Chapter 41 He Lost

The lawyer barely spoke. Tessa single-handedly handled her defense.

s

She submitted all the evidence to the judge. There was the surveillance footage of Queenie abducting Ysabel, the screenshots of her messages to Hector, and the audio recording of Queenie's threats over the phone.

Clement's expression darkened.

He had no idea there was a kidnapping involved.

"Queenie, what the hell is going on?" If she had told him earlier, he could have prepared. But now, caught off guard, he had no idea how to mount a defense.

"Uncle Clement, aren't you the best lawyer in Navoris? You have to help me! I don't want the death penalty!" She had always believed he could save her.

"You!" Clement was so furious he nearly exploded.

At that moment, Raymond stepped in. "Your Honor, my client is just a 17-year-old student. The plaintiff kidnapped her classmate. She was merely acting in self-defense. If students can get away with kidnapping and making threats, what limits will they have in the future?"

"Landon, this girl is something else!" The speaker was Hudson Jones, Montedra's most formidable werewolf lawyer and a close friend of Landon.

"Looks like she doesn't need you after all. You can go."

"Alright, you're the boss. Whatever you say." The case was crystal clear; Hudson had no reason to stay.

Before leaving, he couldn't help but remark, "This girl was born to be a lawyer."

Landon didn't bother responding.

Tessa had many sides to her. In court, she outshone most professionals.

And she was still just a teenager.

The trial concluded, and the judges withdrew to deliberate.

Raymond looked at Tessa in admiration. "Tessie, which university are you applying to?"

"I'm not sure yet." She had too many options.

"Become a lawyer! You'd be the best."

"Raymond, you can do it too. You're just going through a rough patch. Don't lose sight of why you started." She knew his struggles; that's why she insisted he take this case.

"Yeah, I know. I won't give up." He had been ready to quit. In a place like Navoris, dominated by power and privilege, someone like him had no place.

III

But this case changed his perspective.

"If you ever need anything, come to me."

The verdict was announced. Queenie was sentenced to five years for kidnapping and extortion.

Even as the cuffs snapped around her wrists, she remained in shock.

"Uncle Clement, help me! I can't go to prison!"

"Uncle Clement..."

Tessa, victorious, spared Queenie only a cold glance as he was dragged away.

Five years was the price Queenie paid for abducting Ysabel and slapping her.

Ysabel belonged to her circle now. Anyone who touched Ysabel was making an enemy of her.

Clement stood frozen. I lost? I actually lost to Raymond. No, I lost to a teenage girl.

s

Queenie's desperate screams echoed through the courtroom. She was terrified. She couldn't go to prison.

Only when the officers escorted her out did silence return.

"You studied law?" Clement couldn't help but ask Tessa. The fact that he had lost still gnawed at him.

"I read a few books. That's all."

Clement still found it hard to believe. Just a few books?

"If you're not satisfied, feel free to appeal."

With that, Tessa turned and left with Ysabel.

The moment they stepped outside, a swarm of reporters rushed toward her.

"Are you the infamous third daughter of the Sinclair family, the one who was expelled from the Frostmoon Pack? May I ask..."

Before the reporter could finish, a dozen werewolf bodyguards in matching suits blocked them.

"Ms. Sinclair, please get in the car."

Tessa led Ysabel forward, only to see Landon seated in a sleek, silver-gray Lamborghini.

She hesitated for a moment.

Landon? He came to the trial?

Realizing this, warmth stirred in her chest.

This man always followed through on his word.

Even though she could handle everything herself, he was always there, standing silently behind her, ready to catch her if she ever fell.

Landon dropped the two of them off at Wisteria Apartment and was about to leave. After all, he had plenty of official duties to handle, he had only stopped by the rial midw

If anything unexpected happened, he could have his close friend, Hudson, step in to argue the case for Tessa and Ysabel.

But surprisingly, Tessa handled the debate brilliantly of her own, defeating Navoris' top lawyer and sending Queenie to prison.

The girl he had his eyes on was definitely no ordinary person.

"You did great today." Landon couldn't help but praise essa before finally leaving.

Ysabel, however, was puzzled. "Tessie, you were the one who won the debate, so why does Uncle Landon look so proud? Anyone would think he was the one in court!"

Tessa chuckled softly and walked into the apartment.

Ysabel followed closely behind, eager to please. "Tessie, you must be exhausted! Let me give you a back mássage!"

