Chapter 911: Chapter 910: An Cartier Watch (part one)

Kevin frowned slightly as he looked at the dishes on the table. Leena had just eaten a little and there was too much food left to him. Was she really thinking of making him obese? Was that the reason why she cooked too much? Anyway, those questions just remained inside his head. He tried to eat all of them still as it would be a pain to waste his beautiful wife's effort. Darn! It might only take half a year for him to be as huge as how Leena wished if she would continue cooking this much every day. Was she planning to fatten him up so she could sell him for a good price?

Leena started sorting her gifts right after she arranged her wardrobe. Her gifts were all small gadgets. They might not be so valuable but she chose them very carefully as each was a sign of her regards. Plus, all the people around her were not short of money. They didn't really care about prices but concentrated more on the thoughts given with the gifts.

Her gift for Kevin was the latest Cartier watch. The watch looked noble but not luxurious. It would work perfectly with his job. She had always been attracted to men who wore watches. Her Brothers liked watches too! It was them who influenced her to be a watch hobbyist.

"Haven't you finished sorting your things yet?" Kevin was surprised to see her still fixing her things right after he went upstairs. He was suddenly curious about why she was taking too long just to arrange her things.

"Well! I'm almost done. How about the kitchen? Have you washed the dishes and kept all in there tidy?" Leena raised her head and asked him with a bright smile. Her face was glowing with happiness as she gazed at him.

"Yes. It's all done. Can I help you?" The Major General crouched beside her and started checking on the things she had brought home with her.

"No, I'll be done soon. And this! This is a gift for you," chanted Leena. Seconds more and she pressed her lips together before handing him a beautiful box. This was the very first time for her to give Kevin a gift. Therefore, she felt a little nervous as she had no clue if he would like it or not.

"Oh! So you have a present for me? What's in it?" The man reached out to her and took the box. Curiosity was all over his handsome face when he placed the box next to his ear and shook it a bit.

Open it and have a look! But hey! Promise me that you'll accept it even if you don't like it. You have to or else I will have no face," said Leena. Done with sorting all the gifts, she stood up and looked down at Kevin in a way that silently warned him that he had to accept it no matter what.

"Are you forcing me?" A gentle frown formed on Kevin's face. Nevertheless, he opened the box in accordance with what she wanted. A pleasant surprise washed over him as soon as he saw what was silently sitting inside the box. A Cartier watch! He had always been thinking of getting one for himself in the future. He never expected her to buy him one right now.

Leena, how'd you know my watch was broken?" He carefully fetched the watch and then excitedly wore it on his wrist.

"I didn't know your watch was broken. I just think it suits you very much. So I bought it. Do you think my taste is good?" Leena couldn't help but smile smugly upon seeing how much Kevin liked the watch. It seemed like she made the right choice after all.

"Yes! The watch is not bad and the style is classic but not grandiose. Thank you!" The man stood up and swayed his arm before her. It was evident how much he liked the watch.

Perfect that you like it. Then please help me put these boxes away. I'm going to take a shower." Leena stretched her arms to relax her muscles a bit. The whole day trip really wore her off.

OK! You can go to take a shower! I'll do the rest." Kevin took the watch off and placed it on the dressing table. He then took the two big suitcases and put them in the empty guest room.

The lady decided to take a simple shower since she already had her bubble bath earlier that morning. She felt great after the shower but then suddenly grew dumbfounded as she stood bare naked inside the bathroom. Gracious! She had been so accustomed to being alone the past days that she forgot to bring any clothes with her! She could always run out of the bathroom with just a towel on. But it was different now. Kevin was not only at home but he was also inside their bedroom. Now that was a dilemma. It wouldn't be smart to just run out of the bathroom without any clothes on, would it?

On the hand, Kevin's cell phone rang while Leena was still stuck inside the bathroom. He picked his phone up and walked to the balcony to answer the call.

"Hello! Claire, what is it?" The call was from his unruly sister. He was somewhat surprised that she chose to call her at such a time.

"Kevin, Dad's birthday is coming. Mom is asking if you can come home for it." Claire was relatively unmanageable. Her attitude rooted from the fact that the Gu's family was mostly composed of high-ranking military officials. It was that idea that molded her into that proud and arrogant person she was.

"Ah? Is Dad's birthday coming? I'm sorry. I thought there was still some time before it." The man scratched his head. He honestly never remembered his parents' birthdays. He only remembered them at dusk whenever other members of their family mentioned it.

