." Louisa was not stupid. She also knew that Kevin was not happy about this, so no matter how unwilling she was, she had to leave the room first.

Kevin was still a little suspicious, so he stepped forward and locked the door. Then he finally untied the towel and started putting on clothes. In the past, his wardrobe had little variety. At least a third of his clothes were military fatigues, but ever since marrying Leena, his wardrobe grew by leaps and bounds. It was filled with formal attire and casual outfits. They were also very stylish and fit him very well. He was still curious how Leena found out about his size.

Louisa reluctantly returned to the living room. Bored and uninterested, she examined every corner. She was imagining that if she were living with Kevin in this place, she would decorate the house much more glamorously. She just wanted to know where the mysterious Cinderella came from and how she managed to reach someone so high up like Kevin.

The less Kevin cared about her, the more she was obsessed with him. After all, a man like Kevin who wouldn't even have an affair when his wife was not here was so rare in today's society. So Louisa would not easily give up on him and let him slip away from her fingers.

"OK, let's go!" Kevin picked a light blue suit. The light tone made him look both smart and classy, and it was a great match for his complexion. Apparently when Leena was picking his clothes for him, she had also considered his skin tone. Her attention to detail was undeniable. It might have something directly to do with her profession, since her work required her to always have a fashion sense that was ahead of its time.

"Wow! Kevin, you almost look like a different person in this. You are so handsome!" Louisa had imagined what Kevin would look like in a suit, but she didn't expect him to be so unbelievably gorgeous. So for a moment, she completely froze at the sight of him and simply stared, slack-jawed.

Thanks! I rarely have the opportunity to put this on. I hope this doesn't look too weird." Although he was confident in his looks, he still acted humble in front of Louisa.

Don't worry. You're as handsome as it gets." Thinking that she would become the most envied woman at the soiree, Louisa couldn't hold back her excitement. Her face reddened as well.

"Let's go! Aren't you going to change into a gown? Time is almost running out." Kevin picked up the keys on the tea-table. He was not sure what kind of party he was getting into, but in the mind of a soldier, being late was never a good thing.

"Right! I almost forgot." Louisa checked the time in a hurry. It took her quite some time to get to the base, and now she had to do her make-up as well. They would probably be late. Although it was just a celebration of her classmate's company, it wouldn't look good if they arrived too late.

If Kevin had one thing that he hated the most, it would probably be waiting for a lady to do her make-up, especially considering that the woman was not even someone he liked. So he was undoubtedly annoyed.

He thought back to when Leena suddenly hung up on him, and couldn't figure out exactly what went wrong. So he wanted to call her back as he waited, but right when he took out his phone, Louisa was already finished.

So Kevin, what do you think?" Louisa specifically asked the stylist to pick a dress that was in the same color tone as Kevin's outfit. Therefore the way they were dressed almost made them look like a couple.

"It's nice, very pretty." Kevin smiled. He had seen too many beautiful ladies in his time, so he wasn't really that interested in a woman like Louisa who was at best above average.

"Compared to your wife then? Who looks better?" Louisa jokingly asked, but in reality she was curious what Kevin's wife looked like.

I can't really say. You both have your merits!" In Kevin's honest opinion, Leena was naturally better. But he wouldn't be saying this out loud to embarrass Louisa.

Really! Then she must look very pretty." Failing to get the answer she wanted, Louisa felt somewhat unsatisfied and decided to continue asking.

"Yeah! She is quite beautiful. Are we ready, then? If so, let's head out!" Kevin didn't want to dwell on this topic, so he intentionally changed the subject.

Yes, we can go now!" Louisa bit her lips slightly. Hearing Kevin's praise for this other woman made her a little jealous, but she couldn't show it in front of him, so she simply giggled to hide her uneasiness.

Instead of a soiree, this was at most a small party and could no way compare to the grand events thrown by FX International. Kevin was silently relieved because of this, since he wouldn't need to deal with too many people. He still remembered the last time he went to the anniversary celebration of FX International. He was dragged there by his father-in-law to meet a bunch of the latter's business friends.

Chapter 901: Chapter 900: As Handsome As It Gets (part two)

"Hi, handsome, I heard that you're Louisa's boyfriend, right? You look nice." A few women in sexy dresses were examining Kevin. They were not hiding their desire for him at all. Indeed, they were practically flaunting it.