"I'm not tired."

"Then you must be thirsty! I'll get you some water."

Watching her bustle around, Tessa found it amusing.

She was growing more and more fond of this bubbly girl.

Clearly, someone like Ysabel had grown up in a home filled with love.

For a member of an alpha family, being a wolf-less werewolf was a disgrace, especially in Montedra's most powerful pack, Nightshade.

Yet Ysabel's family never abandoned her. Even though she was weak, they had always protected and cherished her, shaping her into the bright and innocent girl she was today.

Unlike her own family.

Aside from her grandpa, no one had ever treated her like family.

Sometimes, she envied this carefree, sweet girl.

And she would continue to protect that innocence.

After a nap, Ysabel got ready to head to school with Tessa.

But Tessa shook her head.

Chapter 49 I Can Do It

"What's wrong? Are you feeling unwell?" Ysabel immediately asked, concerned.

"No, I just have something to take care of this afternoon Help me ask Mr. Hamilton for a leave."

"What is it? Do you need me to come with you?"

"No, I can handle it alone."

"Tessie, you're not planning something crazy again, are you? Take me with you!" Ysabel's eyes lit up, clearly thrilled by the idea of an adventure.

"It's official business." Lina had assigned her to find Richard, and she had already delayed it long enough.

"Fine!"

Ysabel headed to school alone while Tessa took a cab to the Navoris Special Forces Division.

"Hello, I'd like to see Captain Simpson." As soon as she got out of the taxi, Tessa approached the guard on duty.

"Little girl, what do you need with Captain Simpson? He's a busy man and doesn't have time."

"It's fine. I can wait."

"Alright, go on in. Captain Simpson isn't here right now but I'll let him know that when he gets back." The guard didn't make things difficult for her.

Tessa entered the special forces building and found a seat to wait.

After more than two hours, the legendary Captain Simpson finally arrived.

"You were looking for me?"

A young man in a special forces uniform walked up to her.

"You're Ethan Simpson?" Tessa tilted her head, sizing him up.

He was young, but strong. No wonder he was the head of the criminal investigation team.

"I am. And you are?"

Ethan studied her in return.

He didn't sense a wolf's presence in her. She was just a regular teenage girl who was not worth his time.

"I'm Tessa Sinclair."

Tessa stood up, not intending to waste time. She got straight to the point. "You're tracking Mr. Young's location, aren't you? Let me try."

She spoke carelessly, not planning to reveal her identity as Phantom, the hacker.

Ethan frowned.

Richard's case had been a headache for a month, and he hadn't had a full night's sleep since. He wasn't in the mood to entertain her.

"Captain Simpson, I said I can do it." Tessa's patience was running thin.

"Little girl..."

"Don't you want to find Mr. Young? What's the harm in letting me try?"

Ethan had assumed she was just messing around, but when he met her unwavering gaze, he hesitated.

"Follow me."

He led her into the tech department.

As he watched the exhausted tech team scrambling around, Ethan suddenly questioned his own judgment.

Why did I bring an ordinary teenage girl here?

He was about to send her away, but something about her calm, composed demeanor stopped him. This girl had an inexplicable aura that made people believe she could accomplish anything.

The technicians had already been busy for a month, yet no matter what they did, they couldn't find any trace of Richard.

"Captain Simpson." The technicians looked up when Captain Simpson arrived, gave him a brief greeting, then went back to work.

Richard's importance was self-evident. Every extra minute meant more danger for him. They had to move fast.

"Get up." Tessa spoke to one of the technicians.

"Little girl, go play somewhere else. I'm busy." The technician didn't even glance at her.

"Get up." Ethan spoke. The technician had no choice but to stand.

"Captain Simpson, where did you find such a pretty little girl?" The technician finally looked at Tessa.

Since when did Captain Simpson mix personal matters with work? Bringing a stranger into the tech department and letting her do as she pleased?

Tessa ignored him. She sat down and started typing rapidly, entering lines of code.

The technician was stunned by what he saw. That speed and skill put her in a league of her own.

The other senior programmers were also dumbfounded. Is this girl for real? She is still wearing a high school uniform!

Ethan, who had been standing with his arms crossed, had only let her try on a whim.

But now, watching Tessa work, he couldn't help but feel a glimmer of anticipation.

