

Chapter 38

"I will see you after the lecture?" Simon wrapped his arms around Athena. "Sure. Don't forget to get my cold coffee, okay?" Athena looked at him sternly before both of them broke out into smiles.

"Stop it, will you? Everyone is looking," Athena tried to pull away.

"And? I don't remember when that was my problem. It's not like I am having an extramarital affair. I am loving my to-be wife," Simon rubbed his nose on Athena's, and the latter blushed before pushing him softly.

"Fine. I will leave once you give me a kiss," Simon pulled her tightly, making her bump into him.

"I will be late for the lecture. I have to go now," Athena kissed his cheeks, and though Simon wasn't satisfied with what he got, he could see she was getting all red from shyness and decided to stop messing with her.

"Hey, how are you doing?" Andrew caught up to Athena, and Simon nodded at him before he turned around and left when he got a message from Fabian about something regarding rogues.

"What was that all about?" Andrew asked, and Athena squinted her brows. "What?"

"I heard about the rogue attack on the pack. You asked Simon to let go of the rogue, no? You know you shouldn't be siding with the rogues when you are about to become the Luna of the pack, right? It will affect your image negatively," Andrew said, and Athena sighed.

"I asked him to let go of the rogue because that was the right thing to do, Andrew. Even Simon agreed with that. She was pregnant and only wanted to meet her mate. Besides, the rogue is sent to the rehabilitation center. If they behaved properly, they would be allowed to live and killed if not. I can't stake three loves for the sake of my image," Athena shrugged.

Hearing Athena's words, Andrew sighed. She was the perfect Luna, wasn't she? How unlucky of him to have not found her before she became Simon's or anyone's mate.

Seeing Athena entering the class, Andrew turned around to go to his corridor when his gaze met Savannah's judgmental one.

"Stop it before you regret it," Savannah said before leaving, referring to his increasing feelings for Athena even when she was marked now.

"You have got a nice tattoo," Athena heard a voice, and she turned to look at Melony.

"I know, right? I was thrilled to get this on my neck. Maybe I would get some dragon tattoo on my arms too. Do you think that would look nice on me?"

Athena asked casually.

"So you are one of them?" Melony asked, and her question caught Athena off-guard.

"What do you mean?"

"I have seen many people here with different wolf tattoos on their necks. It feels like a cult thing," Melony shrugged, and Athena looked at her for a few seconds before she opened her upper button and pulled her collar to the side.

"I just love this wolf thing going around. Look," Athena said, and Melony widened her eyes when she noticed the tattoo of a python wrapped around a wolf..

"Wow, this is even more beautiful," Melony mumbled as Athena buttoned her shirt again.

"Anyway, here. This was under your desk when I arrived. I figured someone might take it away since these people have been targeting you. That's why I kept it with me," Melony brought out an envelope from her bag before slapping it on Athena's desk.

"You don't have to worry about the targeting stuff. I have got it sorted," w@w.N@©eIwOrm.c@m

Athena mumbled absentmindedly, before she opened the envelope, a letter falling from inside.

"Well, look at this. Is our girl receiving letters now? What could it be?" One of the human followers of Savannah, who was still unaware of what was happening, took the letter before Athena could pick it up, and Athena gazed at the girl.

"These are the reasons I hate humans sometimes, Celine sighed before she laid back in annoyance.

"If I were you, I wouldn't mess with myself right now," Athena stood from her place before she walked to the girl.

"Well, bad news. You aren't me. I am not pathetic like you," the girl chuckled along with her friends, but the werewolves in the room kept quiet, immediately sensing the alpha powers of Athena, which were threatening to take over, not to mention how they were aware of her relationship with Simon now.

"Give it back before I lose my patience. Please," Athena sighed, wanting to know what was written. She already had an idea of what it was about, but she still wanted to see it.

"Well, these empty threats won't-" The girl started, but Athena walked to her in long strides before she wrapped her hand around the girl's neck, lifting her in the air.

"I am in no mood to mess around. Give me the letter," Athena snatched the letter from the human girl, and everyone gasped at her.

Hurling humans wasn't allowed in the college in any way.

".. What are you -?" The girl started gasping for air as she flailed her legs, and Athena smiled.

"Next time you try to mess with someone, make sure to check they are not in a bad mood," Athena warned before slapping the envelope on the girl's face and leaving the class with her bag.

Opening the letter, she read the content of it before crumbling and throwing it in the dustbin.

[If you want to know about the rogues attacking the Black Scar pack and

Cole, come to the east side of the forest near the lake.]

The message said.

Something was different about this letter. She could sense it.

Athena had been receiving letters in the past, and none of them were any good. Each one of them was about the same thing.

Whoever this person was, he/she wanted Athena to stay away from Simon. She thought this could be the other letter from that person since this was the first time Athena returned to college after being marked by Simon.

However, this was nowhere near anything like the past letters.

Was this person really trying to help her now? But why? There is only one way to find out about it. Go and see for yourself. Athena nodded before she looked around to ensure no one saw her.

Jumping over the wall of the back side of the University, Athena ran towards the east side of the forest to the lake.

"You know, if I were you, I would at least let someone know about this. We are not exactly in a safe world where we can meet anyone without worrying about anything. What if this is a trap?" Celine rolled her eyes, and Athena hummed.

"And that's why I have sent a message to Fabian that I am going to interact with some rogues. They have the lab period, and phones won't be allowed.

The lab period will be over in half an hour. And that's enough time for me to find out what this is all about. If I get in danger, they would reach here in time to save me," Athena shrugged.