What? It's next Saturday. Decide if you are coming back or not. Plus Mom said that you should bring your wife here!" Claire was very curious about the kind of woman her brother married. She had always known her brother to have such a high-class taste. Nevertheless, she still thought that their family's standing was above the woman's family social standing. They were the Gu's after all. That was the reason for her disdain tone as she mentioned her sibling's wife.

Chapter 912: Chapter 911: An Cartier Watch (part two)

"Do you all know that I have gotten married?" Kevin smiled with self-mockery. He should have thought about this, shouldn't he? His father was one of the important men in the capital city. How could he possibly hide his marriage from him?

"Well, of course. What you are doing at this very minute might be reported to Dad within the next." His sister gave him a cold snort. She couldn't believe how silly and naive Kevin was to think that he could conceal his marriage well. Didn't he know that their father controlled everything in the world?

"Well, I know. I'll take her there if I am free that day." That was a quick promise Kevin made. Anyway, he also wanted for Leena to meet his family. He would like to take this chance to show his wife the family he belonged to.

"And Kevin, what does that woman do? Is she a soldier like you?" Curiosity was really beating Claire and she wasn't able to stop herself from inquiring. She would not make things difficult for that woman if she would like her. It would be unfortunate though if his wife ended up on her hate-list. Because that would mean that the woman would not have any choice but to bear whatever she would do.

"Claire, pay attention to your courtesy. She is your sister-in-law. Her name is not 'that woman'." Kevin frowned. He loathed how their family spoiled his sister. They were almost all boys in their family. They waited for a long time for their mother to give birth to their only girl, Claire. She was everyone's princess to the point that they all spoiled her. They had all protected her so much since her childhood as they were afraid that something hard might knock her down.

Well! Noted. But how old is she?" Claire's tone turned gentler. She wasn't afraid of anyone in her family except for her older brother. Kevin was too serious, thus she couldn't just ignore his words.

She is even younger than you. So you can't bully her then." Never did Kevin know that these words he said would be tested in the next few days.

Don't worry! I will be nice to her." Claire spat loud as she silently added more to her words inside her head, '...if she was pleasing to my eyes.'

"Well! That's it! I'll hang up. I will call home after I decide whether to go back or not." Kevin hung the phone up as soon as he was done speaking. He might have been strict with her sister but everybody else in their family spoiled her up. His lessons to her were never enough. She remained proud and arrogant. His sister was such a contradiction to Leena. His wife was also a princess since her childhood. But then, why were they so different?

Hello! Kevin, hold on... please!" The word 'please' didn't even reach Kevin anymore. The end-call beep that cut Claire's voice made her so mad that she almost ended up throwing her phone. She felt that her elder brother was good in everything except for the fact that he was strict with her and seemed to not like her at all.

The Major General could only imagine how angry his sister was when he hung the phone up. Well, it had always been his advocacy to not cuddle her arrogant temper. His sister always thought that she was superior to others. It was the reason why he usually reprimanded her straight on her face. And even so, it seemed that she couldn't change her bad temper that had been formed during her childhood.

A mild sigh escaped his chest. Then he walked back to the bedroom. However, he noticed that Leena had not come out yet. It had been long since she entered the bathroom. Why didn't she come out yet?

Leena, what are you doing?" Kevin knocked on the bathroom door and listened attentively for any sounds from inside the room. "Answer me. Are you washing your skin off?"

Umh...That... Kevin, could you help me get some clothes?" Leena was only wearing a towel. She gritted her teeth in shame as she was left with no other choice but to ask Kevin for his help.

Well, wait for a moment." The handsome man shook his head. As confused as she was, it was definite that something like this would happen again in the future.

Inside the bathroom, Leena's face blushed as she tapped against her head. She was wondering if Kevin would think that she was seducing him with this scene. She got even madder at that thought. How come she always appeared to be the one to poke on things ever since they met? The thought was too embarrassing.

"Leena, here are your clothes." Kevin was carrying her underwear and clothes in his hands. It was a common thing for all to forget some things sometimes. Thus, he didn't make a big deal about it as her.

Leena snatched her clothes in record speed. Even robbers would not run for their money with how fast she did it. Her action made Kevin a little confused. It took him a little while to think before a wicked smile suddenly cracked his lips and he realized something. Goodness! Leena must be really shy!

He began to do some arrangements in his head as he remained standing there. What would be the best approach to tell Leena? Although his family was never short of anything, it was still the first time that he would be taking Leena there with him. No matter what, he would help her be in her best manner for it.