Chewing gum as she worked, Tessa broke through firewall after firewall, finally locking onto a location.

Staring at the marked area on the screen, she frowned. This was as close as she could pinpoint it. "Captain Simpson, this is the best I can do. The rest is out of my hands." Tessa stood up, ready to leave. "Are you sure this is the place?" The area was already small, Before this, they had nothing at all.

"This is as far as the trace goes."

"Little girl, what's your name?" The technician who had dismissed her earlier now spoke with nothing but admiration.

Everyone here was one of Navoris's top IT tracking specialists. They had spent over a month without progress, yet this ordinary-looking girl had pinpointed Richard's location in less than half an hour. Who the hell is she?

"I'm Tessa Sinclair."

"Thanks for today. Once I bring Mr. Young back, I'll treat you to a meal."

Ethan immediately gathered his team. The trace indicated that Richard was being held in a hidden military base in Yalvaria. He had to go there immediately.

This time, he would bring Richard back.

"Ms. Sinclair, I'm Simon Davis. May I ask you a few questions?"

"Sure."

Tessa had been about to leave, but now she sat back down.

The senior programmers, setting aside their pride, asked her several tough questions. She answered them all, and for those they still didn't understand, she demonstrated step by step.

"Any other questions?"

"Ms. Sinclair, you're incredible." Simon couldn't help but praise her.

"Not bad." She shrugged. "If there's nothing else, I'll be going."

"Ms. Sinclair, where are you headed? I'll give you a ride Simon had never truly admired anyone before. He had always considered himself one of the best. But standing before Tessa, he realized how small his skills were in comparison.

"No need. I can get back on my own." She preferred to keep a low profile. Tessa left, and the senior programmers still hadn't recovered from their shock.

"I really got crushed by a high schooler today."

Their skills were top-tier. If they weren't, they wouldn't be working with Ethan.

But today, they had been utterly outclassed.

"There's always someone better out there. That girl is the real deal."

"If only she'd join our team." Simon sounded hopeful.

"The girl is just a high schooler!" Too many people wanted someone like her, and there was no way they could compete.

"We have Captain Simpson! Why not let Captain Simpson win the girl over? That works too!" Simon thought his idea was brilliant.

"Even though Tessa doesn't have a wolf, her exceptional IT skills alone make her a great match for Captain Simpson. For the sake of strengthening our team, Captain Simpson should take the initiative!"

The others fell silent.

"But Tessa is too young!" Ethan was indeed impressive. He had become the head detective of Navoris at just 28 years old..

But he was a full 12 years older than that girl!

Simon's idea was absolutely insane.

"It's not impossible, though." As long as Ethan wanted it nothing was impossible.

Tessa had no clue what they were plotting. Once she finished her task, she took a cab back to school.

That evening, she arrived at class right on time.

By now, everyone knew that Queenie had been thrown in jail because of Tessa, and many were a little afraid of her.

Ysabel saw Tessa enter and immediately handed her a bottle of water.

"Tessie, don't mind them. They're just jealous of you." Ysabel, worried she might be upset, quickly tried to comfort her.

Tessa twisted the cap open and took a sip.

Class hadn't even started when Queenie's mother arrived.

"Tessa, Queenie's mom is looking for you," a classmate by the window called out.

Tessa got up and stepped outside.

The moment Queenie's mother saw Tessa, she hesitated.

"What is it?"

Tessa's tone was indifferent, as if the woman in front of her had nothing to do with her.

"Tessa, I was wrong. Queenie was wrong. Please, have mercy and let her go! She's still young. If she goes to prison now, her life will be ruined." The arrogance in Marilyn's voice was gone, replaced by desperation. She never expected that a girl with no background could overpower her brother in court and have

"Madam Locke, this isn't up to me. Queenie broke the w. A few words from me won't get her released!

Even in the werewolf world, the law still ruled.

Marilyn, no longer caring about appearances, suddenly dropped to her knees before Tessa.

"I'm begging you; let Queenie go!"

Tessa frowned. What is she doing?

"I'll give you anything you want, as long as you agree to let her go." Then, as if remembering something, Marilyn added, "Didn't you get kicked out of the Frostmoon Pack? If you like, Iceclaw Pack can take you in!"

There was a hint of arrogance in her voice, as if she were offering charity.

Tessa nearly laughed out loud.

Is being accepted by a mid-sized pack really something to be proud of?