"Thanks! But we're just friends. It's really not what you think." Being misunderstood was not pleasant for Kevin. But his good manners kept him from blowing up at them. Instead, he simply smiled.

"No? But last time at Louisa's birthday party, I heard that you were her boyfriend." The woman tilted her head a little, thinking if she had mistaken him for someone else.

"Hey! Quit putting him on the spot, will you? He's probably a little shy. You guys! Stop being so bitchy." Another woman joined in the ruckus. She gazed at Kevin's body so intently that he feared she might be able to see through his clothing.

"No way! Even though you're not wearing a military uniform this time, I'm sure it was you." The woman frowned and seemed more confused.

"Miss, I did go to Miss Ye's birthday party, but I'm really not her boyfriend. Just ask her." Dealing with a few talkative women had made Kevin impatient, so his face clearly grew grimmer. His mood darkened.

"Never mind. Since they want to keep it under wraps, why should we force him to admit it?" These few women together had no end of things to say, so the conversation was spinning out of control. Every conversation was about whether Kevin was Louisa's boyfriend or not.

"Yeah, stop being so nosy. But we did hear that Mr. Gu is a major general, right? That's why our Louisa picked you." It seemed no woman could resist drama. So when they chided others, they still wouldn't rein in their own curious natures.

Excuse me! I think it's necessary to explain myself. I am a major general, but please don't treat us like a couple." Kevin's face was showing traces of anger. If they were not Louisa's friends, he would have left the place long ago instead of staying here and enduring their comments.

Tsk! You're just afraid that others might say that you got where you are because you took advantage of Louisa's family. What's there to hide?" The women saw the change in Kevin's expression and became even more fired up. Because to them, Kevin's current position was deeply related to the Ye family in spite of his actual experience.

Kevin's lips parted, but he didn't say anything, figuring that with such things, it would only get worse the more he tried to explain, so he'd better not spare the energy to make things clear. It would only be a waste of time. Still, he couldn't believe that he could run into such a gossipy crowd. His luck was goddamn incredible indeed.

What are you guys talking about? What's so interesting?" Right at this moment, Louisa walked by, smiling. Earlier she was held up by a couple of men, and she only just got away. And the reason that those men were trying to butter her up was none other than her father who was a commander. After all, an inside connection would always be better.

"Nothing, just saying that you two make a great couple. Time to go! Let's not stand here and interrupt the sweet couple's romantic night." Seeing Louisa's arrival, the women didn't want to continue their gossip anymore, so they just took off, since they all knew who Louisa was and how untouchable she was.

"Kevin, don't mind them. They are always like that, not cultured at all, and have no manners. So just ignore them." Although Louisa didn't hear what her friends said, she could tell from Kevin's simmering anger and dark expression that they were not kind.

"It's alright. I'm just curious why they insist that we're a couple. Did you introduce me to them that way?" Kevin knew it that he shouldn't have conceded and came to the party with Louisa; otherwise he wouldn't have to tolerate the odd gazes focusing on him since his arrival.

"I didn't, Kevin. They were just making silly guesses. I really didn't say that." Louisa saw that Kevin was getting angry with her, so she quickly rushed to her own defense. It was true that she didn't spread the rumor, but she didn't go out of her way to clear it up either.

"Never mind. I have other things to do, other commitments that demand my attention. I won't be staying any longer. Later I'll call the commander's guard. He'll swing by and pick you up." Kevin didn't like the vibe of this place at all. He was not fond of Louisa's so-called friends. The whole time he was at the party he didn't see even one person with a hint of class.

"Kevin, don't mind them. They are always like that, not cultured at all, and have no manners. So just ignore them." Although Louisa didn't hear what her friends said, she could tell from Kevin's simmering anger and dark expression that they were not kind.

"It's alright. I'm just curious why they insist that we're a couple. Did you introduce me to them that way?" Kevin knew it that he shouldn't have conceded and came to the party with Louisa; otherwise he wouldn't have to tolerate the odd gazes focusing on him since his arrival.

I didn't, Kevin. They were just making silly guesses. I really didn't say that." Louisa saw that Kevin was getting angry with her, so she quickly rushed to her own defense. It was true that she didn't spread the rumor, but she didn't go out of her way to clear it up either.