What are you thinking?" Leena asked. She found Kevin in deep thoughts as soon as she walked out of the bathroom. A sudden gush of fear flooded inside her as she noticed him in deep thoughts. Was something troubling him?

"I am all right. I received a call from my family just now. It is my father's birthday next Saturday and I am thinking about what gift can I send him," answered Kevin. He honestly had no clue about what to give his Dad this time. He would casually send him gifts before but it was totally different now. He was married and would like to know what his wife's thoughts were.

What? why didn't you tell me earlier?" Leena slightly frowned as the mere mention of his family made her palms cold. It was the first time for him to talk about his family to her. It was normal for her to be that nervous.

Chapter 913: Chapter 912: An Cartier Watch (part two)

"I just remember it tonight. They also said that I must bring you with me. Are you free next week? We may need a few days. Can you arrange some free time for it?" asked Kevin. Although Leena did not need to go to work, it did not mean she had no other things to do. Thus it was necessary for her to know things like this in advance.

"Well! Don't worry about me, I'll be free at any time. How about you though? Can you get that much vacation?" Leena tilted her head as she looked at him. She was still uneasy. This would be the first time for her to meet Kevin's family and she did not know if she and his family would get along.

"That's OK. I haven't taken my vacation this year. I'll just tell the Commander. It will be okay. There aren't any big holidays these days so we're not really that busy," answered Kevin. He took the towel from her hand and helped her dry her hair. She was still busy drying herself but was only keeping drying one part of her hair. There were still some beads of water on her skin that were seductively rolling down her beautiful body.

"Well, what is your father like?" Leena suddenly grew a little shy with his actions. Although his movements were not so gentle, she couldn't help but feel moved with what he did.

"Leena, is he just my father? He is also your father now, isn't he? Just remember this, okay?, Don't do anything that he can hold against you. You would not want to anger him." Kevin tapped Leena's head lightly. Did she just forget that they were married?

Okay! I will keep that in mind next time. I am sorry! I forgot." Leena naughtily stuck out her tongue at him. She felt a little sorry about what she just said. He was right, they were married, thus his father was hers as well. She was aware of it. It was just that she tended to be forgetful sometimes.

"Oh come on. Don't just say it. You need to call him Dad next week or I won't be able to save you." Kevin's warning was accurate. His father was known for being overly strict. He still couldn't understand how the old man turned soft when he was with Claire. He wasn't even sure if the two were living-proofs of the saying, 'Daughter was the lover of her father in the previous life'. Claire had always been treated differently while he was brought up by him in strict methods.

"Well, don't you believe I can do it? Don't forget that I'm Leena Leng and there isn't anything I can't do." The woman raised her eyebrows smugly as her brain began to reel solutions to the case they were both facing.

"My father is not the most difficult person to deal with in the family, Leena. The most troublesome would be my unruly sister. You should think of ways on how to make her like you. She would give us a lot of troubles if she doesn't." Kevin looked at Leena's eyes. He could sense that she was troubled as she pondered on ways to please his father. Nevertheless, he still found it necessary to let her know about his sister even before Claire gave them problems. All her efforts to please his Dad would be in vain if she would not get his sister's buy-in.

"Ah! So you have a younger sister! How come you've never brought her up before?" Leena was suddenly depressed. She did not worry so much about his father. But then, wasn't there someone who once said that it was extremely hard to get along with the mother-in-law? How much worse would it be with a younger sister? She felt the contradiction between his and her family raised several levels. She wasn't sure anymore if she could still handle the situation. What if she couldn't? What else could she do?

"You never asked me before. I forgot to mention it too. Don't worry. I will be there with you." Kevin jokingly pinched her cheek. He should not have said those things too seriously, now she was scared.

"But you can't always just follow me! And haven't you heard? Majority of family conflicts were either caused by one's bad relationship with the mother-in-law or with the sister-in-law? How could I not worry?" Leena knew well that not every mother-in-law was as good as Edward's mother. Besides, Kevin's family was a political family. It would be inevitable for them to have conflicts with her. Plus, she had always been careless. She couldn't tell if she would unintentionally make mistakes when they were there.

"The people in my family are very easy to get along with. It is just Claire that is a little unmanageable. You don't have to worry too much." Kevin patted her shoulder to comfort her. He understood that she was still young. Thus, she would panic. He would help her put her mind at ease for the next few days. He could always introduce everyone in his family to her little by little. That way, she wouldn't be too cautious.