"You are becoming more quick-witted with each passing day. I bet whose influence is this," Celine huffed proudly.

"I don't know, but it's not yours or Simon's. Maybe I was born like this?" Athena smirked when Celine rolled her eyes before she reached the lake. "What the hell?" Athena murmured when she sensed not one or two but more than ten werewolves. And this wasn't the shocking thing. What shocked her was the presence of the pack members with the rogues.

She was already so close. They must've already sensed her. There is no point in going back. It was better to see what was going on. w@w.©©eIwOrm.c@m

Stopping a few feet away from the three rogues standing near the lake, Athena tried to look around to find the remaining hiding rogues and pack members.

Honestly, if it had been some low-rank members, she would've guessed that the members were betraying their packs, but how can she ignore a beta and Gamma?

Who was this pack? And what was their intention in calling her here?

Earlier, she had thought these were just rogues who wanted to help and couldn't confront Simon, or they wanted to threaten her. But the presence of the pack members was completely surprising.

If the pack wanted to help, they would've reached Simon, but the fact that they called out a rogue means they are here for something different.

"So, tell me. Why are the rogues attacking the Black Scar pack or about Cole that you mentioned?" Athena asked, looking at her watch.

There were still ten minutes before Simon's lab period was over.

"We actually wanted to see the face of the rogue who has two alphas whining over her," one of the rogues said, and Athena raised her brows.

"So you are trying to tell me you wasted my time by calling me here just because you wanted to see how pretty I am? Anyway, you have seen me. Is there anything you wanted to talk about?" Athena maintained her cool.

"Stay away from Cole and Simon if you want to live your life freely," The man with the beta vibes stepped forward from behind a tree, and Athena tried her best to remember if she had met him anywhere.

He looked familiar but from where?

First, the letters were about staying away from Simon, and now Cole too?

"And who are you to tell me that? I am sure, as a beta, you are not dumb enough to not recognize who I am. Are you threatening me?" Athena asked boldly.

She could see the shock on the guy's face when she called him 'beta'.

"I can understand why you are trying to keep me away from Simon. You w@w.n@©eIwOrm.c@m don't want his pack to become even stronger. But Cole? What do I get to do with him?" Athena asked.

"Don't act stupid. We know what kind of woman you are. First, you seduced Alpha Cole, and now you have Alpha Simon in your palms. However, it won't be for long. We will end this threat once and all," the rogue said.

"You are here to kill me. So all of this was indeed a trap. My wolf won,"

Athena mumbled as if she was talking to herself, and it agitated the rogues who thought she was thinking lowly of them.

"Don't be so smug, woman. Do you think there are only a few of us?" The rogue smirked.

"Of course not. I know there are quite a few of you. I am smug because I know Alpha Simon will be here soon. Since I have him in the palm of my hands, do you think he would let me out of his sight for long?" Athena looked at him blankly before she stepped forward.

"But you know what? I don't need him to deal with you. I am more than enough," Athena cracked the bones in her neck before she grabbed the rogue with the collar,

"If I were you, I wouldn't go against the two most powerful alphas. Whoever has sent you, she didn't tell you about me, did she?" Athena asked, naturally believing it was the lady boss.

"I am the daughter of the alpha of the warriors. And right now, I feel challenged. So to quench my thirst, I will drink your blood," Athena exaggerated a bit more to tell them she still had the upper hand even when she knew she could get into serious trouble here.

"Stop exaggerating, Athena. If they start fighting us, I won't come out to save your arse then, Celine yawned from inside Athena, and Athena's gaze immediately dropped.

"You have a way of bailing out in the end, don't you?" Athena left the rogue's collar before she took out her dagger and sliced his palm, letting the blood drop.

The time was already up, and Simon must already be on his way to come here. This smell of blood will help him know where everyone is.

"I can feel Alpha Simon and his pack members in the forest. Can you? If I were you, I would leave," Athena said, and the beta looked at someone in the distance before nodding, and soon all the pack members changed into their wolves and left, making Athena try to catch anything that could tell her what pack they belonged to.

However, as she was distracted, one of the rogues took out his knife. w@w.n@©eIwOrm.c@m

Athena caught something moving from the corner of her eyes, and seeing the knife, she barely dodged as the knife plunged straight through the side of her right hand, making her wince in pain.

"What are you doing? Now is not the time. Even they left," the rogue Athena had hurt, winced.

"Do you want me to let her go after she hurts you?" The rogue asked, and in normal times Athena would've clapped at his loyalty but not right now when she was the one getting hurt.

"Let's go now," The other rogue said.

"Not now. She can't do anything, brother. Look at her. She couldn't even dodge a knife properly. We can get her and sell her in the market-" the rogue couldn't complete his words when Athena took out her other knife and plunged it straight through the rogue's abdomen.

"Commendable," Athena smirked.

"What I hate most is people talking about me in front of me like I am not even there," Athena twisted the dagger in the rogue's stomach, making the third rogue run away in fear as Athena watched the second rogue's expression turn sour.

"And another thing is, I am no heroine. I am a devil in disguise," Athena kicked the rogue away before she looked at his brother.

"Are you waiting for Alpha Simon to come and catch you? Chop! Chop! Get lost. Also, there is this drug on the market which can fasten the healing process. It's called Antidote EIX. You can give that to him, and he will get better," Athena wiped her hands as she saw the rogue taking away his brother hurriedly.

"However, there are some side effects," Athena whispered to herself before shrugging as if she was the most innocent girl who didn't do anything even after knowing what was happening.