Never mind. I have other things to do, other commitments that demand my attention. I won't be staying any longer. Later I'll call the commander's guard. He'll swing by and pick you up." Kevin didn't like the vibe of this place at all. He was not fond of Louisa's so-called friends. The whole time he was at the party he didn't see even one person with a hint of class.

"What? Kevin, are you leaving now? But the party only just started. If you leave now, it would embarrass me." Louisa didn't expect Kevin to leave suddenly, so she got a little panicky. Moreover, she was worried that her friends would laugh at her. A precious girl with such pedigree like hers couldn't afford to be embarrassed like that.

It's fine. Just tell the others that there is an emergency at the base and I have to be there. And I do actually have things I need to get to." The thing that Kevin needed to do was simply to hurry home and call Leena. After this whole evening, he grew more and more concerned, so he must hear her voice first. He needed that right now more than anything in the world.

What's the rush? Can't you wait till the party's over?" Louisa looked up at her surroundings. She got the reaction she wanted, as some guests were green with envy. But her friends might lose interest in the party once Kevin left.

"Sorry! This really can't wait. Look, you can just explain to your friends. Have fun. I'm going now, goodbye!" After Kevin finished, he just strode out before Louisa could stop him. He didn't want to stay a minute longer.

Louisa tightly bit her lips. She never thought that he would leave without looking back. Now she had to face the inquisitive looks from all those people alone. It was as if a proud princess were dethroned in a mere second and turned into an abandoned orphan.

"Why did Major General Gu leave you here alone, Louisa? Did you guys fight?" Women were always like this; they liked to see others suffer. So when the women saw that Kevin ditched Louisa and left alone, they were somewhat happier for unknown reasons. Just now, they were still jealous that Louisa could find such a good-looking and excellent man as her boyfriend.

"No, don't jump to conclusions. It's simply an emergency at the military base. He has to be there in person to deal with it. I don't need to tell you that this is what being in the military means. You have to be on stand-by all the time. Can't you tell with my father?" Louisa still maintained that perfect smile and calmly explained everything.

Oh! So that's what happened! I thought that you might be fighting because of what we said." Upon learning that Kevin didn't get into an argument with Louisa, the women were a little disappointed, feeling quite unsatisfied deep down.

"Why would we do that? We really like each other. There'd be no way we get into an argument." Louisa gave a broad laugh to cover her embarrassment. No matter how sad she was, she would not show it to anyone. That wouldn't be her way. After all, no one was supposed to be better than her.

"Louisa, speaking of liking each other, when are the wedding bells? We're all waiting to drink your wedding booze!" All things considered, the women were still friends with Louisa, so even though they harbored jealousy towards her, on the surface they had to act excited for her.

No rush. By that time, you won't be forgotten. So start preparing the wedding gifts for us!" So this was Louisa's way of misdirecting things. There was nothing between Kevin and her, but she just went along others and misguided them. That was why her friends would see them as a happy couple.

"Of course. We'll be bringing large gifts and lots of good cheer. So don't worry. Just get married soon!" Everybody was a bit confused by Louisa and Kevin's relationship, but since she already said those things, people didn't want to pursue their suspicions anymore.

Chapter 902: Chapter 901: We Are In Love (part one)

"We're not that eager to get married. I have to do some thinking and consider whether he really is my true love." To save face, Louisa told a big lie. So she had to think of how best to cover her lie. Once you started lying, you'd have to keep lying so that you wouldn't be found out. One lie led to another. And Louisa would need to tell lie after lie, unless she really could win Kevin's heart. But that wasn't easy.

You still want to wait? Really, you shouldn't need to think anymore. He is such an excellent man. Be careful that another woman doesn't steal his heart while you're still thinking." Every one looked at her in confusion. In this society, it was really rare to find such a good man as the Major General Gu, who was handsome in appearance and quite capable. And Louisa told them she was still thinking about it. That was obvious a slap in their face. If a man like Kevin entered their lives, they would snatch him up in an instant. And marry him as quickly as possible, before he had a chance to think about it.

"I'm not even worried about it. As long as we are in love, no one can separate us." Louisa smiled gracefully. Her confidence made her words more convincing, as if what she said was really true.

"Yes, you're right. General Major Gu must love you very much. No wonder you weren't worried at all that another woman might win his heart at the party." This group of women were shooting her admiring looks. They all believed that for women a good marriage was more important than pretty looks.