"Claire? Is your sister's name Claire? She must be a very gentle girl given that name. Why do you say she's unruly?" Her mood went from bad to terrible. She had never heard that Kevin named or mentioned any about his family before. It was the reason why she didn't ask about it. The thought that she suddenly needed to meet them put her in a passive state.

Yes. Her name is Claire Gu. She is a little older than you. But she is not as sensible as you. So if she does something wrong in the future, could you excuse her small mistakes, please? After all, you are her sister-in-law, aren't you?" Kevin also didn't want to give Leena too much pressure. It was just that he knew that she would be insisting for that information anyway. His strategy was to emphasize how much more sensible she was over her sister, thus she would regard herself as someone older than Claire.

What are you implying? That I am her sister-in-law, and she should be afraid of me?" The thought worked on Leena. Seconds more and she was able to smile with confidence again.

"Leena, it is not as terrible as you think. Yes, it may be hard to get along with Claire. But she is not a bad girl. Relax! Don't be too nervous," he comforted her more. It was only after he observed Leena back to herself that Kevin shook his head and smiled. He just wanted her to know these things in advance. He didn't expect her to panic though. He would be more careful next time. He wouldn't want his actions to be counterproductive.

Chapter 914: Chapter 913: In The Moonlight (part one)

"I'm not nervous. But what if your parents don't like me?" Leena said to Kevin. To tell it accurately, she was only worried about what his parents' opinion would be. His sister was about the same age as her. They should have a lot in common and get along. In addition, Leena was agreeable and many people liked her. She had never argued with anybody else except for Justin, who was always picking on her.

"Listen to yourself. You sounded absolutely nervous. Don't worry. Although my father is strict, he is reasonable. My mother is amiable. There is no doubt that she will like you. There won't be a problem between you and her." Kevin was sure of it. His mother was the gentlest one in his family.

"Really? I hope you are not lying. I know nothing about your family and I am new at this 'Meet The Parents' thing. I am afraid that I'll blow it and your parents will hate me." She was about to meet her in-laws. Just the thought that she wasn't the princess of Leng family anymore but the daughter-in-law of Gu family made her pout. The change was too abrupt. She had some new roles to adapt to all of the sudden, a wife, a daughter-in-law, and a sister-in-law. On top of the heavy worry, she also felt the pressure from the overwhelming responsibilities. Was she capable of playing all these roles? She had doubts about it.

"Silly girl, I told you that you had me. What are you still worried about?" Kevin asked as he placed his hands on her shoulders. He gave her a resigned smile.

I don't want to put you in an awkward position. I'll figure out a way by myself." Leena took a deep breath as if to prepare herself for a tough trial. It had been said that it was the husband who was put between his mother and his wife that was in the most difficult position. She didn't want him to go through that.

"Atta girl. I have faith in you. You can do it." Accompanied by a sudden odd feeling rushing through him, Kevin's eyes gleamed as his gaze set on her pursed lips.

"Do I have something on my face?" Leena asked after she felt his warm gaze on her. Her hand instantly went to touch her face as she wondered if she had missed washing a spot during her bath.

"No. Your face is clean and pretty," Kevin said with his desire evident in his eyes. He was a normal man who had needs. He thought he had waited long enough and Leena should be ready to do the most intimate thing normal couples did by now.

Then why are you looking at me like that?" Leena averted her eyes from him. Kevin seemed to be extremely tender and enchanting tonight. It was as if he wanted something from her. She blushed uncontrolledly with that thought as her heart raced inside her chest.

"Leena, can we?" Kevin's stare turned even more intense. She had no way to back out. He had already waited long enough for her.

I..." Leena stammered as she tried to express herself. She raised her head to look at him. She was too smart to misunderstand his actions. She never expected him to pop the question so directly.

"I won't force you if you say no. So don't worry. I can always give you more time to know me." Kevin pressed his lips together tightly. Since he had promised her that he would respect her, he would fulfill his promise and wouldn't pressure her into doing anything. He could just take another cold shower to kill the need that was burning him.

Leena gave Kevin an ardent stare. Then without any word, she tiptoed, wrapped her arms around his shoulders and kissed him on his lips. She had been thinking of doing it since she came back. However, as a girl, she had restrained her emotions and hadn't taken action until he raised that question. Now she had a good reason to approach him.