She might have been exiled from Frostmoon Pack, but she had long since gained a loyal following.

If she wanted, a single call would bring her a powerful and united pack.

But she was used to being alone. She had never built her own pack, only establishing the Lightwing Order, a network of elite werewolf hackers, where she operated entirely online.

If it weren't for her grandpa, she wouldn't have even returned to the Sinclair family of Frostmoon Pack.

"I don't need anything, and this isn't something I can decide." If you break the law, you face the consequences.

Marilyn, seeing that even after lowering herself, Tessa still refused, snapped.

She shot to her feet, pointing a finger at Tessa's face as she shouted, "How can you be so heartless at your age? What did Queenie do to deserve prison? You're just a worthless girl without a wolf; don't think knowing a little law makes you untouchable! If you dare to go against the Locke family, I'll make sure you won't even see your death coming!"

As she spoke, Marilyn raised a hand to strike Tessa, but Tessa caught her wrist in an instant, her eyes narrowing dangerously.

"I've already given you plenty of respect by standing here and listening to you for this long. Stop going on and on like a shrew. If you're unhappy with the verdict, you can appeal. Don't waste time spouting useless nonsense here."

Tessa had never been patient to begin with, and now, she had completely run out.

Marilyn was about to make a move, but someone yanked her back so hard that she almost fell to the ground.

"Who the hell..." Marilyn steadied herself, ready to curs at whoever had pulled her. But the moment she saw the newcomer, she didn't dare utter a word.

Who is this man?

The pressure radiating from him was overwhelming. Just meeting his gaze left her paralyzed, unable to move, unable to speak.

This deep-seated fear, one that came from her very bones, was the absolute suppression of a superior- ranked wolf.

Landon had heard that Tessa had taken the afternoon off, so he came to check on her at the school. He hadn't expected to witness this scene.

His cold gaze locked onto Marilyn as he unleashed his Alpha aura without hesitation and ordered, "Don't ever appear in front of her again. If you do, I'll make sure the Locke family is completely wiped out."

This outcome was already the lightest punishment they could've received after trying to kidnap Ysabel. Marilyn's legs trembled violently, and she couldn't even form a single word.

At that moment, Ysabel stepped outside and immediately spotted Landon. She rushed over to complain, "Uncle Landon! This woman keeps bullying Tessie!" Landon was already a man of breathtaking beauty, with a tall, perfectly built frame and an aura of dominance. The moment he appeared, he became the center of attention.

Even the girls in the classroom were leaning against the windows, trying to get a better look at him.

Hearing that Queenie's mother had been bullying Tessa, the students were all stunned.

Tessa is so strong. Who could possibly bully her?

With Landon's single, dominance-charged command-Get lost!"-Marilyn bolted in terror, as if lingering even a second longer would mean being ripped apart by him.

The evening class was Freya Knox's physics lesson. When she arrived and took in the chaotic scene, she immediately opened her mouth, poised to reprimand

However, the moment she saw Landon, the words caught in her throat.

Finished.

Hearing the teacher's question, he responded politely, Miss, nice to meet you. I'm Tessa's guardian."

Ysabel was stunned. Isn't Uncle Landon my guardian? Sine when did he become Tessie's?

At the mention of Tessa's name, Freya frowned slightly

"Miss, please take good care of Tessa in the future," Landon said politely.

"Of course." Freya wasn't particularly fond of Tessa, a student with a terrible reputation, but in front of this man, she simply couldn't bring herself to refuse.- "Hmph! Not bullying Tessa would already be a miracle, Ysabel muttered under her breath.

"Class is starting. Everyone, get inside," Freya called out to the lingering students. Tessa was about to follow them in when Landon caught her hand.

Feeling his grip, she stopped and turned to face him.

"Sir, do you need something else?" Freya was still keeping a close eye on Landon's every move.

"Miss, I just need a few words with Tessa."

Reluctantly, Freya stepped into the classroom, stealing one last glance at Landon. After all, no one could resist admiring something so captivating.

Once the students and teachers were inside, only Tessa and Landon remained on the field. He stood there, silently watching her, while she showed no impatience.

The breeze lifted strands of her hair, and in that moment, she stood there, effortlessly radiant and an undeniable force of brilliance.

Landon's gaze softened unconsciously. Then, in a voice filled with warmth, he said, "Take a walk with me."