Of course. Like today, he had a lot work to do tonight. But he worried about me coming alone here. Probably he feared that I might be allured by any other handsome men. So he insisted on coming here with me. Obvious he wanted to declare that I am his woman." Louisa raised her chin, looking arrogant with a vivacious expression. It seemed that she was going all out to make the lie bigger. The reactions from the crowd were predictable.

"Wow!" one said. Another cried,

Really?" "He is totally crazy for you. I'm so jealous!" complained yet another. And one of them mused, "I wonder when I'll find a man to love me so much!" They were all jealous of her and admired her at the same time. But what else could they do? They were all women, and they bemoaned their fate. Were they doomed to be alone? And they blamed it on their fate to be so unlucky. Why couldn't they meet such a good man?

"I know, But I feel like I'm not so free now." Louisa patted her face with her hands, pretending to be shy. She looked like a woman immersed in great happiness. She was really a good actress.

"Cut the crap! You're making a fuss about nothing. You have Kevin, what do you have to bitch about?" The group of women commented with boos and hisses. Obviously they were deeply convinced by Louisa's words.

"Okay, stop making fun of me. Just have a few more drinks. I need to excuse myself to the ladies' room," Louisa said before she turned around and left. The forced happy smile disappeared in an instant. 'Kevin, since I have already boasted about our relationship, I must make it real. Otherwise how can I face them in the future? No matter what, I have to get you. And what better time is there than when the wife is out of town?' Louisa thought.

At the same time, Kevin wasn't aware that he had already become the target of another woman. As soon as he got in the car, he called the commander's guard and told him where to pick up Louisa. In this way, he could completely rid himself of Louisa today.

He lifted his arm and checked the time on his watch. It was now about 11 PM. Leena might be available now. It was about 4 PM her time. So he didn't have to worry that he might wake her up. He dialed the familiar number. But to his surprise, a machine voice noticed him the phone he dialed was turned off. He had worked up the nerve to call, and this made him all the more agitated. What was she doing now? Was it that her phone was powered off? Or was it something else? He hoped nothing bad would happen to her.

He hung up the phone helplessly and gazed at the screen on his cellphone mind-absently. He suddenly found that he had an unread text message on his cellphone. He thought that maybe, just maybe, it was from Leena. So he hurriedly opened the message without hesitation. For the first time, he had guessed right. Because this message was indeed from Leena. It simply read that she was working hard to finish the final preparation of her thesis, so she turned off the phone to prevent her from being disturbed. She said she was fine and told him not to worry about her. And she would call him the minute she was finished.

Kevin felt relieved after he read the message from Leena. He looked at the time. It was sent an hour ago. Probably because it was too noisy inside, so he didn't hear the beep of the message.

The car Kevin drove today was not his usual military Humvee, but his own convertible Bugatti. Although it was the last in the ranking of the top ten global list, it cost almost all his savings when he bought it. Fortunately, he made a wise investment in that car, and that was how he made ends meet. When he thought of the car, it also occurred to him that he hadn't been to Blue Enchantress for a long time. Maybe he could stop by and have a couple drinks tonight. That was a good way to forget all the frustration he felt just now.

The din reached a fever pitch tonight in the Blue Enchantress. The patrons were there and everyone was excited about a night off. The place was as boisterous as it was usually. As soon as Kevin entered the place, all the pretty ladies watched him. His tall figure and handsome appearance made him look charming and intimidating. He immediately stepped into the spotlight.

Chapter 903: Chapter 902: We Are In Love (part two)

"Kevin, you finally come. I was wondering if the next time I saw you would be at your graveside." Hoyle was Kevin's friend, and the co-owner of the bar. He came to greet Kevin as soon as he saw him come in.

"I'm busy. You know." Kevin flashed a helpless smile. He raised his head and looked around. It seemed that it never had been busier. 'Glad we didn't lose customers while I was away,' he thought.

Yeah. I know you're busy. That's why your wife came here with other people." Although the "other people" he was referring to were actually "female friends," but he made no move to explain. He let the statement stand.

Bullshit. She's not even in the country now. Ya gotta be sharper than that to fool me," Kevin sneered. He knew Hoyle liked to piss him off, but his excuse was not convincing at all.

"Huh! I didn't say it happened now. No matter what, she still has an open tab here." Hoyle teased Kevin with a playful smile. It seemed that Kevin was totally unaware that Leena had been here before.