Kevin was stunned by the kiss. Leena was not the type of girl who would do such a bold move. He froze in shock the moment her soft lips touched his. It took him a few seconds to recover from the beautiful surprise and gather himself. He closed his eyes, cupped her face, and took over the kiss.

Leena didn't want to conceal her feelings for Kevin anymore. Nor did she want to fight the fact that she was in love with him. She had decided to jump into this relationship with both feet, willing to give him both her body and her heart.

Kevin's gentle kiss was slow as it pressed on her skin. Every touch it made was like a breeze that caressed her heart. Love requires courage and she was never a coward in love. All she could wish for that moment was a long happy life with him. She was resolved to remain devoted to their marriage till she grew old, for better or worse.

With the clothes off, Leena's perfect figure was exposed to Kevin. Never had he thought that a sweet girl like her could have such an enticing body.

She was not like the woman he loved. Neither their eyes, their eyebrows, nor their figures were the same, and yet he was fascinated by her. The woman under him had completely occupied every fiber of his being. Both his heart and mind were hers and that very moment was just theirs.

"Leena, are you ready?" Kevin groaned heavily at her ear as he held back his urges. Beads of sweat were on his forehead.

"Yes." Leena nodded. Her face was flushed crimson. She was so nervous that she kept her head tilted, afraid to look at him. This was very different from the last time. They were both sober now. She felt shy.

"Relax. I'll be gentle," Kevin whispered and kissed her lips softly. The courageous and unyielding soldier had now turned into a gentle and warm man.

It had been a while since their first time. He positioned himself and kissed her one last time. And then it happened. They were one. Leena furrowed her brows when the pain of his invasion got her. It was relief that the pain didn't last long before it was replaced by pleasure. She moaned loudly with all the feelings it had stirred inside her heaving chest, sweet nervousness and ecstatic excitement.

Outside, the night was tranquil. The still curtain flapped after a breeze had visited it. The bright moon hung in the sky, affectionately spilling silver light on everything. After a while, as if afraid to disturb the two people in their bedroom, it slid behind the thick clouds. Leena's feeling for Kevin grew more in the midst of their intimacy. She didn't think she could leave this man anymore.

Kevin cherished her. It was miles away from how rough he had been last time. He was gentler at her. Tonight was their first lovemaking after they got married. He wanted everything to be perfect.

He could feel how much Leena loved him. Thus he told himself that he would be faithful to her no matter what. He would try his best to fall in love with her.

His senses were sharp. He could read how much she loved him on everything she did, be it her subtle movements or mild words. He wouldn't let her down.

Leena felt exhausted the moment they stopped. She didn't even have the strength to move her fingers.

Kevin smiled evilly and walked into the bathroom naked as if Leena wasn't there. His naked body made her face redder. Despite everything, she still wasn't used to them being this exposed to each other. Regrets came to Leena when she recalled her initiative. How come she couldn't control herself before him?

She knew Kevin didn't love her, but she would try to be a better woman for him. She was charming and she believed Kevin was an upright man. He had told her that he would eventually love her since they were married. Hence, she didn't care that she had fallen in love with him first. She would just wait for him to love her back.

Chapter 915: Chapter 914: In The Moonlight (part two)

"Kiddo, take a bath before going to sleep. It will make you feel better," Kevin said to Leena after his shower. He was standing by the bed with only a bath sheet on.

"But I don't want to move. I'm too tired." Leena shot him an accusing frown. Her lips were pouting as she looked at him with pitiful eyes. The message that it was all his fault was clearly written all over her face.

"Be a good girl. Have a bath first. It will take only a few minutes." The lovemaking had made them both sweat-drenched. He couldn't just let her sleep all sticky. Thus he insisted on her taking a bath.

Fine. Turn around. I'm going to put some clothes on," Leena said as she grabbed the sheets to prevent Kevin from seeing her body again.

Forget it. I'll just do it myself." As soon as he finished his words, Kevin bent over and carried her altogether with the covers. He walked into the bathroom without waiting for her to reply.

She was already in the bathroom even before she could scream. Kevin tore all her covers off and threw them aside. He put her in a bath full of water in a heartbeat.

"Kevin, are you crazy?" Leena was so flustered as she covered her chest with her arms.

Girl, I've seen everything. It's pointless to be shy right now." Kevin bent over to coil her hair and put the bathing cap on her head. Then he looked at her mischievously.

You're lustful." Leena felt that she was at a considerable loss. She had been too shy to see Kevin's nakedness and closed her eyes the whole course of their lovemaking while he had seen every part of hers.

