New Lives

Kayden Lee's phone rattled to life as he was driving home. The screen lit up with a message from his mother, Jessica Lee. Kayden sighed and, fearing a lecture about his late curfew, decided to ignore it. He had been out with his friends, Ethan Tan and Ryan Wong, and had lost track of time. He knew his mother would be worried, but he was also tired of her constant nagging.

When he arrived home, Kayden's mother was waiting for him at the door. "Kayden, where have you been? I've been calling you for hours!" she exclaimed, her voice filled with concern and frustration.

Kayden rolled his eyes and muttered, "I'm sorry, Mom. I lost track of time." He knew that his mother was only trying to look out for him, but he couldn't help feeling annoyed by her overprotectiveness.

Jessica sighed and shook her head. "You need to be more responsible, Kayden. You're not a child anymore. You have to start thinking about your future."

Kayden felt a surge of anger at his mother's words. He was tired of being treated like a child and of his mother's constant criticism. He stormed past her and went to his room, slamming the door behind him.

As he sat on his bed, he heard his mother knocking on the door. "Kayden, please open the door. We need to talk," she said, her voice softer now.

Kayden ignored her and turned up the music in his room, drowning out her words. He knew that he was being childish, but he didn't care. He was tired of feeling like he was never good enough for his mother.

Hours passed, and Kayden finally emerged from his room. He found his mother sitting on the couch, looking worried and tired. She looked up at him and said, "I'm glad you're home safe. I was so worried about you."

Kayden felt a pang of guilt in his chest. He knew that he had been selfish and had worried his mother unnecessarily. He sat down next to her and said, "I'm sorry, Mom. I didn't mean to worry you."

Jessica smiled and hugged him tightly. "I'm just glad you're okay. I love you, Kayden."

Kayden hugged her back and said, "I love you too, Mom."

From that day on, Kayden and his mother began to communicate more openly and honestly with each other. They learned to compromise and to understand each other's perspectives. Kayden realized that his mother's nagging was not because she didn't trust him, but because she cared about him deeply.

Kayden's relationship with his friends also began to change. He started to spend more time with them and to be more responsible with his curfew. He also started to help around the house more and to be more respectful of his mother's rules.

Kayden's transformation did not go unnoticed by his friends. Ethan and Ryan both commented on how much more mature he had become. They also noticed that he was more responsible and more respectful of his mother.

Kayden's mother was also proud of the changes in her son. She knew that he was finally growing up and becoming the man she had always hoped he would be.

One day, Kayden's mother asked him to go for a walk with her. As they walked, she said, "I'm so proud of you, Kayden. You've come a long way since you were a little boy."

Kayden smiled and said, "Thanks, Mom. I'm proud of you too."

They walked in silence for a few minutes, enjoying the fresh air and the sunshine. Then, Kayden's mother said, "I've been thinking about your future. You're going to graduate from high school soon, and you need to start thinking about what you want to do with your life."

Kayden sighed. He had been dreading this conversation. He knew that his mother was right, but he didn't want to think about the future. He was content with his life as it was.

"I don't know, Mom," he said. "I'm not sure what I want to do yet."

"That's okay," his mother said. "You don't have to decide right now. But you need to start thinking about it. You have so much potential, Kayden. I don't want you to waste it."

Kayden nodded. He knew that his mother was only trying to help him, but he still felt overwhelmed. He didn't want to disappoint her, but he also didn't want to make a decision that he would regret later.

They walked in silence for a few more minutes. Then, Kayden's mother said, "I'm sorry if I've been nagging you too much. I just want you to be happy and successful."

Kayden looked at his mother and saw the love and concern in her eyes. He realized that she was only trying to do what was best for him.

"It's okay, Mom," he said. "I understand. I'll start thinking about my future."

His mother smiled and hugged him tightly. "That's all I ask," she said. "I love you, Kayden."

"I love you too, Mom," Kayden said.

Kayden and his mother walked home together. He was more determined than ever to make his mother proud.

Chapter 2

Many years later, Kayden Lee sat in his office, looking out at the bustling city below. He was a successful businessman, the CEO of a company that he had founded himself. He had come a long way from the boy who had been afraid to disappoint his mother.

Kayden's phone rang, and he answered it without looking away from the window. "Hello, Mom," he said.

"Kayden, it's me," his mother's voice said. "I'm just calling to check in on you. I haven't heard from you in a few days."

Kayden felt a pang of guilt. He had been so busy with work that he had neglected to call his mother. "I'm sorry, Mom," he said. "I've been really busy. But I'm doing well. How are you?"

"I'm fine," his mother said. "But I'm worried about you. You're working too hard. You need to take some time for yourself."

Kayden sighed. He knew that his mother was right, but he didn't want to admit it. "I'll try," he said. "But I have a lot of responsibilities."

"I know you do," his mother said. "But you're also human. You need to rest and relax sometimes."

Kayden promised his mother that he would take a break soon. They talked for a few more minutes, and then Kayden hung up the phone.

He turned back to the window and looked out at the city. He thought about his mother's words and realized that she was right. He had been so focused on his work that he had forgotten about the things that were important to him.

Kayden decided that he would take a vacation. He would go somewhere where he could relax and spend time with his family. He knew that his mother would be happy to hear that he was taking her advice.

Kayden's phone rang again