"Huh! You're ripping me off." Kevin punched at him with a smile. He didn't fear that he might hurt him. Hoyle had joined the army with him before, But he later left while Kevin still stayed and climbed up the career ladder.

Ah! Would I lie to you? By the way, you are so lucky to have such a hot wife. We're all jealous, man." Sitting at the bar counter, they talked while watching the patrons undulate on the dance floor.

Huh! I don't believe that you'll stay single with all these hotties around." Kevin took a sip of the wine served by the waiter and shot Hoyle a suspicious look. He didn't believe that Hoyle didn't date girls.

"Why? Take a look around you! Look at these skanks! How could they compare with your pure and innocent wife? You should feel lucky to have a wife like that. But don't get too cocky. I'm not sure I can stop myself from beating the shit out of you if you irritate me later." Hoyle said while showing his fist to Kevin to intimidate him. He was depressed that he didn't have good luck with women, even though he sat here all day long. But why should Kevin be so lucky? He only came here to drink once and got a wife out of it. That was so unfair. Hoyle couldn't help but complain in his heart. And moreover, Kevin had the stones to take his undeserved gain for granted. That almost pissed Hoyle off.

Haha! Yeah, you're right. These chicks can't hold a candle to Leena." It was the first time Kevin praised his wife in front of other people. He was unaware that he would unwittingly smile at the mention of Leena.

Yeah, rub it in. Fine, Your good luck won't rub off on me even if I am jealous. Cheers!" Hoyle lifted the glass and clinked glasses with Kevin. As Kevin's friend, Hoyle was happy that Kevin found his true love. But he was still unhappy. He would not feel satisfied if he didn't tease Kevin.

"I just drink a little. I have to drive the car later." Kevin took a small sip. In this, he was serious. He'd never play with his life.

Don't worry, I can arrange a ride home for you later. You're a rare sight around here, don't be such a killjoy." Hoyle glanced at him with a provocative look. He wondered why Kevin didn't seem to care about the business of the bar. He never asked how the business was going and didn't mind how much money he got from the business. Hoyle even doubted whether he had checked how much money had been transferred to his account.

"You? You'd probably get drunk before me. I'd better not drink. Just relax." Kevin narrowed his eyes and looked at Hoyle. It was not that he didn't believe Hoyle. The problem was that Hoyle couldn't hold his liquor. He was no better than him.

"Did you get hit in the head a lot in the service? Besides me, there are lots of waiters in the bar. I'm sure I can find one to bring you home. Plus, there are rooms upstairs. You can sleep there if you get drunk. Why do you make so many excuses?" Hoyle stared at him with a sullen look. He wondered what Kevin was worried about.

No, thanks. I have to get up early tomorrow to guide the work of the company. Do you think I'm like you? Not all of us can sleep as late as we want."

Kevin stared back at Hoyle. He ignored all the women who continuously winked at him. He only occasionally frowned to show he was not interested.

That is because I work hard every night to run the business for you. But you don't seem to care. I didn't see you for a month. Do you think I'm your slave?" Hoyle got indignant when he brought up the topic. Kevin didn't show up, worse, he didn't even call. Most of the time, it was Hoyle who came to him first.

"I work hard every day. And do you really think it's a good idea for me to hang out here given the fact that I'm in the army? Wouldn't you worry about me getting caught by the Investigation Department in the military?" Kevin stared at him grumpily. Hoyle was once a soldier.

How could he not think about this?

"Huh! You can wear casual clothes. No one would know that you are the high-falutin Major General of the city. It's just another excuse. Don't jerk me around, it's not that serious." Obviously, Hoyle was not convinced. He didn't believe that there would be anyone who would be so bored as to pry into other people's private lives after work.

Chapter 904: Chapter 903: We Are In Love (part three)

"Ah! Whatever you want to think! If you don't want to handle the business, that's fine. If you do, great. You're making money. I really don't have time. If you really think it's not fair, you can deduct your wage from my share. Will that make up for it?" Kevin smiled, looking nonchalant. He knew Hoyle was only complaining and he would never take the money from Kevin's share. He was the one Kevin trusted. They had been friends for many years.

"Screw you! Do you really think that I'm working for you? You're an ass to talk about giving wages to me!" Hoyle said while kicking at Kevin. Kevin dodged, seemingly having predicted the kick. He knew that every time Hoyle lost his temper, he would kick him. Kevin already got used to this trick. How could he let Hoyle easily have his way?