"Yes, I am, but only before you. Are you going to take the bath alone or do you need my help?" Kevin asked as he added some essential oil to the water that could help her relax. He was just teasing her because he knew that she was too shy to take a bath while he was still there. He really had no intention of staying.

"I'm good. Now leave." Leena was still crossing her arms over her chest. Looking at him with pleading eyes, she hoped he could leave the bathroom as soon as possible. She could feel the heat on her face accumulating as if it was going to burst out bleeding any minute.

"Okay, I'm going. Just call me if you need any help." Kevin sounded happy and cocky. He retreated from the bathroom, all smiles.

The minute he was out of sight, Leena finally loosened her arms. The passionate lovemaking had left hickeys on her body. She looked at them with her lips twitching. She was feeling happy deep down inside her and at the same time, unsure about what the future would be.

Kevin let out a mild sigh as he picked some clothes for Leena from the wardrobe. He didn't go wild with joy the moment he found Leena loved him. In all honesty, what he felt back then was confusion instead. He would not have felt that guilty if she hadn't fallen for him. Now he was trapped, not knowing how to love Leena, nor was he even sure if he would learn to love her in the end.

The situation was making him feel a strong sense of loss. He was certain that he had feeling for her, but it couldn't be summed to love. He just liked her.

The night became quieter. That sense of loss was still with Kevin even after he had hugged Leena into sleep.

When the first light shattered the darkness, Kevin woke up on time as usual. He had originally planned to take an off for that day, but since he was going to see his family the next weekend, the break had been canceled.

He withdrew his arm from under Leena's head and pressed a kiss on her face. It was still too early. He got out of the bed quietly as he was worried that he might wake Leena up. Obviously, he had exhausted her the night before. She could use a good sleep.

He woke up at the same time every morning even without an alarm clock unless he was worn out. Last night's lovemaking made him more energetic. He was in a good mood until he got to the military base.

"Major General, you seem happy. What happened? Did some beautiful woman come on to you?" Daisy joked about him as soon as their meeting was over. She was holding a pile of files that needed to be handed out later. She remembered that he had left with Louisa the night before. Thus, she couldn't help teasing him.

You said it like that happens every day." Kevin rolled his eyes at Daisy. There were some files in his hands too.

"Tell me then. You have that smirk on your face all morning. What makes you so happy?" Daisy glanced at him. He was rarely in such a good mood. "Is it that obvious?" Kevin furrowed his eyebrows, afraid that everyone had noticed it.

Of course it is. Come on. Fire away. What's with that big smile?" Daisy asked as they were walking together. She assumed that there must have been something thrilling. He seemed unable to keep his mouth closed. He was still wearing his enchanting grin until that point.

"Didn't Leena call you? She's back." Kevin looked at Daisy in surprise. He had thought that Leena would have informed their friends of her return even though she hadn't told him in advance about it.

"What? Leena's back? When?" Daisy was excited about the news. She always liked Leena.

"She arrived home yesterday morning, but she didn't tell me. It was a big surprise for me when I got home last night." Kevin smiled. He was suddenly relieved out of something he couldn't name the moment he saw Leena last night. She gave him the type of thrill similar to how one felt when they finally grabbed what they had been chasing after for a long time.

"What's wrong with that girl? Why didn't she even bother to give me a call? I have always liked her." Daisy felt hurt. She might have been guilty of misunderstanding the relationship between Leena and Edward the first time they met, but she found what a lovely girl she was overtime.

"How about this? I ask her to call you later so that you won't feel so bad." Kevin smiled at Daisy. After giving it some thoughts, he realized that he wasn't obsessed with her anymore. The only thing left inside his chest for her was slight sadness.

No, I'd like to see how long it will take her to remember us." Edward hadn't mentioned anything about Leena's coming back. There was no doubt that he was unaware of it either. Daisy felt that Leena had forgotten all of them after she had got married.

"It must be because she was too busy to call you yesterday. Don't be mad. I think she will remember to call you later when she wakes up." Kevin assumed that Leena was still sleeping. It would be a while before she woke up. He was all over her and wasn't able to control himself from taking her many times last night.

Um... She's still sleeping? It's almost 10 a.m! Was she drawing designs last night?" Daisy knew Leena was a well-known fashion designer, but Kevin knew nothing about it.

"Um... well..." Kevin felt embarrassed as he failed to find a way to answer Daisy's question. Would it be fine to tell her the real reason why Leena was still sleeping? He didn't think so.