"But you said that! You said that I use you as a slave. So I have no choice but to reward you with some money." Kevin continued to prod him. In an instant, they attracted a lot of attention from the other patrons. Kevin had been the focus of the women here in the bar. How could they not notice what was happening there?

"Okay, probably it's time to go. Since you're not drinking, you'd better go back to being a good soldier. And don't spoil my plans. I'm going to find a girl." Hoyle leaned back in the chair at the bar counter, wondering whether all the women had gone cross-eyed. Otherwise why would they pay attention to Kevin and show no interest in him?

"I don't think I'll be a threat to you. I'm married. I'm not cockblocking you, at least not intentionally. Which woman do you like? Walk over to her and tell her you like her. It's so easy. Don't be pretentious," Kevin said languidly. The fatigue was showed on his face. That was because he hadn't gotten a good night's sleep all week. And he had planned to enjoy himself after work today, but was asked by Louisa to accompany her to her party.

You're like a brilliant star shining here. Do you think any woman will notice me? I'm like a bulb that's already burned out." In fact, Hoyle was only joking. If he was asked to choose a woman from the bar to marry, he would prefer to stay single. He already got fed up with the women in heavy makeup and dressed in flashy clothes. If he really settled down with any woman here, he would seriously become impotent.

"Okay, then I won't shine here. I'm going back home. Come on, you little broken bulb, don't give up! You'll find your dream girl tonight!" Kevin glanced at the watch on his wrist. It was very late now. He'd really be dog-ass tired tomorrow if he didn't get some sleep.

"Okay, goodbye. Don't worry. Bar's in good hands. Remember to bring your wife here and officially introduce her to me next time." Hoyle patted Kevin's shoulder. Because he was older than Kevin, he had always regarded Kevin as his younger brother. Such brotherhood was established early when they were both in boot camp.

"Didn't you just say that she's been here before? You also mentioned that you will keep her tab open. How could you not know each other? Or were you kidding me just now because you wanted to rip me off?" Kevin frowned. He almost forgot about that. He wondered who came here with Leena last time. And she got drunk easily. 'Did she flirt with other men after she got drunk?' Kevin thought.

Crap. She came here with her friends. I didn't get even a chance to say hi. Moreover, she didn't know me. If I just walked up and introduced myself, what if she was frightened? Wouldn't you want to hit me because of it?" Hoyle narrowed his eyes and looked at Kevin with disdain, as if Kevin had really said some bullshit.

"Spit it out! You keep bringing this up again and again. Do you want me to ask you who she was with then?" Kevin knew him well, that was why he knew what was on his mind. They were a lot alike in some respects.

Do you really want to know? I - Nah, I won't tell you. You can figure it out on your own." 'Huh! What made you so cocky today? I believe this question will bug you and you won't sleep tonight. There's no way you couldn't be concerned when you hear that your beautiful wife came here to drink with other people,' Hoyle thought.

Fine, don't tell me. No matter what, I trust her. I know you like causing drama, but it won't work this time. I know who Leena is and that's not like her to sleep around," Kevin sneered. He trusted Leena's morals and loyalty. He knew she would never stab him in the back.

Oh ho! So you're really not worried at all? What if I tell you that the men accompanying her were all pretty good looking guys? You still okay with that?" It was true that Leena came here with two women that night. But later several men appeared together with them. They were all very charming, and even looked more handsome than Kevin.

If they are that good-looking, then I don't need to worry anymore. You can save your energy. I'm outta here. Good luck finding your lady love. Bye!" Kevin showed an understanding smile. He stood up and waved goodbye to Hoyle and walked out. He wasn't worried, because if he was right, the gorgeous guys were Edward and his buddies. There were few men in the city who were incredibly handsome, so Kevin couldn't think of anyone else that would qualify. Hoyle didn't usually rate guys as pretty or good looking, so it had to be them.

The night in the city was a little cold. Probably because winter was coming. And the temperature varied greatly between day and night. As soon as Kevin stepped out of the Blue Enchantress, a gust of chilly wind threatened to blow him over, and then roared away without pause. It disappeared in the blur of the city streets at night.

Chapter 905: Chapter 904: Leena Was Back (part one)

Kevin turned his head and looked at the sign that read 'Blue Enchantress'. He sighed in relief and quickly left. A warm expression spread through his usually cold face when sudden memories of how he first met Leena came to his mind. He had wondered all this time about why would two perfect strangers like themselves had such a passionate night together. He had been clueless for a long time. Until his views had changed did he realize that it must be fate that actually planned everything for them.

He wouldn't have slept with Leena no matter what if only he'd known that she was the Leng family's little girl. He loathed rich girls. He had thought that all of them were nothing but condescending and arrogant brats. Then there was Leena. She was gentle, nice, and a bit moody as well who would throw fights from time to time just like any normal girls would do. She was the exception to the rule.

It was already one o'clock in the morning when he reached his apartment. The idea that he had to go and see the companies after his sleep was already enough to put him on a bad mood. He wasn't sure why he was feeling annoyed and restless. Something seemed to bother him but he couldn't figure out what it was. He felt like something bad would happen soon.

Lying on the big and lonely double bed, Kevin had a feeling that something was missing but he didn't know what the thing was. He got no clue if it was because of Hoyle's words that he was feeling such. He wanted to think more carefully and find out what he was missing but then his mind was just too tired of all the workloads he had and passed out. Whatever he was missing remained as an undone puzzle piece.

It was ten o'clock in the morning when Leena arrived at the S City's International Airport. She didn't advise anyone that she was coming thus she took a taxi out. She was nothing but a stylish stunner with her beautiful face, perfect built and smart-casual clothes.

The first thing she did after getting in a taxi was turn on her cell phone. She had her phone off the whole time she was in the plane. She was a bit anxious that Kevin might worry about her if he couldn't reach her number. Thus, she sent him a message before she rode her flight.

The excitement was cruising through Leena as the familiar ambiance of her country welcomed her. But more, it was making her expectant. She really wanted to see Kevin. It was odd how being parted from each other made her feel emotionally closer to him. She was troubled that Kevin might not feel the same and everything was just all in her head.

Rolling the window down, she breathed the fresh air outside the car. A large smile appeared on her face as she was really happy that she was back. She drew a deep breath after a while. Was it just her imagination? Or was the air really sweeter in the city where her love was in?

"You must have been abroad for quite a long time!" The driver gave a friendly smile as he noticed Leena's behavior. He guessed that the lady with him must have not been in the city for a while to act like that.

Yeah! How do you know? I've been abroad for about a month." Leena replied in a friendly way that no one would mistake her for a rich girl. She was so down to earth.

She was easy-going and nice to everyone. A total contradiction of how rich girls usually were.

"Oh! Only for a month? You must really like our country! Or is there someone you love who's been waiting for you to come back here?" The driver gently smiled at her words. He had thought that she might have been gone for a long time to act like this. But much to his surprise, it had only been a month!

"Well, I don't know. Maybe a little of both!" Leena smiled and felt a little shy with how the driver read through her that easily. What he said was right, she was this excited not only because she missed the place but more so the people.

The driver just glanced at her meaningfully and didn't talk more. He had thought that his customer would be a difficult rich girl because she was dressed so nicely. It was a surprise how easy-going and nice she was to him. Was he wrong? Was she not some rich girl after all? Besides, what she was wearing wasn't from some famous brand. He might be wrong. But that was not likely! He had been a driver for about twenty years, and he was familiar with the way to the airport. He had met numerous people and he was confident that he was a good judge of character. He had learned to tell different famous brands now.

Leena was giddy all the way home. She was still very happy even though she knew that Kevin might not be at home at that very hour. A sweet smile stayed shining on her face that in the long run, lifted the driver's mood too. The driver even helped her carry her suitcases all the way to the elevator when they reached her home. It seemed that the driver was such a nice guy.

The lady drew a deep breath before she opened the door and pulled her suitcases inside. She had brought enough gifts for everyone this time. Nothing had changed with their house since she left. The only thing that had changed there was how easy one could tell that a man lived there. The thought automatically gave her a certain feeling of security.

Looking at the two big suitcases by her side then looking at the stairs in front of her, Leena frowned. She decided to pour herself some water and rest for a bit. After all, the way that the autumn wind swept her home made her lips dry and chapped.

She gave the whole house another once-over as she leaned against the sofa. She even reached out and wiped a furniture top with her hand just to check if Kevin had been cleaning the room while she was away. Luckily, the result was not bad. It might not be as clean as it was when she was home, nevertheless, it was decent enough in her opinion.